Brookhart Heads Daugherty Probe Committee

INQUIRY TO EQUAL SCALDING TEAPOT FOR SENSATIONS

Committee in Charge of Hearings Is Brookhart, Moses, Jones, Wheeler and Ashurst.

DAUGHERTY'S COUNSEL WOULD CROSS-EXAMINE

Scope of Probe Limited Only by Sky Under Terms of Resolution Passed by Acclamation.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Washington, March 1.—Headed by a republican insurgent of the La Follette group, Senator Brookhart, of Iowa, a special senate committee will begin an investigation Monday of Attorney General Daugherty and his administration of the department of justice.

The inquiry, expected to rival the oil investigation in its ramifications, was ordered late today by the senate in adopting the resolution of Senator Wheeler, democrat, Montana. The vote was 66 to 1, Senator Elkins, republican, West Virginia, standing alone in opposition.

The choice of Senator Brookhart for chairman came in a spectacular climax to two days of bitter debate. He was nominated by Senator La Follette, of Wisconsin, leader of the republican insurgents, after having been selected originally by Senator Wheeler.

Regulars Abandon Fight.

The regular republican organization abandoned its efforts to retain control of the committee and contented itself with nominating Senators Moses, New Hampshire, and Jones, Washington, while Senator Robinson, Arkansas, the democratic leader, nominated Senators Wheeler and Ashurst, Arizona, as committeemen. No other nominations were forthcoming. After a long and dramatic pause the slate, as agreed upon by Senator Wheeler after conferences with Senators La Follette and Robinson, went through without a roll call. Privately, republican leaders said that they regarded it as useless to oppose the insurgent-democratic coalition.

After adoption of the Wheeler resolution, attorneys for the attorney general, Paul Howland, of Cleveland, and former Senator George E. Chamberlain, of Oregon, sent formal letters to each member of the special committee requesting the privilege of being present at all hearings, of examining all witnesses, of presenting independent evidence, of having processes issued for witnesses and of presenting oral and written arguments. They have assurances of the assistance of every agency and facility of the department of justice.

Chairman Brookhart said tonight

Quinn Denounces Men Who Stole From Disabled

Legion Will Not Rest Until Guilty Are Punished, Says National Head.

The American Legion will not rest until the men who grafted at the expense of disabled ex-service men have been brought before the bar of justice, it was declared Saturday night by John R. Quinn, national commander of the American Legion and guest of honor at a banquet of Argonne Post No. 1 at the Capital City club.

He bitterly attacked Charles R. Forbes, former head of the veterans' bureau, and other high officials of the bureau whose names he did not call, for their alleged dishonesty in the administration of veterans' affairs, particularly in connection with the letting of contracts for the erection of veterans' hospitals.

The national commander reviewed the activities and achievements of the American Legion, and briefly touched on its future program. Today, he said, there are 14 men in the employ of the legion stationed throughout the country to assist ex-service men in presenting claims for compensation

Groesbeck Looms For Denby Place At Head of Navy

Governor of Michigan Confers With Coolidge on Arrival in Capital.

Washington, March 1.—Governor Groesbeck, of Michigan, was added today to the list of those understood to be under consideration by President Coolidge for appointment as secretary of the navy in succession to Edwin Denby, who will retire March 10.

The Michigan governor arrived in Washington today and white house officials said it was expected he would confer with the president.

Governor Groesbeck has several times been mentioned in connection with possible vacancies in the attorney generalship. Although it is generally believed that Mr. Daugherty will retire at the conclusion of the senate investigation, it is not thought the president would desire to consider the filling of a vacancy to occur at some indefinite future date.

OIL TIDE SWELLS TO LAP THRESHOLD OF WHITE HOUSE

Slemp's Little Trip to Florida and McLean's Private Wire May Involve Coolidge.

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER

Washington, March 1.—The backwash from the oil scandal is lapping up closer and closer to the white house, and there are distinct fears among some loyal administration republicans that the democrats are about to make a direct attempt to spatter the white house if they can. They believe that this will be one of the things attempted when Edward B. McLean is put on the witness stand before the oil investigating committee.

There is no one here who believes that President Coolidge is even remotely connected with the oil scandal, by any conscious, overt act of any kind, but there is a set of circumstances which in the hands of a skillful senator may be used to create an impression that the president has not done what he might have done to expose the facts.

Slemp's Little Trip.

First, the president's secretary, C. Bascom Slemp, went to Palm Beach and there saw E. B. McLean and Albert B. Fall, frequently dining with them and conferring with them. He admitted to the senate committee that he advised both of them to tell everything. This was after McLean had said he had loaned Fall $100,000, but before he had repudiated this story when Senator Walsh went down there and placed him under oath.

Second, it is to be assumed—at least senators on the committee assume—that Slemp, on returning to Washington, made a full report of the situation to his chief. Yet it was not until a canvass of the senate showed that the Walsh resolution pr-

SLASH IN TAXES HAS BEEN CINCHED FOR THIS YEAR

Coolidge Approves Measure and Senate Seems To View Bill With Favorable Eyes.

REPUBLICANS JUBILANT OVER COMPROMISE RATE

Low Surtax Viewed as Big Stumbling Block to Easy Passage in Upper House.

Washington, March 1.—Tax reduction, both this year and for the future, is virtually assured. President Coolidge has approved the measure finally agreed to by the house, and from advance indications it appears that the senate will not change the bill enough to bring a veto.

By virtue of one rate—the compromise surtax rate of 37 1-2 per cent—the bill bears a republican color, though all of its other reduction schedules are democratic, except that providing for a flat cout in this year's taxes of 25 per cent. Because they overturned the democrats in this one disputed point, however, republicans are jubilant. They are also joyful over the change in the attitude of President Coolidge, who insisted so strongly that the Mellon plan should be adopted.

Senate Wants Higher Surtax.

The tax bill will have a little different treatment in the senate. Progressives there, followers of La Follette, will hold out for a much higher surtax rate than that adopted in the house—and it is not likely they will bow to any terms as did the progressive wing in the house. Most democrats, too, will stand first for a high surtax rate, but in view of a more conservative opinion in the senate, they will be satisfied probably with a rate this side of 44 per cent, insisted upon by house democrats.

There are some few democrats, such as Bruce, of Maryland, who come closer to the republican views, and these with the solid republican strength behind a rate somewhere near that approved by the house, will leave the bill "safe" enough in this respect to receive the approval of Coolidge.

Whipped Insurgents in Line.

The senate has a habit of "tearing up" revenue bills and making them all over after they have been through the house mill. This year may be the exception to the rule, chiefly because of the popular cry for lower taxes. There will be changes, to be sure, but the bill will not be an entirely new measure.

President Coolidge's insistence for the Mellon plan is regarded as largely a bluff—to secure as high a rate as possible. His leaders in the house, while not agreeing with the Mellon plan, worked tirelessly to secure a rate that would give the bill a republican color, and all he could do was accept.

The fight was up-hill. The strength massed by the democrats for their plan seemed sufficient, and it ap-

Signs of Spring

AX-MAN'S VICTIM IS FOUND IN WOOD

Companion, Held on Murder Charge, Denies Guilt. Jury Does Not Name Slayer.

Clayton, Ga., March 1.—(Special.) Elbert Hunter, 33, whose body was found last Friday near two bloody axes, with the skull crushed in two places and the spinal column severed near the base of the brain, came to his death at the hands of an unknown slayer, a coroner's jury decided here late today.

A. O. Gibson, companion of the dead man, who discovered the body, has been arrested and is now in jail here charged with the killing. He declares his innocence, and his 12-year-old son, who was with his father and Hunter cutting wood on a farm about a mile from Clayton at the time of the death, also says his father is innocent of the crime.

It is reported here that Hunter and Gibson were temporarily employed as tenants on a farm and that some jealousy existed between them, although reasons for the feeling were somewhat obscure. Officers are still at work seeking more evidence.

Hunter is survived by his widow and a child.

Coast Democrats Put Doheny Out As Party Officer

Oil Magnate Is Asked To Resign as Member of State Committee.

San Francisco, March 1.—A motion removing E. L. Doheny as second vice president of the organization was adopted today by the democratic state central committee in meeting here. The motion also included a request to Doheny that he resign from the committee.

There was a loud chorus of "ayes" when the motion was put to a vote and also many "noes," but the affirmative vote carried easily.

The vote was taken after a debate in which Doheny was characterized as "one of the ring leaders in the alleged corruption now being unearthed in Washington." On the other hand, pleas were made by certain committeemen that no action be taken by the committee "until Doheny has had a chance to defend himself."

The committee adopted the report of a special committee under which the candidacy of William G. McAdoo for president would be supported by delegates from California to the democratic convention.

STRUCK BY AUTO, AGED MAN DIES

Son Rushes W. V. Smith to Grady Hospital After Injury in Front of Home.

W. V. Smith, 70, of Forrest Grove, was wounded fatally late Saturday afternoon when struck by an automobile in front of the home of his son, L. A. Smith, in Hollywood road. The aged man was taken to Grady hospital where he died about an hour later. His skull was fractured, doctors stated.

The driver of the car, Jess Grier, 19, of Riverside, is being held at the Fulton tower without boind. He was arrested a short time after the accident.

Grier and a passenger in his car who gave his name as R. R. Withrow, also of Riverside, were the only witnesses, police state. Grier stated that Smith stepped suddenly in front of his machine and that he was unable to bring it to a stop before the aged man had been crushed beneath its wheels Smith never regained consciousness.

BRIBE FUND USED BY RUM RUNNERS

Smugglers Sneak 100,000 Cases of Liquor Into United States, Claims Coast Guard.

Washington, March 1.—One hundred thousand cases of liquor are smuggled into the United States monthly by rum runners off the Atlantic and Gulf states, according to coast guard officials charged with preventing the traffic.

This estimate was given to the house appropriations sub-committee which drafted the deficiency bill reported today alloting an additional $13,853,989 for the coast guard service.

In testimony before the sub-committee February 25, Commander Root, of the service, who had made a special investigation of rum running activities, said:

Quite Large Fleet.

"The smugglers' high sea force at present consists of 34 steamers, and 132 sailing vessels, ranging in size from 35 tons to 3,000 tons. Some of these vessels are capable of speeds up to 19 knots. The majority fly foreign flags. The auxiliary crafts for making shore contacts consists of several hundred gasoline driven craft,

COTTON ACREAGE MUST BE SLASHED OR GROWERS LOSE

Dixie Congressmen Issue Warning Against Any Increase in Cotton Acreage in Formal Note.

BUYERS' PANIC ON IN GOODS MARKET

Planters Urged To Disregard Propaganda for Hike in Acreage and To Make Drastic Cuts.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Washington, March 1.—A warning to southern farmers that "creation of an enormous cotton acreage this spring would establish a foundation for further deflation of cotton values," was issued today following a meeting of senators and congressmen from cotton-growing states. Senator Smith, democrat, South Carolina, presided.

"As representatives of the cotton states," the statement said, "we feel impelled to issue this note of warning to the cotton growing industry and in behalf of the welfare of the growers, upon whose success and prosperity depend the progress and full development of one-third of the American nation."

Announcing that definite action already has been inaugurated to investigate the cotton report issued February 1, the conference declared the value of cotton had "suffered a severe and drastic relapse" as a result of that estimate, and assured cotton farmers of their united aid in the enactment of "sound federal legislation to alleviate existing conditions."

Cotton Panic Threatens.

"In the face of constantly diminishing supplies," the statement continued, "of increased exports and heavy domestic consumption, a buyers' panic has been created in the cotton goods trade as a result of recent declines in the price of the raw product.

"The present price of spot cotton in the local markets of the south is below the established average cost of production. Foreign and domestic mills consuming American cotton have by agreement or industrial action begun widespread curtailment by operating their spindles on half time or four days a week. The demand for cotton staple fabrics by retail merchants is being limited to immediate needs, according to reports of the jobbing and wholesale trade.

Propaganda Broadcast.

"In addition to the above, representations are being spread broadcast through the press and other sources of publicity that the cotton acreage for 1924 will be largely increased over the acreage planted in 1923, not only in the United States, but in many foreign countries. An increased cotton acreage under the existing drastic decline in the price of raw cotton and pessimistic dry goods trade is a matter which should command the serious attention of cotton growers in the southern states before it is too late to correct an economic error.

"As representatives of the cotton states in congress, we feel impelled

Flying Embers From Explosion Fall on Crushed Celluloid Works, Adding Terror of Flame.

SURVIVORS STRICKEN DUMB WITH HORROR

New Brunswick, N. J., March 2.—Fire which started when an explosion wrecked the T. N. T. plant of the Nixon Nitration company, killed upwards of a score of persons and destroyed the little town of Nixon, was under control at 1:45 o'clock this morning. The flames stopped spreading within one hundred yards of buildings in which large quantities of celluloid were stored.

At 2 o'clock this morning 18 bodies had been recovered. The best information was that at least six men were missing with the possibility that eight more almost could not be accounted for.

New Brunswick, N. J., March 1.—Forty persons dead and 100 or more injured was estimated tonight as the toll of an explosion in the TNT plant of the Nixon Nitration works. Flames showered through 40 buildings of an adjoining celluloid works and demolished the little industril town of Nixon. An accurate check on the number killed was impossible.

As many of the victims, dead and dying, as could be removed from the blazing ruins were taken to a half dozen hospitals and hastily equipped emergency morgues. Their bodies were so mutilated and burned that only a few were identified.

12 Bodies Recovered.

By nightfall 12 bodies were reported recovered and seven had been identified tentatively. Spurred by reports of survivors that a score still ly buried beneth the burning debris, soldiers joined firemen, state police and citizen volunteers in hoisting arc lights and beginning an all night attack upon the twisted masses of wreckage.

The explosion occurred at 11:30 a. m., in the ordnance salvaging plant. The nitration works had been leased to the Ammonite company for the treatment of army TNT to be used as agriculture fertilizer.

The building, two stories high, 300 feet long and of hollow tile construction, was literally blown from the earth, along with the men believed to have been within it. The shock was felt for sixty miles, shattering windows, lifting roofs and toppling chimneys in many cities. On Staten Island buildings rocked as if in an earthquake.

Levels Novelty Works.

The single destructive blast crushed forty buildings of the Nixon company's celluloid novelties manufacturing works which surrounded the TNT

Royal Princess Treads Path of Love
:: LOUISE OF BELGIUM FOLLOWS HER CAVALIER TO EMPIRE OF DEATH ::
In Turmoil of Life to Chill of Grave

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN.

Associated Press dispatches from Wiesbaden today brought news of the death of Princess Louise, of Belgium, daughter of Leopold II, king of the Belgians and cousin to Albert I, the present king.

Princess Louise was taken to Wiesbaden from Paris at the beginning of the year by relatives, who were brought to a change of heart after long years during which they avoided the princess and her lover—Count Mattachich, now dead. For many years Mattachich had been in an ailing condition and it was only through the heroic self-sacrifice of the princess, who sold flowers on the boulevards of Paris that the couple remained alive.

Recalls Royal Scandal.

The death of Princess Louise recalls the most sensational and most romantic of European court scandals of the past century. For it was Louise, eldest daughter of Leopold II, king of the Belgians and the wealthiest monarch of his day, who shocked court circles throughout the continent with her unceremonious escape from the ball rooms at the palace of Lacken, to flee the company of her decrepit old husband for the love of a dashing young Count Mattachich, a captain of hussars in the Hungarian army.

When but a young girl, the beautiful young princess was given in marriage to Prince Philippe, of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, 65 years old, senile and not only a relative of her father, but also one of his associates in the unsavory Congo enterprise, which was later taken from private hands by the government of Belgium.

Loved Count Then.

It is said that the young princess had even formed a romantic attachment for the debonair young cavalry officer long before her marriage to the man she had generally known as "Uncle Philippe."

While on a visit to relatives in Austria she had danced with the handsome soldier, whose carriage and handsome deportment made him the idol of the ladies at the court of Emperor Francis Joseph. Although friends of the princess tried on several occasions to have Count Mattachich raised a few grades higher in the ranks of nobility, so that he would have been able to marry the princess, the necessary funds were always lacking on account of the destitute financial condition of the count's family.

The princess event went to the extent of staging a run-away accident which came near costing her her life and that of some ladies in her company. At the proper moment Count Mattachich came clattering down the streets of Schonbrunn, where the "accident" took place and where the palace of Francis Joseph is located.

Rescue Quite Realistic.

He was dressed in his smartest uniform and rode a jet black horse. With all the elan of a member of a great

Bob-Haired Bandit Plague
:: COPS ON 12-HOUR SHIFTS TO STEM CRIME TIDE ::
Descends on Philadelphia

Philadelphia, Pa., March 1.—Chasing Philadelphia bandits, rum smugglers and vice artists in general, is no pink tea party or a rest cure for consumptives.

In fact, it has become such an arduous task that General Smedley D. Butler, the dashing marine who so bravely undertook the struggle to "clean up" the city two months ago, ordered a 12-hour day for the Philadelphia police force Saturday, following reports showing crime to be on the increase.

A murder, a score of hold-ups and a large number of various other sundry crimes, recorded on police blotters, spurred General Butler into prompt action.

"Kill the bandits," ordered the director of public safety.

"I am ordering the three platoon shift discontinued temporarily until this crime wave is over." Butler added. "It is not punishment for the police, but protection for the public."

The director announced that by extending the day of the patrolmen to 12 hours, several hundred more men would be placed on the street. He admitted that he worked 16 hours a day himself, and although a lot of the officers had not been marines, he thought they ought to stand 12 hours for a while.

Full investigation was ordered into the murder of John Ward, who was shot to death and his body left lying underneath an abandoned automobile in the tenderloin section of the city. Authorities believe Ward was killed in a bootlegging feud, as six other men engaged in the bootlegging war have been killed in the same vicinity within the last 18 months.

The arrest of Dorothy Rodgers, 15-year-old bobbed haired marauder, on Thursday does not seem to have ended the bob-haired bandit plague in this city. A new flapper bandit, with abbreviated tresses, is being sought. The comely Miss, who is believed to be about 17, held up a laundry wagon driver early Saturday and relieved him of $18.

plant and razed as if by shell fire the encircling dwellings of 200 employees whose little settlement was known as the town of Nixon.

Through shattered roofs and crumbled walls—upon piles of flimsy celluloid sheets in every one of the Nixon buildings—showered embers, blazing TNT and boiling acid scattered by the explosion. The blue flames of the highly inflamable celluloid, with which all the structures were filled, burst forth on the heels of the blast, like a huge blow-torch, destroying every one and everything within a radius of several hundred feet.

Screams Pierce Flame.

The screams of men and girls pinned down by steel girders, crushed by falling walls of tile or caught beneath severed pipe lines which showered them with nitric acid, mingled with the cries of housewives and children whose dwellings only a few feet from the celluloid works came tumbling down upon them.

Men wounded and frenzied, with clothes burned off and bodies scorched black, ran out upon the road to New Brunswick, two miles away. A hundred soldiers hastily mobilized by Major A. S. Casad at the Raritan arsenal were speeded by automobile to the place of the explosion almost before the echoes had died away. Accompanied by the arsenal's ambulances and hospital corps, they were the first to attack the flames and start rescue work.

Four Shell Magazines Crushed.

Later it was discovered that four of the arsenal's high explosive magazines had been crushed by the explosion and the roofs of two others blown in. Fourteen companies of firemen held in check the flames, which for a time threatened to spread to the arsenal's scores of powder warehouses.

Doctors and nurses from hospitals in nearby cities were early on the scene. Numerous heroic rescues were recorded, nurses and soldiers working side by side amid the smoke and dense yellow fumes which all day rolled up from the ruins as tank after tank of nitric acid and ammonia burst.

An hour after the explosion the village of Nixon and the 20 acres or more of buildings which had housed the explosive works looked like a sector of battlefront—no man's land. Only a few fragments of wall remained standing.

Survivors Dumb in Horror.

For two miles the narrow road leading from the main highway was lined with automobiles hub deep in mud, past which rushed fire apparatus, ambulances, hearses, police, and army cars, and people running and crying. Stretcher bearers carried the dead and injured through cars of relatives of the victims who besieged the gates of the plant. Telephones were being installed on every standing pole to replace the lines of communication that had been swept away by the explosion. Airplanes with photographers circled overhead.

Those uninjured who had seen the explosion were unable to tell what caused it. Those who were in it and survived were unable to talk.

It was said the TNT was part of two million pounds that had been purchased from the government's Raritan arsenal by the Columbia Salvage corporation and removed from big shells at the arsenal magazines.

The powder had been turned over to the Ammonite plant at Nixon whose employees were the first victims of the blast.

Mystery in Cause.

The mystery of the explosion was deepened by the declarations of company officials and employees that, theoretically, TNT should burn without exploding; that, although it is a high explosive it is a "slow" one and requires a heavy detonating cap to set it off. The only explanation advanced was that friction, a short-circuited electric wire or a foreign substance in one of the tanks fired some of the TNT when it was confined, causing it to explode and act as detonator for all the explosive in the works.

Although the fire was considered under control tonight, additional men and apparatus were summoned, with reinforcements of the state police, to guard against a possible spread of the flames to the alcohol storage tanks and the few ruined buildings where stocks of sheet celluloid are exposed to flying sparks.

James Gorman, Boxer, Dancer

BODY HELD FOR FUNERAL RITES OF SWAPPING CLAN

And Horse Trader, Is Dead

James Gorman, of Colbert, known in early days of pugilism as "The Boston Hard Hitter," died Friday morning at a private hospital here after a long illness.

Gorman, known in many parts of the country as a veteran "hoss" trader, had called Madison county his home for many years, although his wanderings took him to every part of the United States, and included several trips to Europe.

When a young man, Gorman was a well known dancer on the vaudeville stage, and possessed a large silver loving cup said to have been presented to him by Queen Victoria, following a performance before the British court.

His career as a boxer also carried him to England, it is stated, and he once fought for the heavyweight championship of that country. He also fought in American rings for several years, and was well known around New York and Boston.

Following his retirement from the ring and stage, he became a horse trader, and was leader of a band that visited many sections of the world.

It is said Gorman himself did not know his exact age, but he is thought to have been approximately 100 years old. Pioneer residents of Colbert recall his periodic comings and goings for many years, but none know details of the time or place of his birth.

None of the aged man's relatives have been located, and the body will be held at the undertaking establishment of Greenberg & Bond until April 28, the date on which several bands of horse traders from various parts of the country gather here annually for reunions. It is their custom to bury on that date all members who have died during the year. While the whereabouts of Gorman's sons are not known, it is confidently expected that, without being notified of their father's death, they will be here for the funeral in April.

Augusta Horse Show Ends With Stunts and Thrills

Augusta, Ga., March 1.—Augusta's horse show ended today and was pronounced one of the most successful events of its kind held in this section of the country. More than 6,000 people attended today's meeting. Prominent society people from all parts of the country who are wintering in Augusta and Aiken were in attendance. Some of the best horses in the entire country competed for prizes.

Today's performance opened with a bareback drill, staged by the students of the R. O. T. C. of the University of Georgia, under the command of Major Burch and Captain R. P. Gerfen, United States cavalry.

Tipperary, the famous jumping horse, furnished the crowds with repeated thrills. He successfully cleared a large automobile with his rider in the saddle. In the first jump the animal escaped serious injury when his hoofs caught in the windshield of the car and sent splinters of glass flying in every direction. His second attempt at hurdling the car proved successful.

Camp Benning, Columbus, Ga., which showed up so well Friday, fell behind today with only two first prizes. Friday, Benning riders carried off eight first prizes out of 10 to win.

The following riders were entered today from Benning: Mrs. C. D. Dumphy, Captain R. A. McClure, Lieutenant W. A. Biederlinden, Major W. A. Wheeler, Major Stutesman, Captain K. C. Lambert, Mrs. Bradley, Mrs. McClure and Mrs. Biederlinden. Enlisted riders were Sergeant Dillion, Privates Town, Lindebault, and Laney. All enlisted men entered today won prizes.

Today's winners of the Camp Benning team were Lieutenant Biederlinden and Mrs. C. D. Dumphy.

The feature event of the day was the race and four-foot jump which was open to all winners. The race had an added touch to it by the presence of Tipperary, the famous jumping horse who was defeated by Graybud, a 20-year-old horse owned by George Chip Chase, of New York and Aiken. Mrs. C. D. Dumphy of Fenning won second place. Mrs. George Chip Chase took third place and Lieutenant Biederlinden fourth.

HARTSFIELD HITS SCHOOL PROGRAM

Scoring the board of education for rushing to completion the four-story negro high school before providing for a new Girls' High institution, Alderman W. B. Hartsfield, chairman of the tax committee of city council, Saturday issued a statement calling on citizens to make known their feelings to school officials and members of council "to the end that some small degree of common sense may be used in the administration of school affairs."

He attacked the plan to separate the board of education entirely from the municipal government, a proposal approved Friday night at a meeting of the Parent-Teacher association of Tech High school.

Alderman Hartsfield pointed out that the sum turned over to the school department this year amounts to 49.6 per cent of the total of ad valorem taxes on all real and personal property in the city, and that for schools "Atlanta is spending as much as any other southern city in her class."

Hartsfield's Statement.

The statement in part follows:

I have read the article of the superintendent of schools in the public press of a few days ago, in which he recites a list of the wonderful accomplishments of the school board and with great magnanimity lays upon them alone the laurel wreath of fulsome praise.

Neither he nor the school board is entitled to full credit. He has entirely forgotten the thousands of patriotic men and women citizens of Atlanta who stood in line at the polls for hours in order to place upon their willing backs a burden of $4,000,000 of additional indebtedness for the education of their children.

They placed this money as a sacred trust into the hands of those whom they thought would use it wisely for their children. If there be any praise let it be for them.

The fight I have tried to make is for the hundreds of innocent little grammer-school children and white girls who have been left in ramshackle, temporary buildings and insanitary firetraps, while unknown to the great majority of people, a great modern four-story negro high school was being rushed to completion, in a city which already has more facilities for higher education of negroes than elsewhere in the United States.

What the people wanted and still want is a seat for every white child in a comfortable, sanitary, fire-proof building. When that is done, then let money be spent elsewhere.

Are the people of Atlanta going to allow a little group to ram down their throats a separate tax by which they can squeeze the helpless tax payers out of their hard-earned money in order to throw it around in the fashion they are now doing?

Are people of Atlanta willing to put themselves in another tax vise with the hands of the present school crowd on the lever? I for one do not believe it.

All I ask of the citizens of Atlanta is to stop, look and listen—not to follow blindly and fanatically some popular hero, however well-meaning may be his intentions or how flowery his language or how enticing his argument, but to think for themselves and consider the best interests of Atlanta and her citizenship as a whole.

The public has never been fully informed on school affairs. They do not realize that the 26 per cent often referred to, means 26 cents out of every dollar we take in—26 cents of every dollar from gross water receipts, real and personal taxes, recorder's court fines, business licenses, cycloramas, swimming pools and golf links, etc.

They do not realize that the total amount for account of the school department this year comes to 49.6 per cent of the total ad valorem taxes on all real and personal property in the city and that Atlanta is spending as much as any other southern city in her class.

Hiram and Hiram On G.O.P. Ticket For President

Lansing, Mich., March 1.—(By the Associated Press.)—Hiram Johnston, of Ziwaukee township, Saginaw county, and Hiram W. Johnson, United States senator from California, are two of the five candidates whose names will appear in the republican column of the Michigan presidential preferential ballot at the April 7 election.

Johnston is said to be an aged man who never sought office.

Other names on the republican ticket are: Calvin Coolidge, Robert M. LaFollette and William G. Simpson, of Detroit.

The name of Henry Ford remains on the democratic ticket despite the manufacturer's statement that he was satisfied with the Coolidge administration and would not be a presidential candidate against the executive. Woodbridge N. Ferris, United States senator from Michigan, is the only other democratic candidate.

Handled 40,000 Claims.

Last year, he said, 40,000 claims were handled by the legion's representatives, resulting in the payment of more than $40,000,000 in compensation and insurance to former service men.

"The American Legion shall continue to render assistance to the disable service men, but there is another responsibility the legion has accepted," he said. "That is the care of orphans and widows of the men who died in the service or from wounds received in the service. The American Legion believes that in the veins of these orphans flows the most precious blood of the country, and believes that these children should not be penalized to the extent that they are denied the privilleges of other children because their fathers gave their lives for their country."

People Favor Bonus.

He spoke briefly on the adjusted compensation bill pending in congress, and declared that during his tour of practically every state in the union he has found that where people have studied the measure they are for it. He said 90 per cent of the voters of the nation would favor the adjusted compensation bill if they would only familiarize themselves with it.

Following his address he immediately left for Asheville, N. C., where he will address legionnaires. He reached Atlanta during Saturday afternoon from Columbus, where he visited Camp Benning.

SHOES for Men and Women

You can't put your finger in the top of a laced Walk-Over oxford. That's because the pear-shaped Walk-Over heel helps make Walk-Overs fit so well. The grip at the sides—not a pressure at the back—makes Walk-Overs fit snugly at the ankle, without gaping.

Walk-Over heel fits at A. Heel expands at B.

Regular heel—not wide enough at B. Gaps at A.

INQUEST RETURNS SUICIDE VERDICT IN SEWELL CASE

Parks E. Sewell, well-known Atlanta insurance agent, who Friday morning was found in a front room of his home at 20 Boulevard circle with a bullet wound in his head, committed suicide, according to a verdict of a coroner's jury Saturday.

Sewell, with a revolver near his body, was found by R. R. Chaffin, a boarder. Mrs. Sewell was in the front yard at the time, but failed to hear the shot by which her husband ended his life. Ill health is thought to have been the cause of suicide.

The inquest Saturday was the 28th held in one month's time, it was stated by Coroner Paul Donehoo. This is an unusually large number, he stated, as inquests are held only in cases of accidental death, suicides, or murders to which there are no witnesses.

By dipping clothes in a solution of ammonium phosphate, they can be made practically fireproof, it is claimed.

A five-year agricultural development program for the county was adopted as follows:

Chattooga County Sets New Record In Egg Production

Lyerly, Ga., March 1.—(Special.) More than 1,000 dozen eggs were shipped from this place last week, setting a new record for egg production here for February. Chattooga county has been leading the counties of the state in egg production for several years and from present indications will continue to do so.

Farmers have become thoroughly interested in raising pure-bred chickens and this is probably responsible for the vast increase in egg production. During the past few years probably a dozen carloads of poultry have been shipped from this county, and in nearly every instance scrub chickens have been replaced with pure strains.

STUDENT CHARGED WITH SLAYING COLLEGE FRIEND

Cincinnati, March 1. — Halton P Siddall, Equality, Ill., a student at the Ohio Dental college here, was charged in an indictment returned by the Hamilton county grand jury today with first degree murder in connection with the killing of John Mazzola, a fellow student and native of Panama City, Panama.

Siddall, who is the son of a banker, admitted, police say, that he killed Mazzola and that he acted in self-defense. The state charges that the murder was committed by Siddall while carrying out a successful plan to rob his former friend.

Mazzola was found dead January 29, his body half submerged in the water of Duck creek. He had been stabbed and shot through the head.

Aged Jap Prince Fights Way Back From Death Door

Tokio, March 2.—Prince Masayoshi Matsukata, whose death was announced yesterday and for whom the entire nation went into mourning, is alive today and has a bare chance for recovery, according to statements made by his physicians this morning. The prince was pronounced dead at 11:15 o'clock yesterday morning when his heart and respiration stopped. Shortly thereafter, however, he began to show faint signs of life.

This morning he took some nourishment and slept for a time. All the Tokio newspapers but two carried stories of the prince's death, together with lengthy obituaries.

By what the physicians pronounce a "miraculous recovery" Matsukata, who is in his ninetieth year, slowly came back to life. The astonished physicians worked over him desperately and in the afternoon he had so far regained consciousness that he was able to acknowledge by the pressure of his hand the presence of Viscount Makino, the emperor's messenger.

LOVERS' QUARREL LEADS TO KILLING OF NEGRO WOMAN

Eunice Lindsey, 27-year-old negress, was killed Saturday night in her home at the rear of 134 Fraser street when struck by a rock thought to have been thrown by Forger Thomas, of Reeb street, sweetheart of the slain woman, and who is known to have been in the house shortly before the killing. The police believe a lover's quarrel was the cause of the killing.

Officers A. F. Duncan and M. D. Cartright investigated the case, and the district is being combed for Thomas.

HISTORIAN LIVED AS RECLUSE; DIED IN ALMSHOUSE

Lancaster, Pa., March 1.—Israel Smith Clare, historical writer, died penniless in the Lancaster county almshouse today. He was a unique figure in this city. Caring only for his books, Clare for a number of years occupied a cabin in a deserted park with his faithful dogs, eking out an existence until forced to go to the almshouse. He was 77 years old.

He wrote a history of the world in 15 volumes, rated by many as an authentic account of world happenings. Several higher institutions of learning, including the French academy of history, honored him. For several years he worked as a proof reader on local newspapers.

BOOKHART HEADS DAUGHERTY PROBE

that the committee would meet Monday to draw up a plan of procedure and would proceed "as speedily as possible" in its long task.

"There are masses of papers to be gone over in a preliminary way," said Senator Brookhart. "It is hoped to begin the hearings in a very few days, probably some time next week."

While definite procedure is yet to be determined, members indicated there would be no formal complaint, with detailed specifications, drafted and filed as in the house impeachment proceedings a year ago against Mr. Daugherty, but that various charges and complaints would be taken up as they developed with committee members and in the hearings. The first field of inquiry is expected to be the department of justice bureau of investigation, headed by William J. Burns, in connection with the activities of its agents in several parts of the country.

Virtually unlimited jurisdiction to investigate affairs relating to Mr. Daugherty and the department of justice is given under the senate resolution, which as finally adopted provides:

Text of Resolution.

"Resolved, that a committee of five senators, consisting of three of the majority and two of the minority, be authorized and directed to investigate circumstances and facts, and report the same to the senate, concerning the alleged failure of Harry M. Daugherty, attorney general of the United States, to prosecute properly violators of the anti-trust act and the Clayton act against monopolies and unlawful restraint of trade; the alleged neglect and failure of the said Harry M. Daugherty, attorney general of the United States, to arrest and prosecute Albert B. Fall, Harry F. Sinclair, E. L. Doheny, C. R. Forbes and their co-conspirators in defrauding the government, as well as the alleged neglect and failure of the said attorney general to arrest and prosecute many others for violations of federal statutes, and his alleged failure to prosecute properly, efficiently and promptly and defend all manner of civil and criminal actions wherein the government of the United States is interested as a party, plaintiff or defendant. And said committee is further directed to inquire into, investigate, and report to the senate the activities of the said Harry M. Daugherty, attorney general, and any of his assistants in the department of justice which would in any manner tend to impair their efficiency or influence as representatives of the government of the United States. The said committee above referred to, and the chairman thereof, shall be elected by the senate of the United States."

Some Teeth Pulled By Wheeler.

Before adoption of the resolution, its preamble, objected to by several republicans, was eliminated by Senator Wheeler. The preamble had charged failure of the attorney general to act in federal trade commission, the oil lease and anti-trust cases, but Senator Robinson and Senator Borah, republican, Idaho, pointed out that the resolution's text was broader than the preamble, which might constrict the inquiry.

The resolution was further modified, upon motion of Senator Willis, republican, Ohio, a defender of Mr. Daugherty, by insertion of the word "alleged" before recitals of alleged inaction and neglect and failure. Senator Wheeler assented to the change.

In preparation for beginning the investigation, Chairman Brookhart after the senate had adjourned held brief conferences with the committee members but postponed a decision upon procedure.

Text of Counsel's Letter.

Later copies of the letters from the attorney general's counsel were delivered at the offices of all members of the committee.

"By direction of the attorney general, it is our pleasure to advise you that in the conduct of your investigation of the department of justice every agency and facility of that department is at your service. The attorney general also wishes to notify you that in order to relieve the regular attorneys on the staff of the department of justice from any interference in the transaction of the public business, he has asked us to represent the department and the attorney general at his own expense, during the course of your proceedings and assist you in this investigation in every way.

"The attorney general most respectfully requests that we as his representatives be granted such rights and privileges during the course of your proceedings as may seem to your committee fair and reasonable, and particularly requests:

Would Cross-Examine.

"First, that said representatives may have the right to be present at all hearings and meetings of your committee, except, of course, executive sessions, and be duly notified of the time and place of such meetings; that they may be furnished with a transcript of the testimony and the right of inspection of all documents as fully and to the same extent as members of the committee:

"Second, that they may have the right to interrogate all witnesses that may be called before your committee:

"Third, that your committee will at the earliest possible date determine what particular matters it wishes to investigate so that the data and facts may be assembled and furnished without unnecessary delay.

"Fourth, that your committee will formulate in definite and concise language at the earliest possible moment any and all charges, if any, against the attorney general in his official capacity, so that he may be advised of the charges against him and given an opportunity to present the facts.

Want Full Report of Findings.

"Fifth, that his said representatives shall have the right on their own motion to introduce testimony in the nature of answer or rebuttal to any and all charges that may be made directly or indirectly, or by inference, against the attorney general in his official capacity.

"Sixth, that his said representatives may have process issued by you at their request to compel the attendance of witnesses and production of documents.

"Seventh, that at the close of the hearing and the conclusions of all the testimony, and before the final report of your committee to the senate, the attorney general through his said counsel, respectfully requests the right to present their views to your committee in oral argument and by printed brief."

Personal Acrimony Dies.

Fires of personal acrimony which flamed yesterday, appeared to be somewhat burned out today and the debate, largely an attack upon Senator Fess, republican, Ohio, for a speech criticizing the senate and defending Mr. Daugherty, was comparatively mild.

Faced by the combined voting strength of the democrats and republican insurgents, almost at the tap of the gavel today Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts, the republican leader, withdrew his amendment providing for selection of the committee by Senator Cummins, republican, Iowa, the president pro tem. This forecast the election of the coalition slate headed by Senator Brookhart.

In nominating Senator Brookhart, Senator La Follette, in impassioned words, scored "machine manipulation" and "secret caucus" methods. These, he declared, had resulted in caucus selections of senate committees. There were many precedents for election of committees he declared, adding that it was the proper method.

Fess Is Continuous Target.

Senator Fess was an almost continuous target for democratic attacks after he had criticized senators in a speech for the record made since the oil investigation developed. He charged the senate with "hysteria" and, on the resolution calling for the resignation of Secretary Denby, with "usurpation" of power, adding that the "record of the senate for the past two months has been a crying shame."

In vehement fashion, Senator Fess was scored by Senators Robinson and Caraway, democrats, Arkansas; Heflin, democrat, Alabama; McKellar, democrat, Tennessee, and others. With bitter sarcasm and pointed attack, they bombarded the Ohio senator emphasizing that he and Senator Willis, his colleague, were the only republicans who had risen in defense of Mr. Daugherty. No reply was made by Senator Fess to the verbal onslaught and no senator offered him any support.

Brief reference was made in the debate to the disclosures relating to the use of a one-time department of justice secret code in messages to employees of Edward B. McLean, Washington publisher in the oil scandal. Senator Caraway declared that Mr. Daugherty was involved in the use of the code "by criminals in Florida to communicate with criminals in the department of justice."

Senator McKellar also read newspaper reports that Mr. McLean was on the secret service rolls at $1 a month.

about 30 per cent of which are good for 25 knots.

"With our present force, during the past 22 months, we have been able to put out of business, by capture or otherwise, 153 vessels. We have captured the equivalent of 31,000 cases of liquor and caused to be jettisoned under fire amount estimated at 20,000 cases.

"The so-called 'rum row' off New York is maintained ostensibly as a good business proposition, but principally as a diversion to hold to that point the attention of as many coast guard vessels as possible."

Traffic Increasing.

Commander Root said the smugglers maintained advance stations at St. Johns, New Foundland; St. Pierre, Miquelon, the Azores, Bermuda, and the Bahamas.

"The smugglers maintain a bribery fund," he added, "and have a shore organization for obtaining supplies and making contacts."

Commander Root said a report from Havana showed that from 7,000 to 10,000 cases of liquor were shipped weekly to Baltimore and New York concealed in cargoes of sugar. Extensive smuggling activities also exist in the Puget Sound country, he said, adding:

"Not only is the traffic increasing but also the audacity, skill and courage of the enemy."

TELLS RHEUMATICS TO BEGIN ON SALTS

A well-known authority states that stomach trouble and indigestion are nearly always due to acidity—acid stomach—and not, as most folks believe, from a lack of digestive juices. He states that an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach retards digestion and starts food fermentation; then our meals sour like garbage in a can, forming acrid fluids and gases, which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon. We then get that heavy, lumpy feeling in the chest, we eructate sour food, belch gas or have heartburn, flatulence, water-brash or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive aids and instead get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, while it is effervescing, and furthermore, to continue this for one week. While relief often follows the first dose, it is important to neutralize the acidity, remove the gas-making mass, start the liver, stimulate the kidneys and thus promote a free flow of pure digestive juices.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salts is used by thousands of stomach sufferers with excellent results.—(adv.)

EXPERTS TO DUCK MORATORIUM ROW

Paris, March 1.—The reparations experts now hope they may be able to develop their report without mentioning the question of a moratorium for Germany, it was hinted in committee circles. Their main attention, it was said, is directed toward setting up the machinery for finding out Germany's possible assets, both present and future, and for collecting whatever may accrue right from the start, whether it is a large or a small amount.

It was emphasized that such an objective was not influenced by French apprehensions regarding the possibilities of too long a moratorium, but by purely economic considerations.

It was remarked that the first thing a creditor does naturally is to find out a debtor's assets and then adopt the best formula for getting paid as soon as possible. This principle is expected to be applied to Germany, although the experts are taking into consideration all measures necessary to keep Germany's budget balanced during her payments as the best method of assuring her ability to pay, perhaps a little at first and more as recovery becomes apparent

The sub-committee of experts, which is discussing the status of the proposed German gold bank, held two sessions today and on Monday it will again hear Dr. Schacht, president of the reichsbank.

The budget committee has suspended its sessions until Wednesday, as M. Houtart, the Belgian delegate, and Signor Pirelli, the Italian, have gone to their respective homes for a few days. M. Houtart is being prominently mentioned as the new Belgian premier.

General Dawes' committee will hold a plenary session Monday afternoon, but the scheduled meeting of Reginald McKenna's committee for the same day has been postponed until the Dawes committee has progressed further with its work.

New Gland Find Used To Change Color of Hair

London, March 1.—The day may come when, instead of going to a hairdresser to have her hair "brightened," the woman who is tired of being a brunette can become a golden or even a dizzy blonde merely by taking another shot of gland extract.

"Extraction from the posterior lobe of the pituitary gland, a pea-sized gland at the base of the brain, have changed the sandy color of a frog to pitch black," said Dr. Winifred Cullis, woman dermatological specialist, in an interview here.

"It is within the range of possibility that blondes may be transformed one day to burnettes and brunettes to blondes if they wish.

"We may even see black men turned to white, but there would be danger in this, for the coloring of the individual is nature's protection against the suns and rigors of the native climate."

FIVE MEMBERS OF SPENCER GANG GET 25 YEARS

Oklahoma City, March 1.—Twenty-five years' imprisonment in the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth was the punishment assessed against five alleged members of the Al Spencer bandit gang, charged with the robbery of mail from an M., K. & T. passenger train near Okesa last August. The jury in federal court returned its verdict early tonight. The trial started Thursday.

cavalry corps he tore through the streets after the swaying carriage in which the young princess was screaming for aid. When he brought the frantic horses that pulled the carriage to a standstill he was cheered by the crowds.

But not even the fact that he saved her life could mellow the heart of the princess' royal father in favor of the young count. She was married to "Uncle Philippe," but awaited the hour when her lover should come to Belgium to deliver her.

During a great court function the princess escaped from her husband in ball gown and slippers and fled to Switzerland with Count Mattachich. This was two years after the marriage. Later when Mattachich returned to Austria he was condemned on charges of forgery. Subsequent developments have proven that the count was innocent but that the charges were framed through the powerful influence of several royal houses in Europe.

Love Pierces Prison.

He escaped from prison, returned to Belgium, sought out the asylum where Princess Louise was held a prisoner, helped her escape and left for France.

Last year Mattachich died. Once again the couple were brought before the world's footlights. He had died in poverty, he had worked like a slave for his princess and he died in a back street of the Montparnasse district of Paris. But the world learned that the romance of their young lives had remained their ideal to the end.

Behind the bier walked a woman in faded, threadbare cloak. She was the only mourner when the service was held in the little church of Notre Dame du Bon Secours. Every morning the same frail old woman could be seen praying on the grave on which there was not even a tombstone.

That poverty-stricken woman, who was seen each morning in the cemetery of Pere LaChaise with her little bouquet of wild flowers, was the Princess Louise of Belgium.

Four months after Mattachich's death "his princess" joined him.

His name was the last word to pass her lips.

SLASH IN TAXES HAS BEEN CINCHED

peared that they could not be overridden. However, republican leaders won their victory on a field where they have lost on every other occasion this year—by bringing the recalcitrant progressives in line.

President Coolidge, in giving away finally to his house leaders, was actuated by political considerations. The bill now bears a republican stamp, and he could not afford to kill it.

CURTIS PROPOSES THREE AMENDMENTS.

Washington, March 1.—(By the Associated Press.)—The revenue bill will be taken up by the senate finance committee the latter part of next week, under plans announced today by Chairman Smoot.

The bill was formally reported to the senate from the house today and referred to the finance committee, before which it will be opened again for revision. However, not more than a month is expected to be consumed in consideration of the bill in committee. During that time hearings will be held, but Senator Smoot is considering limiting each trade or industry to one spokesman.

Pending study of the Longworth compromise income tax schedule voted into the bill by the house, senate leaders were reticent in expressing opinions of the plan which provides for a maximum surtax rate of 37 1-2 per cent on the amount of incomes in excess of $200,000.

May Cause Deficit.

At the same time considerable interest, both in the senate and house was evident concerning the government estimates as to the amount of revenue assured by the bill as it now stands. In proposing the compromise schedule, Mr. Longworth said it would not result in a treasury deficit, but rough calculations made today by some republican members of the house ways and means committee who are advocates of the Mellon income tax plan, indicated that the bill as passed by the house would reduce revenue about $460,000,000 next year. The treasury surplus estimated for this fiscal year by the treasury was $350,000,000.

Three amendments to the revenue bill have been introduced in the senate. Senator Curtis, republican, Kansas, submitted an amendment to increase the admissions tax, making a 20 per cent tax apply to all theater tickets selling for less than a dollar and more than 25 cents, and a 25 per cent tax on tickets above $1 in cost. The revenue obtained from such a tax, Mr. Curtis said, would be used entirely for payment of an adjusted compensation act for world war veterans.

Propose Income Tax Change.

Senator King, democrat, Utah, introduced an amendment proposing an entire new income tax schedule with normal rates of 2 per cent on incomes below $4,000, the same as provided by the house, and 3 per cent on incomes above that amount. He would start the surtax rates at 1 per cent on the amount of incomes in excess of $5,000 and not in excess of $6,000, and graduate the scale upward by two-tenths of one per cent for each additional $1,000 to a maximum rate of 35 per cent on incomes over $175,000. The amendment also would increase the personal exemption to $3,000 for single persons and $4,000 for heads of families.

Senator Shields, democrat, Tennessee, in an amendment would allow deductions from gross incomes of all sums priced for medical purposes, a proposal which was turned down by the house.

Firm, Plump Flesh!

MANY are the eyes that are turned to gaze with keen admiration on the well developed, healthy girl no matter where she may be—on the rapidly moving thoroughfare or gliding gracefully over the dance floor.

All eyes turn because we all appreciate the girl with the figure so firm and plump—the girl with radiantly red cheeks, cheeks that carry a touch of roses from nature's own garden—the girl with the sparkling eyes, keen and sharp—the girl with buoyancy and the swing of youth.

Not necessarily an out-of-doors girl. Just a girl with ever increasing blood cells. Just a girl filled with the vim and vigor of youth.

S. S. S., since 1826, has stood for increased blood cells. S. S. S. means restored strength—rekindled vitality—added energy. Take S. S. S. and watch the bloom of youth return to your cheeks. Watch that flabby, ill nourished flesh fade away before flesh that is firm and plump. Red blood cells will do it and S. S. S. will build them. It contains only pure vegetable ingredients. S. S. S. is sold at all good drug stores. The large size bottle is more economical.

The Race for Tax Collector Is a Free-for-All

---And May the Best Man Win

To the Voters of Fulton County:

In the strain and stress of a campaign for office, there's usually many things said and printed that give to the voting public an erroneous impression concerning the candidates.

Sometimes it is direct misleading statements from one candidate about another---

Sometimes it is a boasting statement from some candidate that he is far in the front in the running---an effort generally to bolster up the waning courage of himself and friends---like the boy who whistles as he trudges along after dark by a lonely cemetery ---but this statement rarely, if ever, fools the public---

Sometimes it is a statement in the prints leaving the inference that only two candidates are in the race---or only two are being considered---when in reality there may be a half dozen who are out hustling for votes---

Then again, sometimes, one candidate will select from the several who are entered in the race some one particular candidate and center all his forces of opposition against the latter---an admission that he considers such a candidate the strongest in the race.

But after all, everyone may be disappointed---badly, sadly so. As a matter of fact, it is mighty hard to fool the public about these matters---and it's almost an insult to the intelligence of voters for candidates and their friends to go around prophesying and boasting to the people about how they are RUNNING AWAY with the race---positively LEADING the field.

Everybody knows that nobody knows very much about it---and everybody knows that close personal friends and supporters of a candidate usually give him a smile and a word of encouragement, while the supporters and personal friends of the other candidates are doing the same thing to their favorite candidate---while the great majority of voters are saying nothing.

A famous character once said, "It's the differences of opinion that makes horse racing good." So it's the uncertainty of political races that makes them interesting and more or less fascinating and---uncertain.

That leads me to say just this: In my campaign for re-election as Fulton county tax collector I am greatly pleased---gratified---at the progress that we (and that means my ticket) are making. It appears that we have many friends. We are positive that we are going to get a large, fine vote---ample enough, we believe, to lead the ticket. We say this without boasting, for we have been in position for a part of one term (our first) to show the public that it is pleasing to us to render prompt, courteous and efficient service. We believe the public recognizes this, and in return for it will give to us an endorsement by re-election. The public well knows that a set of men trained for a period of even a little less than one term in an office as important as the tax collector's office can surely and certainly render service more prompt and perfect and satisfactory than a set of new and untrained men, however anxious they might be to render such service.

We say that we believe our ticket is going to win because we are on record as favoring the salary system---because we have openly stated that we expect to vote for it in the primary (myself and my deputies) and hope to see it legally enacted into law and made workable and enforceable in the county. We are not declaring how cheaply we would serve---not trying to catch votes in that way. But we believe that fair and reasonable salaries will be fixed, if the salary system is adopted, for every one from the tax collector on down to the humblest attache of the office, and so believing, we are willing to abide the people's decision in the matter.

We are not trying to befuddle the voters---not trying to obscure the candidacy of any man---not throwing stones at any one.

This is a free country. Every man has a right to offer for office---and the office belongs to the people. They can and will bestow it as they like. We don't blame anyone for trying to get it.

Mr. Goodhart, Mr. Andrews, Mr. Mattheison---and Mr. Richardson---all have a perfect right to seek the suffrage of voters. And if it wasn't too late now, we'd say, "the water's fine---come on in."

But the list is closed---

There's four of us in the race---

Take your choice, Mr. Voter, on March 19---

And may the best man win.

But remember, that no candidate and his list of deputies will appreciate your support more than the undersigned, or will strive to give you more efficient and courteous service than the coterie of men and women who are now serving you in the tax collector's office for their first term. Respectfully yours,

W. S. RICHARDSON,

Candidate for Re-Election as Fulton County Tax Collector

among the toys recently invented.

HEARINGS START MONDAY ON BONUS

Washington, March 1.—The soldier bonus bill was taken up by the house ways and means committee today and given a clear slate for immediate consideration.

The committee voted to open a three-day hearing Monday, and then to proceed with preparation of a redrafted bill. Chairman Green said he expected the measure to be reported next Saturday.

Several bills have been introduced, including the McKenzie bill, which is similar to the measure vetoed by President Harding. Members of the committee have indicated increasing favor, however, for proposals to make the main feature of adjusted compensation paid-up insurance policies. Such provisions are carried in bills by Representatives Andrew, Massachusetts, and Fish, New York, republicans, both of whom will appear before the committee.

Chairman Green favors a provision to make the insurance apply to disability cases which occurred too late to come under veterans' compensation act. Practically the only actual cash outlay involved under present plans would be the payment of sums of $50 made in completing the benefits allowed those who served for a short time.

In taking up the legislation today, within 16 hours after the passage of the revenue bill by the house, the committee followed the instructions of a republican party conference held some weeks ago. A democratic conference this week also called upon the committee to report a bonus bill.

Democratic Policy Vindicated By Passage of Revenue Bill

Fight Against Mellon Measure Brought About Repudiation of Plan by Congress.

Washington, March 1. — The tax bill as it passed the house yesterday was described in a statement tonight by the democratic national committee as having vindicated, with some exceptions, the policies advocated by house democrats. The statement follows:

"The action of the house of representatives on the various proposed internal tax reduction measures shows a complete repudiation of the policy of Secretary Mellon and President Coolidge to the effect that the secretary of the treasury should draft in secret an internal tax reduction measure in its every detail, coupled with a subsequent demand by the secretary and the president upon congress to pass the bill without compromise.

"On a direct vote in the house the Mellon tax plan was overwhelmingly rejected by a vote of 201 to 133, the ballot showing that 62 republicans had voted against it, while many republicans voted for it only because they knew in advance that it had no chance to pass. The theory of Secretary Mellon that the largest taxpayers want their surtaxes cut in half so that they can pay more revenue to the government in the way of income taxes has been thoroughly exploded.

Democrats Pointed Way.

"In the second place, the outcome shows that the democrats in the house pointed the way to tax reduction by offering a bill along the lines of which any measure at all possible to pass must be framed. The Longworth-La Follette compromise measure, finally adopted, is almost identical with the democratic proposal as to certain of its principles, while the principles underlying the higher surtax provisions of the Longworth-La Follette measure are a repudiation of the principles underlying the Mellon higher surtax proposals, and they, at the same time, tend to approach the principles of the democratic surtax plan.

"The only two points of substantial difference between the democratic and the Longworth-La Follette measures are; first, that the democratic proposal raises exemptions from $1,000 and $2,500 for single and married persons respectively, to $2,000 and $3,000, thereby releasing about 800,000 persons required to make returns without being subject to taxes, from making any returns, and releasing from further taxes nearly 1,646,000 persons whose average incomes are under $12,000 each. The Longworth-La Follette measure gives no relief as to these exemptions, although these millions of persons are already paying most grinding tariff taxes.

Flat Cut Arbitrary.

"The second point of chief difference is in the higher surtax brackets due to the flat 25 per cent reduction of each surtax rate under the Longworth-La Follette plan. Under the operation of this flat 25 per cent reduction method, the Longworth plan would affect substantially larger reductions of the taxes of between 15,000 and 20,000 of the biggest individual income tax payers with incomes in excess of $46,000 and upward, than the Garner (democratic) plan. The application of a flat 25 per cent reduction of all graduated rates in obviously both arbitrary and unscientific, because the chief reductions benefits go to those with the large incomes and subject to the higher rates. The higher the rate, in other words, the greater and the more disproportionate are the reduction benefits as compared with a like 25 per cent reduction of the smaller surtax rates.

"This condition could be no more clearly illustrated than by the fact that the democratic tax proposal affords larger surtax reductions on incomes up to $46,000 than the Longworth-La Follette proposal, and hence when these two proposals are applied to the rates on the higher incomes, the Longworth-La Follette reductions increase much more rapidly than the Garner (democratic) reduction of taxes. The latter scale of rates is based somewhat on the usual method of graduation, while the former makes arbitrary departures therefrom. For illustration, the Longworth-La Follette plan gives a reduction of $24,000 on an income of $250,000 but only $75 on an income of $15,000.

Reorganization Needed.

"The tax outcome in the house has in other essential respects fully confirmed and vindicated the attitude and policy of the democrats, in that the first step in successful income taxation involves the immediate reform, reorganization and revitalization of the administration of the law by the treasury department. This would include the permanent installation of 50 to 75 key men of the highest qualifications and fitness at such salaries as would justify them in remaining during good behavior. Such reorganization would remove 90 per cent of existing complaints of taxpayers due to unsatisfactory disposition of cases by tax units, delay, uncertainty, expense, numerous back assessments, reexaminations and consequent irritation to taxpayers.

"In the second place, it is now very clear that in addition to administration reform and before rates can be considered with any definiteness, congress must place upon a relative equality from the purpose of the tax incomes of individuals, partners and stockholders of corporations. This equalization of income involves the stopping of a number of large holes through which taxes are either evaded or avoided.

Tariff Cut To Be Urged.

"With these two prerequisites, properly dealt with, it would then become no difficult matter to effect further rate readjustments so as to secure adequate revenue under well-balanced and proportioned rates which, in their effects, would not be unduly burdensome, or punitive, or oppressive to any class of business or of individuals.

"Looking back at the course of the propagandists for the Mellon plan, which at no time has had the slightest chance to pass the house, it strongly appears that a part of the tactics has been to divert attention as fully as possible from all phases of tariff tax reduction, which is chiefly responsible for the existing high cost of living and is tremendously oppresisve to all of the 110,000,000 people. During the Mellon tax controversy, any person who dared even to hint at tariff tax relief was branded by Mellon champions as an enemy to tax reduction, or as playing politics.

"The opportunity is just ahead for comprehensive tax reduction in the interest of all the people and this especially includes tariff tax reduction which during coming weeks will be pressed in the house of representatives."

NO CHANGES MADE ON GRAIN RATES

Washington, March 1.—Rates on grain moving into the southeastern quarter of the United States, from the Mississippi valley to the Atlantic coast, are reasonable as they stand, it was decided today by the interstate commerce commission.

Producers and shippers in the northwest and middlewest attacked the rates, and sought changes also in transit and re-shipping arrangements.

They declared the rates should not be higher than the charges in other parts of the country, but the commission held that "conditions peculiar to this section of the country . . . differ in a marked degree from those in any other section of the country."

If any changes are made, the decision indicated, they will be delayed until the end of the general investigation into southern class rates, now pending.

JALAPA IS RECAPTURED BY MEXICAN FEDERALS

Vera Cruz, March 1.—Jalapa, capital of Vera Cruz state, is again in the hands of Obregon government forces under General Almazan, having taken over the city without resistance.

The rebels retired on the federals' approach, abandoning 10 locomotives and 75 cars. The balance of their rolling stock was left at Rinconada, 40 miles from Vera Cruz.

Gaudalupe Sanchez, rebel leader, withdrew his men in the direction of Agostadero.

COTTON ACREAGE MUST BE SLASHED

to issue this note of warning to the cotton growing industry and in behalf of the welfare of the growers, upon whose success and prosperity depend the progress and financial development of one-third of the nation. We view with deepest concern the continued depression in market values of staple farm products, the increasing burdens of debt on American farmers and the widespread exodus of farm labor from the field to industrial centers.

Press For Relief.

"The fullest support of southern senators and congressmen during this period of agricultural depression can be depended upon to advocate the speedy enactment of sound federal legislation that will tend to alleviate existing conditions and rehabilitate the agricultural industry.

"The attention of farm organizations, bankers, merchants and all agencies allied with the cotton growing industry, is specifically called to the pending cotton situation and such action urged as may best subserve the interests of the growers of the country generally."

OIL TIDE LAPPING WHITE HOUSE DOOR

dering cancellation of the oil leases would pass that the president, in his midnight statement, announced his intention of pressing for cancellation.

Tried to Forestall Senate.

Third, Coolidge presided over the senate as vice president the day Senator La Follette—April 28, 1922—made his speech attacking the oil leases as detrimental to the interests of the United States and of doubtful legality. He was thus familiar with the case, but as democratic senators have pointed out, took no action until it was apparent the senate would force his hand.

When McLean comes to the stand, democratic senators will question him closely regarding a telegram which he received at Palm Beach from Ira Bennett, his chief editorial writer. This telegram, dated January 29, said:

"Saw principal delivered message. He says greatly appreciates and sends regards to you and Mrs. McLean. There will be no rocking of boat and no resignation. He expects reaction from unwarranted political attack."

Day of Denby Defiance.

This was the day on which Secretary of the Navy Denby, emerging from a cabinet meeting where President Coolidge had discussed the oil situation, declared that he would not resign and that he did not believe the Robinson resolution calling for his resignaton would pass. On the same day, an official spokesman for President Coolidge explained that the president saw only two questions involved—the necessity of righting any wrong done, and secondly, criminal punishment if any crime was committed. All other considerations are of minor importance, the president was represented as saying.

That Bennett, on the same day these developments occurred, should send a telegram to his chief, after seeing "principal," stating positively that there would be no rocking of the boat and that there would be no resignation has caused a good deal of curiosity among the senators who are tracing the devious trail of the messages.

That Leased Wire.

Then there is the part that white house attaches play in the telegrams to McLean. After stating that a leased wire should be installed between his newspaper office here and his cottage at Palm Beach to provide "quick and easy access to the white house," McLean is advised by Johnny Major, one of his agents here, to employ E. W. Smithers, white house telegrapher, to operate the private wire.

E. W. Starling, assistant chief of the white house secret service detail, was asked by McLean to hire someone to act as bodyguard for the McLean children. Both of these telegrams are insufficient to cast the slightest reflection upon either.

The only significance their names have in connection with the affair is to disclose how closely McLean kept in touch with the white house establishment.

MOTOR CAR OWNERS TO FIGHT TAX HIKES

Chicago, March 1.—Frank E. Jack, president of the Chicago Motor club, tonight announced that "under the leadership of the American Automobile association motorists of the nation intended from now on to fight all tax increases or additions which are not equitable and for the repeal of taxes already levied which are discriminatory, such as the federal war excise tax on motor vehicles."

"The motor vehicle owner in Arkansas pays 12 1-2 cents per horsepower, plus 55 cents per hundred pounds of weight," Jack declared. "If he has a popular-priced car rated at 21 horsepower and weighing 2,200 pounds he will pay $14.72.

"After he has paid for his license tag he must pay a tax of four cents a gallon on all gasoline he uses and ten cents per gallon on all oil. If he uses 500 gallons of gas and 20 gallons of oil he will contribute $22 more to that state. In addition he must pay a personal property tax."

COMB SAGE TEA IN HAIR TO DARKEN IT

Grandma Kept Her Locks Dark, Glossy, and Youthful With Sage Tea and Sulphur.

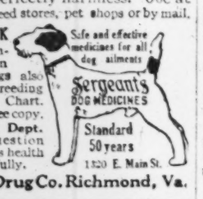

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive.—(Adv.)

5 BUILDING TRADES DEMAND WAGE HIKE

Pittsburgh, March 1. — Work was discontinued in five building trades today pending negotiation of new wage contracts to replace those which expired yesterday. Fifteen hundred men were said to be affected. Increase in wages were demanded by all of the unions and one, the Plasterers' union, included a five-day work week among its demands. All building trades now work upon a five-day week basis. Other trades involved were the structural iron workers, the cement finishers, sheet metal workers and composition roofers.

Officials of the trades announced they would continue negotiations with representatives of the contractors' association.

Tobacco Tax Law Violator Freed; Drop First Case

The first prosecution for violation of the state law providing for a 10 per cent tax on cigars and cigarets resulted in withdrawal of charges by the state when the defendant pleaded ignorance of wrongdoing and agreed to meet costs of court and pay the state the amount of the tax on goods sold, on which he failed to place revenue stamps.

The defendant, S. Klontz, a retail tobacco dealer, was charged with selling cigars and cigarets without placing thereon the state revenue stamp as required by law. The warrant was sworn out by Grover Bell, deputy revenue commissioner.

Klontz was tried in municipal court here last week. Due to the old age and infirmity of the defendant, Attorney General George M. Napier and John M. Vandiver, commissioner of revenue, agreed to drop charges on condition that Klontz pay the taxes owed the state and court costs.

An official of the revenue department was designated to check up on the amount of goods sold by Klontz on which he failed to affix revenue stamps to determine the amount to be paid to the state.

Attorney General Napier stated that the state proposes to prosecute all violators of the tax law, and officers have been instructed to report any dealer selling cigars and cigarets without the revenue stamp.

Bankston Injured.

S. L. Bankston, of Crossroads, Ga., was badly injured Thursday morning when he was struck by an automobile driven by C. M. Foster, of 91 East Tenth street, when the latter's car crashed into the sidewalk at Piedmont avenue and Harris street to avoid striking another machine which is said to have turned sharply into Foster's path.

Bankston's left foot was crushed, and he was painfully cut and bruised. Foster stated that he was driving north on Piedmont when a machine in front of him turned without warning. He drove upon the sidewalk, knocking Bankston down, to avoid a collision.

The injured man was taken to Grady hospital, where doctors stated his injuries were not serious.

Negress Hits Man.

T. R. Johnson, of 609 North Moreland avenue, was badly cut and bruised when he was struck down by an automobile which crashed into the sidewalk curbing at Highland and Randolph streets, after it had been struck by another machine driven by Lydie Hensley, negress, who was arrested on a charge of reckless driving.

According to witnesses, the negress car struck a parked automobile, knocking it upon the sidewalk and into Johnson. He was taken to Grady hospital, but doctors stated his condition is not serious.

TRAFFIC CLUB PLANS MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN

Plans for a membership drive to open in the near future were made Friday night at a meeting of the Traffic Club of Atlanta, in the rooms of the Southern Freight association. Following the meeting, refreshments were served. The club is composed of shippers and carrier representatives.

It was decided to send delegates to Detroit in April to the convention of the Associated Traffic Clubs of America, of which the Atlantic club is a member. The fall meeting of the association will be held here at the Biltmore hotel, now under construction.

An entertainment by Clifford M. Jones, professional magician who recently moved to Atlanta, was a feature of the meeting.

An examination made not long ago in London disclosed the fact that the largest eggs sold there came from Denmark. The Danish eggs, it appears, are the most popular as well as the heaviest. The great majority of them weigh more than 2 1-2 ounces. The average American egg has been found to weigh 2 2-7 ounces. The lightest Danish eggs weigh as much as the heaviest French eggs. This investigation classified the eggs as to country only. Some years ago American observations were taken as to breeds of hens. The North Carolina experiment station recorded the weight of eggs that several hens of well-known breeds laid during a period of six months. It was found that the largest eggs were produced by light Brahmas, the average weight being 2 1-2 ounces. Pullet eggs did not exceed two ounces in weight. Eggs from Black Langshan and Barred Plymouth Rock hens weighed 2 1-16 ounces each, while the eggs of the Single Comb Brown Leghorn, late-hatched Plymouth Rock, White Wyandotte and Buff Cochin hens all weighed less than two ounces each.

$9,713 GAS TAX DUE TO GEORGIA

Delinquency of Muscogee Oil Company Revealed by Cooperation of Three State Departments.

Cooperative efforts between three departments of the Georgia state government have disclosed the fact that the Muscogee Oil company, with headquarters in Phenix City, Alabama, owes the state $9,713.19 for delinquent taxes on gasoline. Of this amount, about $1,700 already has been paid to the revenue department and an agreement has been reached, it is stated, by which the balance will be paid in regular installments.

The company does most of its business in Muscogee county and Columbus, Phenix City being located directly across the river from the Georgia city. There is a difference between state officials and the company as to the amount due, the company placing the figure at about $2,000 less than the state. Careful check will be made, with the proper department of the state government of Alabama, it is said, in order to verify the company's figures before they are accepted for final settlement. Otherwise, the state of Georgia will insist on payment of the full amount as shown by its reports.

Credit Is Divided.

Credit for discovery of this delinquency is divided between the office of the comptroller general and the oil inspection office of the department of agriculture. It was made by checking figures in the comptroller general's office, which show the amount received by the state from each dealer in gasoline, under the gasoline tax law, with figures in the oil inspection office, which show the amount of gasoline inspected, on which the half-cent inspection fee tax is paid.

As a result of this check, it was found that the oil inspection office had inspected and collected inspection fees from the Muscogee Oil company for 121,350 gallons of gasoline for the final six months of 1921. The one-cent-per-gallon tax on gasoline went into effect in Georgia on July 1, 1921.

During 1922, 319,621 gallons were inspected and for 1923, up to October 1, 218,605 gallons were inspected. On October 1, 1923, the three-cent-per-gallon tax went into effect, and for the last quarter of the year, there was inspected 112,681 gallons. This showed a total of 659,576 gallons on which the one-cent tax should have been paid, and 112,681 gallons on which the three-cent tax was due on January 1 last.

These figures gave a total of $9,976.19 due the state, against which there was a credit of $263, paid on September 1, 1921, for the first quarter during which the one-cent tax was imposed.

These figures were checked by the comptroller general's office early last January and efforts immediately started to collect the sum. The amount due for the final quarter of 1923 under the three-cent rate, amounting to $3,380.43, was not classed as delinquent until after February 15, due to a provision in the law. Under the law creating the state revenue department, which came into existence on January 1, last, a penalty of 20 per cent is imposed against all taxes collected after they have been classed as delinquent.

On January 5, records in the tax department of the comptroller general's office show a letter calling for prompt settlement of the account was sent to the Muscogee Oil company. No reply was received to this letter and, on February 1, a telegram was dispatched calling for immediate report and payment, and threatening to impose full penalties as provided under laws of the state. In reply a letter was received saying that the company was working on its records and would send in its statement, with check, at an early date. A few days later, however, a letter was received saying that the company would pay its arrears of taxes through the office of the state revenue department.

$1,700 Is Received.

John M. Vandiver, revenue commission, stated on Saturday that approximately $1,700, which included the 20 per cent penalty, had been received and that the company had arranged to pay off the balance in installments, claiming that payment of the entire amount at one time would seriously embarrass it.

The difference between the state's figures on the amount due, and those of the company itself, is accounted for by the claim by the company that part of its gasoline, all of which is inspected by the Georgia department, is really sold in Alabama and is not subject to the Georgia tax. It is believed, however, that the justice of this claim can be easily ascertained by a check with figures of the Alabama department charged with the collection of that state's gasoline tax, inasmuch as gasoline sold there should, of course, pay the Alabama tax.

The oil inspectors' division of the Georgia department of agriculture has to inspect each tank car of gasoline before the seal is broken and the car opened for distribution of its contents. In this way every gallon passing through the hands of the company, is assured of inspection. Of the revenue from this half-cent-per-gallon source, approximately 25 per cent goes in payment of salaries of oil inspectors, and the balance goes directly into the state treasury.

PALATINATE PRAISED BECAUSE OF LOYALTY

Mannheim, Germany, March 1. — President Ebert, addressing a demonstration here today in favor of the occupied territories, dwelt upon the steadfast loyalty with which the Palatinate and other occupied sections of the Rhineland had adhered to the reich. The separatists had failed, he said, because the palatinate was German to the core. Without foreign help and armed support there would have been no separation.

The minister of posts, Dr. Anton Hoefle, a native of the palatinate, emphasized that despite all German efforts, 140,000 Germans were still expelled and 1,500 imprisoned. He declared that Germany was ready to come to an understanding, but that the French people must make up their minds as to whether they wanted conquests on the Rhine or reparation payments.

The Bavarian premier, Dr. Von Knilling, expressed Bavaria's thanks to the palatinate.

This was the first time President Ebert had met Premier Von Knilling since Bavaria's revolt against the reich.

Burns Is Figure in Telegram to McLean

CHIEF OF BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION IS NAMED BY MARY

Decoded Cipher Message Quotes Secret Service Head in Soothing Report to Publisher.

JUSTICE AGENTS GET CHANCE TO EXPLAIN

Phone Company Reports Bare Four Mysterious Calls, to Fall, but Caller Is Not Listed.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Washington, March 1.—The long, long trail of the oil inquiry led today into the department of justice.

A cipher message signed "Mary" found among the celebrated telegrams carried it there and the oil committee immediately made plans to follow it wherever it may go.

From William J. Burns, chief of the department's bureau of investigation; Mrs. Mary Duckstein, a special agent of the department, and from others, the oil investigators will seek to learn:

Four Big Questions.

1. The truth about reports that Edward B. McLean, publisher of The Washington Post, and a central figure in the inquiry, is himself a department of justice agent and in possession of the department's code.

2. Whether Burns directed Mrs. Duckstein to send a message to her husband, who is one of the McLean employees, saying that the "McLean investigation is under way by special agents of the justice department" and that he believed the "information is important."

3. How Duckstein and other representatives of the publisher came into possession of a copy of the code.

4. Whether all of the code messages found in the McLean file of telegrams are, like the "Mary" message, in a cipher code once used by the bureau of investigation.

Burns Summoned Her?

The "Mary" message was sent from Washington on February 2, to W. O. Duckstein, described to the committee as one of McLean's confidential men, at Palm Beach, Fla.

A paraphrase of it, furnished to the oil committee, reads:

"Sent for by Burns, who told me to say McLean investigation is under way by special agents of justice department. He believes information is important."

The message was sent by Postal Telegraph and at the bottom appeared this notation:

"Chge POST. A. D. M. For Mr. W. O. Duckstein."

Charged Wire to Paper.

Arthur D. Marks is business manager of The Post.

The paraphrase furnished to the committee bore the signature, "Mary" (Quigley, chief telephone operator of Washington Post).

Asked today how her name became confused with that of Miss Quigley, whose name appeared in one of the McLean telegrams, Mrs. Duckstein said:

"Oh, very few people know that my

Dares Fire To Save Invention From Ruins; Trapped in Blaze, Women Graze Death

The three men who risked their lives in a fire in a successful effort to save the valveless motor shown in the picture. Reading from left to right: Rothwell Gann, Ralpah Ragan, the inventor, and B. P. Allen.

BY JOHN H. HEWLETT.

An invention, representing the patient toil and savings of many years, was rescued from a fiery furnace Saturday afternoon through the efforts of Ralph Ragan, the inventor, and two friends, when flames gutted the building at 167 South Forsyth street, causing a loss estimated at between $50,000 and $60,000. The fire was featured by the narrow escape from death of several women, trapped in the building.

With the floor occupied by the Ragan Scales company a mass of flames the distracted inventor rushed to the door of the store in a frantic attempt to save his valveless motor from the blaze. He was pushed to one side by people at the entrance who told him that he would be committing suicide to enter the building.

At last two friends came to his assistance and, shoving the crowd aside, they battered down the door and swept through, in the face of a withering fire.

Just Escape Death.

The invention, mounted on a motor car chassis, was rolled out to safety just a fraction of a second before the roof collapsed, bringing down tons of machinery.

The axles were red hot and all metal parts of the car had been heated by the flames. The hands of the inventor were blistered. His friends, Rothwell Gann and B. P. Allen, were not injured.

Marine Guard Over Consulate at Ceiba Doubled. Destroyer Speeds to Puerto Cortes.

Washington, March 1.—With a force of American marines and blue jackets guarding the consulate at Ceiba and the American destroyer speeding from Jamaica to the Honduran port of Puerto Cortes, the Washington government has been forced to take action in connection with the confusing revolutionary outbreaks in the Honduran republic which have already cost the life of one American citizen.

An American negro, whose name has not been reported, was killed in the recent fighting at Ceiba during which the consulate was repeatedly struck by bullets.

Rear Admiral Dayton, commanding the special service squadron in Central American waters, and whose flagship, the cruiser Denver, is now at Ceiba, has found it necessary to double the marine guard of 35 men first sent ashore to protect the consulate. An additional force of 35 blue jackets has joined the marines of the guard and Admiral Dayton reported today that the situation at Ceiba was so menacing to American interests that he did not consider it wise to withdraw his ship from that place at present.

Several Revolts On.

While the revolutionary movement which followed the failure to elect a new president by constitutional means has been a double-headed affair from the first, apparently there are separate revolts by various leaders also in progress and banditry has broken out in some places.

Recent reports from Ceiba indicate that the fighting there which caused the landing of American marines and sailors is between the forces of the de facto government headed by President Gutierrez and an unorganized bandit force headed by a leader named Munguia. Whether Munguia is supporting one of the revolutionary parties or operating without

HATE TRAILS WAKE OF LOVE TRIANGLE

Police Suspect Eternal Problem as Cause for Minister Shooting Man on Street.

Mexico, Mo., March 1.—The police of this city are investigating on the theory that a love triangle led to the shooting Saturday of H. D. Conger, of Lincoln, Neb., a traveling salesman, by the Rev. Asa Q. Burns.

Although Dr. Burns has refused to tell why he shot Conger, or even to make any statement at all, the authorities learn that Mrs. Burns and her son have been making their home with Mr. and Mrs. L. N. Henderson, with whom Conger also had been staying.

The minister had just returned from Chicago, where he was taking a special course at Chicago university, when he met Conger on the main street here and opened fire forthwith. Conger was seriously wounded in one lung, and also slightly wounded in the hand.

The Rev. Burns then surrendered himself to patrolmen.

Rev. Burns is a member of the Baptist ministry and is regarded here as a brilliant preacher. He graduated from the William Jewell college and later received a degree of doctor of divinity from the Southern Baptist Theological seminary at Louisville. He was pastor of the Savannah Avenue Baptist church, at St. Joseph, Mo., from 1917 to 1920.

Following his surrender, the clergyman was arraigned before a justice of the peace on charges of assault with intent to kill, and after pleading not guilty, was released on $5,000 bond.

COLLEGE PUTS BAN ON PUBLIC DANCES FOR BAD CONDUCT

Starkville, Miss., March 1.—Public dances at Mississippi A. & M. college are prohibited in an order issued today by the president and members of the faculty.

The action resulted, the faculty explained in a statement to the students and the public, from the public dances held in the gymnasium, February 21-22, when the statement said, "there was such conduct on the part of some participants in these dances as reflected discredit upon the good name of this college and its student body."

SISTER OF HARDING SLATED AS WITNESS

High Individual, Unofficially Connected With Government, Is Chief Conspirator, Charge.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Washington, March 1.—Severely denouncing witnesses before the Chicago grand jury that indicted him for conspiracy and bribery in connection with his administration of the veterans bureau, Charles R. Forbes declared in two statements issued from his attorney's office today that he was the victim of a "frame up," and that he was prepared to name a "high individual, unofficially connected with the government," who, he charged, "laid the plot."

After an all day conference with his attorney, James S. Easby-Sith, it was announced that the ground work for Forbes' defense was being laid and a list of witnesses being considered. Friends of Forbes indicated that Mrs. Caroline Votaw, sister of the late President Harding, would be called as a witness, but Forbes' attorney declared he had made no plans to summon her.

Warrants Not Served.

Papers had not been served on Forbes late today, but it was announced that arrangements had been made for him to appear voluntarily Monday before a United States commissioner here and arrange bond. He would go to Chicago voluntarily, it was stated, and not oppose extradition.

Josephus Daniels Will Not Enter Georgia Primary

Former Navy Secretary Wires Friends Not To Place Name in Contest.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Raleigh, N. C., March 1.—Josephus Daniels, former secretary of the navy, today telegraphed friends in Georgia, who had requested to be allowed to place his name in the contest for democratic presidential nomination in the primaries of that state, not to enter him in the primary, according to special dispatches received here tonight by the Raleigh News and Observer, from Washington, where Mr. Daniels is at present.

Mr. Daniels' telegrams, which the dispatch said were addressed to a number of prominent democrats in Georgia, were in answer to telegraphic requests from the Georgians that they be allowed to enter his name in the primary before the closing date, next Monday. He expressed appreciation of their support but asked that no steps be taken to place his name before the people as a candidate for president.

At the same time Mr. Daniels, according to the dispatch, expressed himself as practically sure of a democratic victory this year and in a statement declared that the democrats should write a progressive platform and if he had a chance to write it he would incorporate two planks, "Thou Shalt Not Steal" and "Thou Shalt Not Kill."

He explained the first plank by adding that stealing should be outlawed "either directly, or by graft, or by stupidity" and the second by declaring that not to kill would mean that "America must take the place offered to it in 1919 to lead the world to permanent peace."

COOLIDGE TO HEAR OF NEW SCANDALS

Evidence Involving Two Congressmen and Other Officials in Vet Bureau Graft Before Executive.

Chicago, March 1.—New and startling revelations of graft by federal officials in Washington will be laid before President Coolidge Monday, it was made known today as John W. Crim, special prosecutor for the government in the grand jury investigation of the veterans' bureau, left for Washington. Crim is due in Washington Sunday.

Monday he expects to place before Mr. Coolidge evidence secured by the grand jury here involving two congressmen and a host of other officials.

Crim also will present the report of the grand jury on its veterans' bureau investigation, which culminated with four indictments against Colonel Charles R. Forbes, former head of the veterans' bureau, and John W. Thompson, of Thompson & Black, builders, of Chicago and St. Louis.

Thompson appeared before Federal Judge Carpenter and provided $10,000 bond for his appearance later. Forbes is in Washington but will come here voluntarily within a few days to furnish bond.

Trial of the two men probably will start in April or May, Crim said. The indictments charge conspiracy and bribery, in connection with the awarding of contracts for hospital construction by the veterans' bureau to the Thompson & Black company.

The report on the other findings by the jury came as a complete surprise. In some quarters the announcement of new graft evidence was attributed to Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty, who was here on Thursday, the day before the jury returned the indictments. Daugherty, it is believed, supplied the jury with much of the material for the indictments.

OPERA SEAT SALE BEGINS MARCH 10

Comfortable Plans Arranged for Hundreds Who Will Buy Tickets Well in Advance.

BY RALPH T. JONES.

When the season seat sale for Atlanta's 1924 season of Metropolitan Grand Opera opens one week from Monday, March 10, purchasers of season tickets will find several innovations in arrangements for handling crowds, which have been worked out with the view of expediting the task and making things more comfortable and convenient for the general public.

Purchasers this year will be admitted to Cable hall, on the second floor of the Cable Piano company building, where the box office will be opened. Instead of standing in line through the main store and out into the street, as in previous years, would-be purchasers will be seated in comfortable chairs as they enter, first comers in the front row of chairs, and so on.

When the sale opens first row occupants will be admitted to a separate room where the box office is located. When they have secured tickets they will leave by another exit and the second row of 12 seats will be admit-

BASEBALL SERIES MAY BE ARRANGED FOR THIS SPRING

Agreement Reached Between Two Colleges Too Late To Make Changes in Football Schedule.

ATHLETIC OFFICIALS ANNOUNCE PEACE PACT

Numerous Efforts Have Been Made in Past To Patch Up Differences Between Institutions.

Resumption of athletic relations between the University of Georgia and the Georgia School of Technology is definitel assured, according to agreement between authorities of the two institutions which was made public late Saturday afternoon.

Although the football and baseball schedules for both schools for 1924 have been completed, it is considered possible that arrangements will be made whereby teams representing the two schools will play a series of baseball games this spring. It is considered impossible that football games can be arranged now before the fall of 1925. No announcement has been made about the first meeting.

Athletic relations were severed in 1919, following a baseball game between the two schools, although no football games have been played since the fall of 1916. Two basketball games have been played since 1919, occuring in tournaments when neither team wished to do anything which would have disrupted the tournament schedule. On both occasions that the two teams have met since 1919, the sportsmanship of players was highly commended and alumni of both schools and leading citizens have endeavored from time to time since the fatal break in 1919 to bring the two schools into closer athletic contact.

Always Great Rivals.

No greater rivals ever faced a foe than the University of Georgia and Georgia Tech teams, and games between the two schools drew the largest crowds of any southern contests.

Teams representing the two schools have been the brilliant luminaries in practically every branch of sport for many years, and often it has been difficult for sport writers and officials to determine respective rank of teams of the two schools because no games were played between them. On the gridiron and on the baseball diamond, Georgia and Tech teams have set the pace for southern colleges, and on many occasions have invaded the north with brilliant success.

Announcement that it is possible for the two schools to clash in a baseball game this spring will be hailed with delight by thousands of former students of both schools, scattered throughout the nation.

If played, it is likely that all attendance records for southern college baseball games will be smashed, as the rivalry between the two schools and the natural attraction from that viewpoint has been greatly augmented during the years that the schools have not met each other in major sports contests.

Signed Agreement.

The agreement between the two schools reads as follows:

"The University of Georgia and the Georgia School of Technology, with the approval of the chancellor

'Red Virgin' of Murder Fame

BACKED BY HORDE OF SATELLITES SHE WINS DESIRE

Plays Attila on Boulevard

By JOHN O'BRIEN.

Paris, March 1.—Germaine Berton, the little bobbed-haired "red virgin" of anarchy who murmured, "I ask only silence and oblivion," as she walked out of court after a jury had declared her immune from punishment for the murder of royalist leader Plateau, has achieved her heart's desire. She is famous.

She is a "heroine" in the Latin quarter and Montmartre. Her chief delight is swooping down with a band of admiring proletarian snobs on a peaceful "bourgeois" cafe and telling the proprietor and his staff and the customers what's what and who's who, according to the evangel of the "propagandists by the deed."

The other day she was observed, surrounded by her usual courtiers, in a well known boulevard cafe, within a stone's throw of the Opera Comique, which has become the latest rendezvous of the movie stars-in-the-making, long haired journalists, flapping necktie playwrights and the rag, tag and bobtail of the international gang who hang around the Bourse and chatter glibly in Oriental tongues about the rise and fall of the franc and the dollar.

When the proprietor, who has an eye for advertising, spied his interesting visitor he bowed low before this newest celebrity and presented his "golden book" with an unctuous request for an inscription. Germaine languidly drew a gold fountain pen from her handbag and wrote a couple of lines of poor verse, the gist of which was:

"Keep it up, good bourgeois, it's safer to try to stop a leak in the kitchen sink than a bullet from a thirty-six."

Aged Greenwich Villager

:: SHE BELIEVES IN LAW—ALSO IN LIQUOR ::

Coined Spigot-Bigot Sneer

New York, March 1.—The coiner of "spigot-bigot," the new compound word designed to describe prohibitionists and to neutralize "scofflaw," is Miss Katherine Welling, a modest retiring habitue of Greenwich Village. She was the winner of the $25 prize offered by the "Harvard Advocate."

Miss Welling a little woman of sixty-seven, modestly disclaimed any credit for having gained the prize.

"It is really mostly a joke," she said. "I had written down a number of words that I thought would apply one evening when my brother, Richard, came in. He insisted on sending them at once to his Harvard paper."

In spite of the fact that Miss Welling has signified her intention of giving the $25 to the association opposed to the prohibition amendment, she disapproves either of smuggling liquor, or of buying smuggled liquor.

"Of course, I think the law should be obeyed," she said. "My family never smuggled. I'm sure my father would never have approved of it. I don't. But I think prohibition is outrageous."

What does she do with her spare time she was asked. Well, she shyly admitted that she writes a little poetry, but of course, only for her friends. She plays the piano and paints a little.

"I don't like to protrude," she laughed. "I stay behind and pull the strings. This is my only entrance into public life. And I don't like it."

60 Additional Farm Land Sales Show Prosperity

Records of sixty more farm land sales, made recently in Georgia, are published by The Constitution herewith, making the total of these sales reported by representatives of this paper high in the hundreds for the past few weeks.

The reports this week come from six counties—DeKalb, Dooly, Dodge, Laurens, Toombs and Coffee.

Thus the evidence accumulates, overwhelmingly refuting all stories of agricultural depression in the state. Where the market for farm properties in a state is as active as these sales show, there can be no question as to the basic soundness of agriculture in that state. For no one would be willing to pay large prices for farms if he did not know that those farms are capable of producing handsome returns on investment.

As in earlier reports, sales show widely varying prices per acre paid for these farms. This, of course, is due both to the section of the state, the local conditions and accessibility of the land concerned to markets, its condition, state of cultivation, agricultural value, etc.

New Sales Reported.

The sales listed this week are as follows:

DeKalb County.

Mrs. Will Long has sold to an out-of-town party for approximately $2,600, 25 acres on the Camp Gordon road.

Heads of Jackson and Davis Will Be Unveiled on June 2

The heads of Jefferson Davis and Stonewall Jackson, second and third figures, respectively, in the central group of the huge memorial to the Confederacy now being carved on the precipice of Stone Mountain, will be unveiled on June 2, according to announcement Saturday by Hollins Randolph, president of the Stone Mountain Monumental association.

The head of General Lee was unveiled on January 19, the ceremonies attracting one of the greatest crowds that ever assembled outside of a large city in Georgia. Governors of many states and high military figures attended.

Even a greater crowd is expected to attend the unveiling of the heads of Davis and Jackson, the date for the unveiling happening at the time that thousands of Confederate veterans will be en route to the annual reunion in Memphis.

The heads of Jackson and Davis will stand alongside of Lee in the great central group, the three being approximately on a level with one another. When the heads of Jackson and Davis have been finished, Mr. Borglum's program probably will be to carry the three figures (Lee, Jackson and Davis) simultaneously to completion.

Finances Needed.

President Randolph gave out the following statement concerning the finances of the memorial in connection with the unveiling announcement:

"We believe the people of the south are interested in this memorial and wish to see it carried to completion without delay. We believe they are able and willing to supply the money. We have now decided to put our faith to the crucial test. If contributions come in sufficient volume we can meet the payroll at the mountain, and the work will go forward to a glorious climax when the heads of Jackson and Davis are unveiled. If contributions do not come in sufficient volume we cannot keep the payroll going.

"We have no large cash contributions to keep the work under way. In response to our appeals through the press and by letter, we have received subscriptions aggregating $325,000 without a paid agent in the field, and at an organization cost of less than 9 per cent. These subscriptions are payable over a period of five years. The amount of cash income derived from installments paid regularly is not enough to keep the payroll going on the scale we have authorized the sculptor to proceed. We are, therefore, staking our whole program from now to June 2 on our faith in the public.

The Opportunity.

"Our founders' roll for subscribers of $1,000 offers an opportunity not equaled in history for Confederate descendants to perpetuate the names of their fathers on bronze tablets in the great memorial hall, where they will endure through the ages. Our children's founders' roll of one dollar gives a similar opportunity to boys and girls.

Children Respond.

Children of Athens, Ga., school are the latest to enroll in the children's founders' roll.

Miss Mildred Rutherford is very actively interested in securing a 100 per cent enrollment of the children of Athens and has sent in a large number of names. Individuals and the children themselves have sent in other applications for membership with the result that Athens is forging well ahead in the enrollment of the children.

One of Georgia's governors, Allen D. Candler, was placed on the children's roll last week by his young grandson, Thomas Allen Candler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Cloud Candler, of Charlotte, N. C. Little Thomas Allen was enrolled on four lines of the great book of memory—once in memory of ex-Governor Candler, once in memory of his great-grandfather, Daniel Gill Candler, who also served from Georgia; for his great grandfather, Robert L. Neal, of the South Carolina Volunteers, who was killed in action, and for his other great grandfather, James Wallace.

Grandchildren of Edward R. Hodgson, Sr., of Athens, have enrolled in a large family group in memory of Mr. Hodgson, who was a member of Cobb's famous legion.

Many New Names.

Other names appearing in the memorialization list from Athens are those of Captain John Cobb Rutherford, adjutant Cobb's legion, memorialized by Paul Vasser Seydell and John Rutherford Seydell, children of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Seydell, of Atlanta; General John B. Gordon, by John B. Gordon, Hugh H. Gordon, Jr., Prince H. Gordon, Lewis Gordon; Edward R. Hodgson, Sr., by John McCullough Hodghson, Ned Hodghson, Jr., Paul Hodghson, Robert B. Hodgson, Walter B. Hodgson, Jr., Morton S. Hodgson, Jr., Hutchins Hodgson, Robert Francis Hodgson, Athens; Bolling Jones III., Fred G. Hodgson, Sloat F. Hodgson, Sloat F. Hodgson, Newton F. Hodgson, Bryant F. Hodgson, Margaret Fassett Hodgson, Atlanta; Thomas W. Cobb, Co. A, 17th Ga. regiment, by his great grandchildren, Thomas Beckham McDorman, Eliza Cobb McDorman; Williams Rutherford, by his great-grandchildren, Lolla Hutchins Paddock and Dave Paddock; Joseph Henry Lumpkin, by his great-grandchild, Marie Upson; Howell Cobb, by his great-granddaughter, Lucy Dupree Erwin, and many others.

DID NOT GET $7,500, SAYS SHERIFF LOWRY

Making public for the first time gross receipts and expenditures of the Fulton county sheriff's office, Captain James I. Lowry presents figures to show that his net income from this office for the past year did not reach the total of $7,500.

In presenting the figures Sheriff Lowry also gives out the statement that he has demonstrated his willingness to accept the salary named by his opponents by retaining the office despite the fact that his pay for 1923 fell short of the $7,500 mark by $34.

Gross income in 1923 of the sheriff's office from all sources, as shown in the four sworn statements made to the comptroller general, was $121,076.64, and expenditures for deputies, feeding prisoners, keeping a white man to cook and inspect the food of the prisoners, clerk hire, office work, caring for records, executing mandates and judgments of the five superior and two city courts, and buying and maintaining automobiles for service, amounted to $113,610.59. This leaves a balance of $7,466.59, which was the part received by the sheriff for his year's service. Captain Lowry stated that he maintained a large force of deputies in order that the business of the people might be attended to with efficiency and dispatch.

FARM LOANS: We solicit applications for loans on Georgia Farms in sums of $1,000 to $10,000. A half million dollars available.

FARM LANDS: No man now living will ever again see prices of Georgia lands as low as they are today. The wise man will borrow money, hold the land he now owns, buy more and double his money in five years.

FARMERS: One good crop will set the farmers on their feet. Two good years will make them forget all their present troubles. Those who lose courage now, who give up the fight and let their farms pass into other hands, will wonder, five years from today, how they could have made such a blunder.

WANTED: COUNTY AGENTS

Think What This New Opportunity May Mean to You!

THOUSANDS of cotton-growers have been waiting for the high-grade, low-priced machine that dusts the boll weevil in the scientifically correct manner prescribed by the United States Government.

Here is the machine: Cherry's man-carried, two-row, rear-delivery duster that blows Calcium Arsenate behind the operator. (He walks away from the cloud of poison; not into it.)

This machine offers a dozen new and exclusive appeals to the modern grower of cotton. Form-fit to the body. Weighs only 14 pounds. Does all the work of mule-drawn machine. Lasts, with proper care, through years of constant use. Any part replaceable at any time. Worm-driven. Gears of bronze and steel—other parts of durable aluminum. Runs in oil, always smoothly and with amazing ease.

Think of the wonderful opportunity offered for County Agents contracting to distribute this remarkably successful machine! Imagine for a moment what Cherry's Duster is certain to mean for the South!

Cherry's Duster will be on the market in wholesale lots between May 1st and June 30th. Orders acceptable now for deliveries. If you are in earnest, with $500 or $1,000 to back you in your territory, write today for County Agents' Cooperative Deal. Request interview, if desired. If you are buying a new car—or equipping your present car with small diameter wheels in order to provide sufficient fender clearance—you can get Goodyear Balloon Tires in 20-, 21- and 22-inch rim sizes.

If, as is true in most cases, your present car provides sufficient clearance to permit of using balloon tires, you can get Goodyear Balloon Tires in the right sizes to fit your present wheels.

In thus providing for every motoring need, Goodyear does so in accord with its time-honored policy of shouldering the cost of new and important tire developments.

Goodyear has spent hundreds of dollars to develop, test and perfect Balloon Tires—To equip the Goodyear factories with production facilities that make possible Goodyear Balloon Tires of both types and of all sizes—

To stock Goodyear dealers everywhere with Goodyear Balloon Tires for your car.

What is the result of this Goodyear provision? In the majority of cases the car owner can get Goodyear Balloon Tires that fit his present wheels, and is thus relieved of the personal expense of new wheel and rim changes —and of discarding wheels and present tires that may still have good values in them.

Golden Anniversary Of Moore Church Will Be Observed

The 50th anniversary of the organization of Moore Memorial Presbyterian church on Luckie street will be observed by members, former members and others at both morning and night service hours Sunday.

In an issue of The Constitution, dated March 5, 1874—50 years ago—mention is made of the organization of the church, as follows: "A committee of the presbytery of Atlanta, composed of Messrs. Jones, Ketchum and Frazier, and ruling elders, W. M. Lowry and W. P. Inman, met yesterday at 3:30 p. m. in Wilson chapel and organized a new church of 16 members. It is called Third Presbyterian Church of Atlanta. Dr. A. L. Barry and Richard A. Saye were elected elders, and Samuel Stout and Julius H. Kuhns were elected deacons. God speed the good work."

The first building was located on Jones avenue and in March it was rebuilt on Latimer street. On June 28, 1891, the present building on Luckie street was dedicated, and the name changed to Moore Memorial church in honor of William A. Moore, prominent citizen, who gave much financial assistance to the struggling young church.

Dr. A. R. Holderby, who served the church as pastor for 25 years, will occupy the pulpit at the morning service hour, at 11 o'clock, and letters and messages of greetings will be read from scores of former members and many former pastors who are unable to attend. A basket dinner will be served at noon and a formal "homecoming" service will be held. Booklets telling of the history of the church, with names of former pastors and interesting sidelights in early struggles of its small membership, will be distributed.

Pastors who have served the church during its 50 years' existence include: R. C. Ketchum, 1874; T. D. Latimer, 1875-1876; Ferdinand Jacobs, 1877; M. C. Britt, 1878; N. Keff Smith, 1879-1883, 1885-1888; K. P. Julian, 1884; A. A. Little, 1889; A. R. Holderby, 1890-1915; G. R. Buford, 1915-1917; F. D. Stevenson, 1917-1918; W. T. Mann, 1919-1921; E. P. Carson, 1922, present pastor.

TREASURY PLANS NEW BOND ISSUE

Washington, March 1.—The treasury has begun consideration of the March 15 financial program involving an issue of certificates of indebtedness to meet maturing obligations and provide funds for current governmental expenditures. Although officials will not venture an estimate of the amount of certificates which it will be necessary to issue, the general belief is that it will not exceed $400,000,000.

Approximately $370,000,000 of certificates will mature March 15. There is in addition about $140,000,000 to be paid on that date in interest on other government securities. At the same time, however, the first quarterly payment of taxes must be turned over to the treasury and the proceeds of the collections of the first instalment is expected to be more than half of the amount which the treasury must pay out at that time.

Officials are finding it difficult to estimate the amount in taxes which will be received in the first instalment because of the proposal in congress to make the 25 per cent reduction in income taxes effective on this year's payments. Heretofore, a certain percentage of the smaller tax payers have remitted their full obligations on March 15, but because of the possibility that they may be required to pay less this year, a large number of those who have already made initial payments this year have remitted only the required one-fourth of all taxes due for the year.

The first quarterly payment in 1923 is nearly $500,000,000 and should the first instalment this month go within one hundred millions of that figure, the treasury will find it unnecessary to sell more than about four hundred million in new certificates. The fiscal program has been, however, to cut down the outstanding amount of securities and in the opinion of some officials the probability exists of a reduction being accomplished through the March program.

4 NEGROES ARRESTED FOR HOUSE ROBBERIES

Four negroes were arrested Saturday night by city detectives in connection with recent robberies here, and clothing valued at $1,000 recovered in the basement of 136 West Peachtree street. Police believe it is part of that stolen in raids on fashionable north side residences during the past few weeks.

The men arrested are Marion Hicks and Judson Maxwell, thought to live at the place where the clothes were found, and suspected of being ringleaders in a band which has terrorized the north side, and Jim Harris and Raymond Meadows.

Hicks and Maxwell deny that they live where the clothing was found or that they know anything of the robberies.

14 AMERICANS WIN FRENCH DIPLOMA; GEORGIAN NAMED

Paris, March 1.—Francis Cummings, blind student of the University of Delaware, ranked fourth among 71 successful candidates for the diploma of French civilization at the Sorbonne yesterday, in four months. Cummings was assisted to the classroom by a fellow student and took no notes. But he wrote a remarkable examination paper on the typewriter. In fact, so keen was his interest in his work that many did not know he was blind.

Fourteen diplomas went to Americans. Miss Florence Taylor, of Canada, took highest honors; Madeline Heckey, of Ithaca, second, and Louise Ireland, of Bar Harbor, fifth.

Other Americans were Gertrude Woodward, of the University of California; Bertha Sedgewick, of Englewood, N. J.; Dorothy Iselin, of New York; Mary Loud, of Boston; Fanny Weichtman, of Philadelphia; Evelyn Archambault, of Chicago; Susan Burchard, of Boston; Phyllis Grimm, of Georgia; Elizabeth Morgan, of Washington; Eleanor Smith, of Meriden Conn., and J. Russell Turner, of Wilmington, Del.

EDITOR IS TARRED BY UNMASKED MOB

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 1.—E. J. Foster, publisher of a weekly newspaper, reported tonight that he had been knocked unconscious, kidnaped, tarred and feathered by a group of men and abandoned in a woods near Pinellas Park, eight miles north of here.

Foster expressed the belief that the reason for the abduction and tarring was the fact that he had used the American flag in a parade which he initiated to celebrate the victory of candidates he supported in the recent recall election.

"We'll teach you to respect the flag," Foster declared one of his captors said.

Kidnaped Leaving Office.

According to Foster's story, he was kidnaped early this evening while driving away from his office. Foster said an automobile rammed into his near the business district and that he placed the four occupants of the other automobile under arrest.

As he was accompanying the four men to police headquarters in their automobile, Foster said the driver speeded up and took an opposite direction. Foster asserted that he resisted and was knocked unconscious by a blow on the side of the head.

When he regained his senses, Foster said he had been bound and gagged and was lying on the floor of the automobile, which was driven to a point near Pinellas Park, where a number of unmasked men were congregated. Foster said he was stripped, tar applied to his body and feathers scattered over him.

Did Not Recognize Men.

Foster said he did not recognize any of the men. They abandoned him in the woods he said. He made his way to a road, hailed a passing automobile and was brought back to this city. He still was tarred and feathered when he reported the occurrence to a newspaper and exhibited a wound on the right side of his head.

Mr. Foster, who carries a police badge, was taking copies of his weekly newspaper to the postoffice when the automobile accident occurred. A companion, who remained behind with Foster's automobile was not molested.

Foster is a candidate for sheriff of Pinellas county.

GREENE SHOOTING BLAMED ON WETS

Washington, March 1.—Urging an investigation into the shooting of Senator Greene, of Vermont, on the night of February 15 near the capitol in an exchange of shots when dry agents endeavored to halt suspected bootleggers, Representative Cooper, republican, Ohio, today denounced patrons of the illicit liquor interests and "wet" organizations desiring investigation of prohibition enforcement.

Speaking of prohibition conditions he said in a statement:

"Among those who deserve the condemnation of all right-minded citizens are those public officials charged with enforcing the law who fail to do their duty earnestly, honestly and without fear or favor. The best man available should be given a free hand to enforce the laws. I charge that this has not been done in Washington. It does not seem to me that either the district attorney or the United States marshal take the prohibition enforcement question with sufficient seriousness."

SLUGGED AND ROBBED VICTIM TELLS POLICE

H. L. Mann, of 2 Elixir street, was slugged by two negro bandits and robbed of $43 Saturday night as he was delivering oil at the side door of the J. E. Rose grocery store at Conally and Richmond streets.

He told police that he was walking across the sidewalk from the truck to the store with a ten-gallon can of oil in each hand when the negroes appeared, each armed with revolvers. When he started to comply with orders to throw up his hands, he necessarily dropped both cans of oil to the sidewalk. The noise evidently made the bandits believe that he intended to offer resistance, and both struck him on the head with the butts of their revolvers, knocking him unconscious.

He was taken to Grady hospital, where his wounds were dressed.

GIRL MAY LOSE HAND

Child Was Bitten While Playing With Negro Child.

Four-year-old Emma Kate Deas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Deas, of 31 Hill street, may lose her right hand as the result of being bitten by a small negro girl with whom she was playing several days ago. Infection developed and the child was taken to Grady hospital Saturday.

CUBAN ARRESTED FOR SECOND TIME ON BOOZE CHARGE

Washington, March 1.—Prohibition enforcement officers today held Mario Fraginals, who claims to be a son of the Cuban minister to Spain, on charges of selling and possessing liquors in violation of law. Fraginals was arrested about a year ago on similar charges and pleaded diplomatic immunity at that time. Search of his apartment by the officers revealed only one quart of gin, which was seized as evidence. More liquor would have been discovered, the officers said, had Fraginals not been forewarned of the raid.

DARES FLAMES TO SAVE INVENTION

Brotherton and South Forsyth streets, made several trips into the room before the fire had gained such headway, bringing out valuable parts of the motor. He was not injured.

The valveless motor has been acclaimed a great success and was on the verge of being shipped to Detroit, Mich., when the fire caused slight damage in its mechanism. However, there will be only short delay, Mr. Ragan said Saturday.

Mechanics at the garage declared that running at a speed of more than 40 miles an hour during a recent trial test, no exhaust of the motor was audible. The value of the new type of car is beyond estimate, several automobile men said Saturday afternoon.

As it stands now more than $50,000 has been expended in its perfection and years of thought and labor devoted to it. Mr. Ragan, the inventor, is a graduate of Yale. He also attended the University of Georgia and the Georgia School of Technology. He probably will make a fortune through sale of his invention.

Origin Not Learned.

The origin of the fire which damaged three firms on South Forsyth street is as yet undetermined. It is thought that the blaze originated in the Milton Bradley company, but fire officials could not confirm this report.

By 3 o'clock all of the city's available fire-fighting apparatus had been called into service. The fire threatened to spread over a wide area and Chief Cody personally conducted the fight against the flames.

An immense throng of onlookers was held at a safe distance by special officers delegated from the police department. Traffic was forced to make a wide detour.

The three firms which occupied the building suffered heavy losses. They were Ragan Scale company, 167 South Forsyth street, on the first floor; the Merchant Towel company, on the second floor, and the Milton Bradley company, on the third floor. The Ragan Scale company estimated its loss at $25,000, partly covered by insurance.

TWO HOUSES DESTROYED BY FLAMES SATURDAY.

Two houses were completely destroyed and four others badly damaged Saturday afternoon by a blaze which started in a negro residence at 32 Fitzgerald street. All the houses, which were occupied by negroes, were wooden structures. Nos. 32 and 28 Fitzgerald street were destroyed while 26, 23, 36 and 26 suffered heavy damage.

Firemen were kept busy for almost two hours fighting the flames, and traffic along Boulevard at Fitzgerald street was blocked for some time. Fire authorities are investigating to ascertain the origin of the fire.

U. S. TAKES HAND IN HONDURAN ROW

any connection with the revolutionary movements has not been disclosed.

Three Candidates in Field.

The two principal revolutionary movements are those of General Arias, who is understood to be dominating the de facto government forces and to hold the capital, Tegucigalpa, and most of the north coastal region of Honduras; and the party headed by General Carias, who obtained the greatest number of votes in the presidential elections but failed of the necessary majority. General Carias proclaimed himself president February 1, and withdrew towards the Nicaraguan border. Subsequent reports have not shown to what extent he has been personally engaged in directing the fighting forces.

The third presidential candidate, Bonilla, also is said to have some military support, but just which force is seeking his preferment is not known.

Of the active military forces, that commanded by General Ferrera has occupied most of the southeastern part of Honduras including the town of Conayagua, principal interior city of Honduras next to the capital, and was recently reported as advancing from the west to attack the capital.

Americans Ask Aid.

A second force, commanded by General Tosta, has been operating in the north and occupied the town of San Pedro Sula, principal city in the north coastal district. This force has been advancing toward Puerto Cortes and is said to have occupied the town of Tela.

Presumably the approach of an attacking force caused the American consul at Puerto Cortes to send out yesterday the request that a warship be ordered to that place. So far as known there has been no fighting in the vicinity of Puerto Cortes.

The de facto government forces in the capital and along the north coast are said to be greatly demoralized and to be offering little resistance to the revolutionists. It is not known, however, whether the rival active military commanders, Generals Ferrera and Tosta, are operating independently or supporting the candidacy of one or another of the three presidential candidates who have proclaimed themselves provisional presidents.

Peace Offers Fail.

The de facto president, Lopez Gutierrez, could not succeed himself under the Honduran constitution, and announced at the conclusion of his constitutional term his intention of retaining power only long enough to permit a new election to be conducted.

With American lives and property in Honduras jeopardized by the revolutionary activity, the Washington government has sought to find some way of bringing the rival political and military leaders together in order to arrange a program under which a peaceful solution of the difficulty could be worked out. Thus far every effort has failed and officials here are frankly pessimistic as to the outlook. Whether the landing of American forces at Ceiba will be followed by a more extensive intervention to restore order cannot now be determined.

Pensioners of the War of 1812

The last living soldier of the war of 1812 died 28 years ago at the age of 105. There are, however, two score widows of veterans of that last war with Great Britain, who are still living and drawing pensions from the U. S. Government. Only five of these ladies live in the central Southern States. Their pictures and brief stories of their lives are given below.

IN 1812, England was at war with France, and being in need of service men she claimed justification in stopping American ships on the high seas and searching them for British subjects, to be impressed into her service. On several occasions American ships were seized "for carrying contraband" when they were searched and found to have among the passengers or crew a person thought to be a British subject. This the United States considered a violation of the freedom of the seas, and caused complications to arise which led to the War of 1812, in which the world's youngest nation matched itself against one of the oldest and strongest.

The war was fought mostly on the sea, but there were land campaigns along the Canadian border, around Washington, and at New Orleans. America's fighting strength consisted of an army of about 85,000 regulars and 471,000 militiamen and volunteers, and a navy of 20,000 men. The war lasted about two and one-half years, and was brought to an end by a conference at Ghent, in December, 1814; but so slow were the means of communication that two great battles were fought before news of the peace treaty reached America. One of these was a naval battle in which the famous old frigate, "Constitution," captured two British men-of-war; and the other was the Battle of New Orleans, where General Andrew Jackson's militiamen defeated the British troops under General Packenham.

Peace has now reigned 110 years between the two countries, and their trust of each other has grown so great that there is not a single fort of either nation along the whole extent of the Canadian border.

It is an interesting fact that, of the widows of our soldiers and sailors of this old war who are still drawing pensions, on account of the services of their husbands, only five are now living in the central Southern States. The oldest of these is Mrs. Huff, of Kentucky; and one of the youngest, Mrs. Thompson, lives in Virginia.

All five of these remarkable old ladies, living in these Southern States, where Thedford's BLACK-DRAUGHT has been known and used with success as a family liver remedy for nearly 90 years, have used Black-Draught themselves, with success, for many years, and each gave a short interview to a lady visitor who recently called at their homes. Brief reports of these interviews follow.

Helps with Housework at 105

MRS. MAHALA WELLS HUFF, of Louisa, Ky., is the widow of Private James Huff, a Virginia militiaman who served in the Fourth regiment, Taylor's brigade, until honorably discharged on March 10, 1814. Mrs. Huff, dean of pensioners of the War of 1812, is 105 years old, but her daughter-in-law (Mrs. Henderson Wells) wrote in October that the old lady "has excellent health and is strong." She helps with the housework, her hearing is good and she can see to thread a needle.

Mrs. Huff says:

"I used to have sick spells and suffered quite a bit. It was necessary for me to watch myself, for when constipated these spells were more severe and lasted longer. It would be necessary for me to take a laxative. My daughter-in-law used to give me Black-Draught, which acted quickly and gave me relief. It is splendid for constipation, and after taking a few doses my bowels acted regularly and I felt much better. I have not had a bad spell for fourteen years now."

One of the Youngest

MRS. FANNIE V. THOMPSON gets her mail on a Kingsport (Tenn.) R. F. D., but lives in the edge of Scott County, Virginia. She is only 75—one of the youngest pensioners of the War of 1812. Her husband was Private G. W. Thompson, of Capt. Wm. Hill's Company, Virginia militia. He was born in King George County, Va., and named in honor of George Washington, then President of the United States. He enlisted at Abingdon, and fought at Norfolk.

Mrs. Thompson says:

"Two years ago while I was visiting relatives in Russell County, Virginia, I got a Ladies Birthday Almanac and in it I read about Black-Draught. It seemed to be a very remarkable medicine, so I thought I would try it. When I got home, my daughter got a box of this medicine at the store and we began to use it. . . Occasionally I suffer from headache caused from constipation and biliousness, and for it I have invariably used Black-Draught for the last two years.

"My health has always been good. I am now 75 years old, and have led a very active life, such as a farmer's wife has to. My husband has been dead almost 40 years, and I live with my son who owns this farm."

Pensioner for Many Years

MRS. SARAH JANE SIZEMORE, the widow of Private Bird Sizemore (of Capt. Poole's Company, Virginia militia), has received a pension from the United States for many years. Mrs. Sizemore was born Oct. 27, 1826—97 years ago—in Halifax County, Virginia. At 30, she married the veteran of the War of 1812, but has been a widow over half a century. According to Mr. W. D. Wood, her son, Thedford's Black-Draught was Mrs. Sizemore's favorite liver medicine long before she came to live with her granddaughter, Mrs. P. M. Ladd, of Cobb, Ky. Mrs. Sizemore, herself, says:

"I have taken Black-Draught for a great many years, and have found it to be an excellent remedy for biliousness and intestinal troubles. About thirty years ago I began taking this medicine for my liver. It is the best thing I know of for constipation. My health is very good, and has been for a long time. I never take anything but simple home remedies."

Farm Manager at 84

ALTHOUGH 84, Mrs. Cornelia H. Clopton still is active manager of her farm near Americus, Ga. She was the third wife of Dr. Thomas Clopton, a Virginia militiaman who fought in the War of 1812. For that service, the U. S. Government pays Mrs. Clopton a pension. She keeps house for herself, and says she can do a "full day's work" in her flower garden which she prizes very highly.

Mrs. Clopton says her acquaintance with Thedford's Black-Draught dates back twenty years.

"A neighbor of mine recommended it to me that long ago," she says, "and I have taken it when I needed anything of the kind ever since. For the last two or three years I have been frequently troubled with constipation and bowel complaints, and when these troubles come on I take Black-Draught. I keep a box of Black-Draught always in the house."

Mrs. Wade a "Free-Lance"

FARLEIGH WADE, a rifleman in Capt. Pryor's Company of Virginia militia, helped Gen. Jackson win the battle of New Orleans; then he came to Tennessee and won a wife. The old rifleman's widow, Mrs. Louisa Wade, of South Pittsburg, Tenn., can best tell the rest of the story.

"In our family we have used Black-Draught for 20 years," she says. "I have suffered a great deal during my life from constipation and costiveness and nothing seemed to do me so much good as Black-Draught. . . For the dull, heavy headache which comes from a clogged condition of the system, I regard Black-Draught as a fine remedy. Sometimes I take it in the form of a tea, and sometimes I take it 'dry so.' For years I was never without it in the house. Now I don't keep house, but I get this old stand-by when I need it.

"I will be 87 years old next November and my health has always been good. I get around without any difficulty—go and come when I please. I'm a free-lance—sometimes I stay with my son in South Pittsburg and sometimes I visit my sister in Jasper. I get around everywhere by myself.

"My husband was a soldier in the War of 1812. He was at the Battle of New Orleans and I have often heard him tell about Gen. Jackson and the fortifications made of cotton-bales. If he had lived he would have been 126 years old. . . I voted for Harding when he ran for President, and I am interested in the conditions of our country."

Save Time on Buttonholes.

Buttonholes on a baby's dress may be cut off in a strip when the dress is worn out and sewed under a tuck in little girls' blouses. The buttonholes in little boys' trousers are made in bands of durable material and can be ripped out and sewed into other garments when the trousers are discarded. DAUGHERTY PLOT IS FORBES' CLAIM frame-up," Forbes said to newspapermen in the presence of his attorney. "I am the man who was framed, and I know the exact day the plot was laid and the individual who directed the frame-up—he is a high individual, unofficially connected with the government."

Forbes was particularly severe in his attacks on Elias H. Mortimer, named as the agent of Thompson & Black, contractors, and Brigadier General Charles E. Sawyer. He attacked Mortimer's testimony before the senate investigating committee and asked in one of his statements why he had not been indicted along with himself and J. W. Thompson.

Hints at More Collusion.

In his second statement, in answer to questions put to him by newspapermen, Forbes referred to the visit to Chicago by Attorney General Daugherty and questioned whether it was to assist the grand jury in returning indictments or for other reasons.

Replying to questions as to an alleged connection of Mortimer with the department of justice, Forbes interrogated:

"Why has he been at large on bail nearly a year under an indictment for conspiracy to violate the prohibition law, returned in the United States district court in New York, with no action taken in the case since he gave bond on June 3, 1923, Colonel Tom Felder, Daugherty's associate in the Morse pardon case, appearing as his counsel.

Real Crooks Shielded, Claim.

"Why has not the department of justice taken action against him and certain officials for conspiracy to violate the liquor laws, based on documentary evidence furnished by me to the department of justice 18 months ago, the discovery of which was the first intimation I had of Mortimer's real character.

Forbes charged that the "real crooks" were being shielded.

He further charged that General Sawyer's work in connection with bureau activity "had more to do with preventing proper administration of the laws for the relief of the ex-service man than all other causes combined." He made a sizzling attack on the physician of the late President Harding, his charges ringing with invective and denunciation.

Forbes declared he had "great sympathy," however, for J. W. Thompson, one of those indicted, "because I believed he is as completely innocent as myself." He said his acquaintance with Thompson was slight and "purely social," having been introduced to him in the veterans' bureau by Mrs. Votaw.

Says Testimony False.

"Knowing the utter falsity of Mortimer's story concerning any conspiracy or other improper conduct between Mr. Thompson and myself," Forbes asserted, "I am convinced that his testimony relating to transactions between him and Thompson, of which I have no personal knowledge, are equally false."

In a statement issued earlier in the day, Forbes declared he welcomed "these indictments with a clear conscience because they will permit me to present my case before a fair court of justice and a jury of my peers."

Forbidden, he charged, to present the "facts to the senate committee," his statement added that his "destruction was sought by perjury, subornation of perjury and the suppression of documentary and other evidence which would have fully exonerated me."

Plans "Complete" Defense.

Forbes asserted the constitution gave him the right to present to "my complete defense before the Chicago tribunal and I intend to exercise it to the limit."

He charged there was "no truth" in the testimony given before the senate committee, "which reflected" upon "his honor and integrity," and that evidence taken before it late at night on November 7, 1923, tended to show an attempt to bribe a witness, and that this testimony had been "suppressed" by the committee.

Alluding to his administration of hospital construction, Forbes declared:

Will Name Names.

"If I were crooked, or dishonest, would I seek to locate hospitals on government property when the law gave me the right to choose the ground? Would I have turned over the construction to the army and navy to whom I gave entire jurisdiction, control and authority?"

He added he believed both the army and navy had the "finest engineering organizations in the United States."

In this connection, however, he asserted he proposed to name "at the proper time every individual who has been to see me and their influences they brought to bear upon me in connection with hospital construction."

"I don't care where it hits," he added emphatically, and continued:

"I hope to see the United States senate give me an opportunity to testify before an impartial committee concerning costs of hospitals they never have heard about—in addition to documents and witnesses."

"Regarding the congressmen connected with the so-called scandal," Forbes declared, "there is nothing to that. But I know all about it."

ted. While this plan may not result in a great saving of time, which, under all circumstances, is really impossible, it will at least provide a much more comfortable manner of waiting than standing in line, out on the street.

C. B. Bidwell, treasurer of the Atlanta Music Festival association, in charge of the opera season, and Colonel William Lawson Peel, president, last week visited Chattanooga to attend the three opera performances given in that city by the Chicago Opera company.

"Chattanooga's first venture into the grand opera field proved a great success," said Mr. Bidwell. "That city is to be congratulated."

"A number of Atlanta music lovers attended the Chattanooga series," he continued, "and we met numerous Chattanoogans who told us they were coming to Atlanta in April to hear the Metropolitan company in its fourteenth annual season here. I believe that the Chattanooga season will so develop interest in that city and its surrounding territory that more people from there will attend Atlanta opera than ever before.

Praises "Mefistofele."

"One of the great features of the Chattanooga series was the Boito opera, "Mefistofele," with Feodor Chaliapin in the title role. As he is the only one of the artists who appeared there who also is to sing in Atlanta this season it may interest our Atlanta friends to know that he was in excellent voice and gave a magnificent performance."

Chaliapin is to sing twice in Atlanta during the 1924 week, in Gounod's "Faust," and in the Russian opera, "Boris Godonow." The latter is said by all critics to be the great basso's finest role.

Ticket Sale Plans.

The Atlanta season opens Monday, April 21. Sale of season tickets will continue through Saturday, March 29, after opening on Monday, March 10.

Sale of single performance seats will commence at the Cable Piano company office on April 7, continuing right through the week of the actual performances. The box office will be moved to the auditorium on Monday, April 21, the date of the opening opera.

Probably never before in the 14 years' history of grand opera in Atlanta has the Metropolitan sent any greater galaxy of stars south than is coming here this year. In addition to Chaliapin, concededly the greatest acting singer of generations, as well as one of the greatest bassos the world has known, Gigli and Martinelli, the Metropolitan's two supreme tenors, will both appear.

Other male stars include Scotti, Danise, De Luca, Rothier, Picco, Edward Johnston (a newcomer to Atlanta—a tenor), Tokatyan, etc.

Favorites Return.

Frances Alda, soprano, will reappear at the auditorium after a lapse of several years. She will sing on the Monday night in Flotow's melodious "Marta." Then there will be two or three important newcomers among the feminine contingent of human songbirds, including Ina Bourskaya, sensation of the current New York season. Others who will sing here for the first time include Elizabeth Rethberg and Jeanne Gordon.

Rosa Ponselle, Atlanta's favorite soprano, will be back, as well as Lucrezia Bori, Marion Telva, Queena Mario, Florence Easton, Ellen De Lossy, etc.

Opera Schedule.

The program for this season, one of the most popular collections of opera ever presented anywhere within a period of six days, is as follows:

Monday night, "Marta;" Tuesday matinee, "Il Trovatore;" Wednesday night, "Boris Godonow;" Thursday matinee, "Rigoletto;" Friday night, "Fedora;" Saturday matinee, "Faust;" Saturday night, "I Pagliacci" and "Cavalleria Rusticana."

BURNS IS FIGURED IN WIRE TO M'LEAN

'pet' name is 'Mary.'" Her name is Mrs. Jessie Duckstein.

Mrs. Duckstein was then at the oil committee hearing room in response to a subpoena and she declined to discuss the reference to the "McLean investigation" in her telegram.

Burns Says Code Old.

Expressing his willingness to tell the oil committee all he knows, Burns said he understood the code employed in the "Mary" message was used at one time by agents of the justice department.

"The department of justice," he said, "never had anything to do with the oil scandal or Teapot Dome. I never gave any tips to McLean. The only telegram to McLean that I know about was all right. It contained no tips of any kind."

Burns would not deny the report that McLean was on the roll of special agents of the bureau of investigation at a nominal salary of $1 a month, and that he had been furnished with an official badge and a pistol. There have been reports that in the past a number of persons have been enrolled as agents, at such a salary, with an understanding that they would give only part of their time to departmental work.

Walsh Demands Copy of Code.

After learning that the "Mary" message was in a one-time department of justice cipher, Senator Walsh, democrat, Montana, the dominant figure of the oil investigation, sent to the department for an official copy. At first his request was refused on the ground that his agent was not sufficiently identified and the senator then wrote a formal letter to the department.

A formal subpoena for Burns was withheld, Senator Walsh saying that he would be "invited" to appear in the course customarily followed in the case of government officials. He will be examined after the committee resumes its hearings next Tuesday.

Advertising the code matter in the senate, Senator Caraway, democrat, Arkansas, charged Attorney General Daugherty with responsibility for use of a department of justice cipher in telegrams sent on behalf of McLean.

Would Question Coolidge.

"I would like to ask the president himself," said Senator Caraway, "whether he had any communication with those people in Florida. He owes an explanation to 100,000,000 people as to why McLean had any right to a 'quick and easy access to the white house.'"

The oil committee examined John F. Major, author of most of the McLean telegrams, and John J. Spurgeon, managing editor of the Washington Post, as to McLean's private wire to Florida, but got little additional information.

Closing the committee room doors, the investigators examined a new batch of telegrams and records of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone company. It found additional code messages and that three mysterious telephone calls had been made to Albert B. Fall at New Orleans from the New Willard hotel here. Officials of the telephone company will be asked why the name of person or persons making the calls do not appear in the records.

Probe At Three Rivers, Too.

After the committee had adjourned until Tuesday, subpoenas were issued for the managers of the telegraph offices at Three Rivers, N. M., Fall's home. They will be required to bring to Washington all messages sent or received by Fall, Harry F. Sinclair, J. W. Zevely, Robert Stewart, of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, and H. M. Blackmer, of the Mid West Oil company.

The subpoenas call for such messages between January 1, 1921, three months before Fall became a member of the cabinet, down to the present time. While ordinarily records are kept by the telegraph offices for only one year, the committee has information that the Three Rivers office has the messages for the entire period from January 1, 1921.

With the issuing of these subpoenas the committee's dragnet for telegrams between the more important personages whose names have been brought into the oil scandal covers a wide field.

Many Messages Lost.

But the investigators probably never will get trace of hundreds of messages that it desired particularly—those that passed over the private wire McLean had installed to Palm Beach at the time his representatives were seeking to keep him off the witness stand.

Major told the committee today that he personally had destroyed the copies of those sent from Washington and that the copies received at Palm Beach also had been destroyed. It was the practice to destroy them each night, he testified, adding that there was nothing strange in this as they were private messages relating to McLean's business.

Senators said the telegrams furnished today by the Western Union company contained nothing "sensational" unless it be that matters of that character will be disclosed by the deciphering of the code telegrams. They added, however, that some of the telegrams had served to fill gaps left by some of the messages perviously read into the record.

Search to Reveal More?

Scores of additional telegrams from the Washington offices of the Western Union and Postal companies are looked for by the committee when the search of the files of those offices has been completed on the basis of the new subpoenas calling for messages sent to or received by Fall Harry F. Sinclair, E. L. Doheny, McLean and others from December 1, 1923, to February 28, 1924.

Records of a number of long distance telephone calls made from Washington to Fall and others were supplied today by C. T. Clagett, of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., but committeemen said they showed no calls made to these persons by any of the oil investigators or administration officials.

Four Calls Significant.

The four calls put through to Fall without the name of the persons making them has aroused the curiosity of the investigaters, who expressed surprise that such a transaction could be possible. Their belief is that who ever called Fall must have been of much more than passing prominence and influence.

Not since the oil inquiry got under way last October has there been a larger array of witnesses on hand than was present today in the committee room. They included Francis H. McAddoo, of New York, counsel for McLean and son of William C McAdoo.

The photographers sought to get a picture of Mr. McAdoo, but he flatly refused to pose, and when the camera men undertook to "snap" him as he left the building he successfully screened his face.

Among the other witnesses present were Mr. and Mrs. Duckstein, who chatted for some time with Assistant Attorney General Holland, who is observing the investigation for the department of justice by direction of President Coolidge.

Resume Hearings Tuesday.

This was while the witnesses and spectators were waiting outside the room for the committee to finish its examination of telegrams and telephone records. That wait lasted an hour and then those present under subpoena were told that they were excused until the next public hearing Tuesday.

Adjournment until that time was taken, Chairman Lenroot said, at the request of Senator Walsh, who has an important matter before another senate committee next Monday.

Additional employees of McLean probably will be heard Tuesday, as Senator Walsh desires to wind up this phase of the inquiry before taking up the reports of the auditors who have examined the books of brokerage firms in Washington, New York and Cleveland in search of possible records of transaction in Sinclair Oil stock by government officials just prior to and subsequent to the lease of Teapot Dome.

SMITHERS EXPLAINS HIS WORK FOR McLEAN.

Washington, March 1.—E. W. Smithers, for more than 20 years a telegraph operator at the white house, who operated the Washington end of the private telegraph wire from The Washington Post to E. B. McLean in Florida, made a statement tonight concerning this special work. He is under subpoena by the senate oil committee, but was not called today, although present at the committee hearing.

"I attended the senate committee's hearing today," the statement said, "in response to a summons, and hoped for the opportunity to testify in order to put an end to unwarranted rumors and unfounded inferences."

"I am employed at the white house in the day time as a telegraph operator. The number of years that I have been so employed ought to be sufficient to attest that I have performed my duties there satisfactorily and never violated any trust reposed in me.

Was "Extra Work."

"Like many of the telegraph operators who are in the government service during the day, I have always felt that I had a right to add to my earnings by working as a telegraph operator at night.

"Last month I was employed by The Washington Post for the sole purpose of operating a leased wire available to that newspaper after 6 o'clock at night. This employment had no relation to and in no way interfered with my work at the white house.

"The only duty I was called upon to perform for the Washington Post, and Mr. McLean was that of sending and receiving by telegraph messages given to me at the Washington office, or addressed to that office from Palm Beach.

"I was never asked by Mr. McLean or any one else about anything that went on at the white house.

"I am sure that anyone who knows me will understand that it would be impossible for any person to obtain from me any information which came to my knowledge in my employment at the executive offices.

"I have never been asked by any officials of the government for any information regarding telegrams transmitted or received by me over the Post wire.

"The whole story may be summed up thus:

"I am an telegraph operator employed by the government in day time and I in my own time have accepted perfectly legitimate employment as an operator in an outside office during hours when I am not engaged by the government. I assert that there can be no legitimate criticism of this perfectly legitimate action of mine."

To avoid any possible misconception and that you may have the facts, I make the following statement:

The total revenues of this office for the year 1923, which includes the allowance made by the county commissioners for feeding the prisoners at the jail, which range from 200 to 250 per day; a white man to look after the cooking and inspect the food for the prisoners; attending seven courts, three criminal and four civil courts by the deputies; all office work; taking care of the records; serving processes; executing the mandates of the court and executing the judgments of five superior and two city courts; also commissions on all sheriff's sales from any and all sources, the gross revenue received was $121,076.64, all of which was reported in my four sworn statements to the Comptroller General as required by law. Total expenses of every kind, $113,610.25, leaving a net total to me of $7,466.59. Out of this total gross income all the expenses must be met, such as salaries of deputies, clerk hire, office expenses, buying and maintaining automobiles for use of the deputies; purchase of gasoline for automobiles in service; feeding prisoners in jail and incidentals.

After absolute legitimate expenses of this office have been deducted, the average net amount received by me has not exceeded $7,500 per year.

Do not be misled by extravagant and loose claims and statements to the contrary; they are not in accord with the actual facts.

Buster Brown And Tige Will Entertain Kids

Famous Comic Strip Characters Will Arrive Here March 8.

Children of Atlanta are looking forward in eager anticipation of the visit of Buster Brown and his famous dog, "Tige," who will arrive in this city March 8 and stage a free exhibition at the city auditorium on the morning of this day.

The entertainment features will include a two-reel motion picture comedy, which will delight all the little folks, and then Buster and Tige will do a number of stunts that have made both of them famous in the Sunday comics.

Every child in the city is cordially invited to be present at the auditorium on the morning of March 8. Admission will be entirely free.

The entertainment will be held under the auspices of the shoe department of the J. M. High company and will be in cooperation with the Brown Shoe company, of St. Louis, manufacturers of the famous Buster Brown shoes for children.

The Seized Truck.

"You can have that truck for $800 and four months' time to pay," the dealer offered.

"It's a sale," the customer agreed "I figure that with a truck to do my delivering, I can increase my furniture business 50 per cent."

"Of course," said the truck dealer, "you'll have to sign up the usual conditional sale agreement, saying that the title and ownership of the truck remain in me."

The customer paid the down payment, signed the agreement and took the truck.

A week later the dealer met the sheriff driving the very same truck down the street.

"Where'd you get the truck?" the dealer asked.

"Seized it," said the sheriff. "Fellow was using it to transport liquor contrary to law."

"But," the truck dealer objected, "I've got a lien on that truck under a conditional sale agreement."

"Well," the sheriff said, "that's your funeral—not mine. You'll have to fight it out by law."

Where does the dealer stand?

In the case involving this point and reported in 206 Southwestern Reporter, 748, the supreme court of Arkansas decided that the dealer had no remedy.

"Indeed, the sale itself gave the right of possession, and the violation of the law was committed under the possession thus conferred," said the court.

In a similar case a federal court has ruled: "When property becomes liable to forfeiture under the potive provisions of a statute, owners who have in no way participated in the frauds which caused the forfeiture must seek redress from the wrongdoers who unlawfully used the property with which they were intrusted; or they can apply to the officers of the government invested with the authority to remit forfeitures."—M. L. Hayward.

DOG FANCIER FACES MAIL FRAUD CHARGE

Memphis, Tenn., March 1.—Allegations that T. E. McLendon, dog fancier, of Germantown, Tenn., through other persons, maintained a mythical establishment in Chicago known as the "United Kennel club" and that his blooded animals were supposed to have been raised at "Hermanville, La.," were made today by O. O. Sugg, postoffice inspector, at McLendon's hearing before a United States commissioner on a charge of using the mails to defraud in connection with the sale of hunting dogs.

Sugg declared, "Hermanville, La.," does not show on the map and asserted that McLendon's northern operations actually were carried on at Kalamazoo, Mich.

McLendon was convicted several months ago on a similar charge, but appealed from the verdict returned in federal district court here. Since that time he is alleged to have operated under the name of another man.

Sugg, presenting a specific case, cited an instance in which four dogs, supposedly pedigreed females, said to have been sold to C. C. Woodward, of Tampa, Fla., for $400, are alleged to have proved to be mere puppies.

CLARK UNIVERSITY PLANS FUND DRIVE

A country-wide campaign to develop Clark university into a greater institution will be undertaken as the result of a "booster" rally held Friday night in the university dining hall. About 200 persons attended.

Dr. W. G. Clinton, of Atlanta; Dr. John L. Seaton, educational director of the M. E. church, New York, and Dr. P. M. Watters, president of Gammon Theological seminary, spoke briefly. Several committees to conduct the campaign were appointed. Resolutions indorsing President Simson and his faculty were adopted.

Mrs. F. S. Julian and her sister, two Los Angeles women, have perfected individual radio sets, without aerial, tubes, batteries or ground wires, and they claim to have communicated with each other at a distance of 2,000 miles.

WILL ESTABLISH 20 BUYING STATIONS FOR DAIRY LINE

Gate City Company Planning Big Extension of Business Throughout the South.

The Gate City Dairy and Ice Cream company is now perfecting plans for establishing approximately 20 stations in the southeastern states for the purchasing of sour cream to be used in their creamery butter department.

One such station has been established as an experiment and the successful operation of this station has influenced the company to handle the large purchase necessary in the manufacture of creamery butter through this plan.

The farmer in the station's district brings his sour cream to this station and is immediately given an order on the bank for the amount of the cream, whether it is one-half gallon or 50 gallons. The agent is constantly in attendance and is prepared to receive any quantity of cream at any time. Accumulations of sour cream are shipped from the station to the Gate City plant every day.

Another station is now being established in the heart of the dairying district of western North Carolina, and will provide thousands of pounds of butter fat for the Gate City products.

Mr. Helmer, the president of the Gate City Dairy and Ice Cream company states: "The establishment of our sour cream stations throughout the southeastern states will provide my company with ample raw material to increase our creamery butter department to a capacity of more than 1,000,000 pounds in 1924."

"We believe that the farmers of the southeast will be aided materially by being provided with a cash market close at hand for milk and sour cream. It has been conclusively proven that the farmer who conducts a dairy herd is the farmer who makes money, and our creamery butter department will be of incalculable benefit to the farmers of the southeast."

The Gate City Dairy and Ice Cream company has the exclusive sales privilege of heathized creamery butter and are already oversold on this product, but the company expects to increase its production to 100,000 pounds within 90 days and will have a ready market for many thousand pounds in addition, as the consumption of butter in the state of Georgia alone is over 20,000,000 pounds annually.

SAM M. CARSON MADE AETNA GENERAL AGENT

Mr. Carson is a former president of the Atlanta Association of Life Insurers. He is one of the best known insurance men in the south and is a business executive of recognized ability.

DISCHARGE OF PART OF GRAND JURY RULED ILLEGAL

Nashville, Tenn., March 1.—In a written opinion delivered in division No. 1 of county criminal court this afternoon on the removal of five members of the grand jury Thursday by Judge Chester W. Hart, of division No. 2, Judge J. D. B. Debow declared he considered the action illegal and void. He suggested that the entire grand jury be discharged and a new one appointed, each judge naming six members. This procedure could be repeated over and over should conditions justify, he pointed out.

Judge Debow said that believing as he does, that Judge Hart's action was not legal, he could not bring himself to consent to appoint new jurors to fill the vacancies.

Under the law each of the two criminal court judges appoints six members of the grand jury, and the members discharged by Judge Hart following an investigation by him of the return of "no true" were appointees of Judge Debow.

BURNETT GOES WITH ATLANTA MFG. CO.

J. N. Burnett, well-known young Atlanta business man, has formed a connection with the Atlanta Manufacturing company, located at 231 1-2 Stewart avenue. This concern manufactures awnings, tents and other canvas specialties and is enjoying a prosperous business.

Prior to his affiliation with the new concern, Mr. Burnett sold awnings in connection with a window shade and drapery business in Atlanta.

HOUDINI WILL EXPOSE SPIRITUALISTIC FAKES

Harry Houdini, internationally famous mystifyer, who has baffled the public, the shrewdest police, and the leading scientists in this and other countries for the past twenty years, is announced for a special engagement in Atlanta on Thursday night, March 13, at the Woman's Club auditorium.

HARRY HOUDINI.

His performance will be based mainly on "Spooks," and other fraudulent spiritualistic phenomena in which he exposes the fakery and hokum of the so-called "miracle mongers."

Mr. Houdini is making a special tour of the south under management of the Alkahest Lyceum system of this city, and will appear only in Atlanta for one performance. He is bringing his regular vaudeville company with him, and will offer several of his biggest sensational demonstrations and magical stunts.

He puts up a $5,000 guarantee that he can perform any stunt by trickery which the spiritualists profess to do by supernatural power. A feature of the program here will be his famous water tank stunt, which so thrilled the members of the London Psychic Research society, that the president of that organization, Sir Conan Doyle, in a publised book declared Houdini's work to be a clear case of dematerialization.

Tickets will go on sale at Cable Piano company on March 10, but mail orders will be received at any time by the Alkahest Lyceum System, Healey building, and filled as received.

LA FOLLETTE DROPS OUT OF PRESIDENTIAL RACE

Washington, March 1.—Senator La Follette, of Wisconsin, leader of the republican insurgents, announced today that he had withdrawn his name from the North Dakota presidential primary because of a belief that his present duty is in the senate, and that the "steam roller" will be operated at the Cleveland convention.

The announcement was in the form of a telegram to J. C. Olson, chairman of the La Follette campaign committee of North Dakota. The senator said he had withdrawn his name for the same reasons that have controlled him in refusing to be a candidate in primaries in other states.

"In the first place," he said, "I feel that my present duty lies in the senate of the United States, where events of far-reaching importance are occurring. I can not leave my post here, where my voice and my vote may be of some service to the nation, in order to promote my personal interests elsewhere.

"In the second place, I have no illusions about the Cleveland convention. The steam roller will be operated there by the same forces that controlled it in 1912 and other years. The arbitrary increase of the unrepresentative southern delegations is sufficient proof of this.

"Wisconsin will send a strong progressive delegation to Cleveland to fight for fundamental principles and I earnestly hope North Dakota will send you and other tried and true progressives and delegates to support them in voicing the demand of the people that the government of the United States shall serve them and not the monopolists and exploiters where sinister activities in Teapot Dome and elsewhere are now being disclosed."

Bismarck, N. D., March 1.—Senator Robert M. La Follette's name will go on the republican presidential ballot in the March 18 primary in North Dakota in conformity with a court order issued late today, according to Thomas Hall, secretary of state.

HONG KONG STEAMER HITS ROCK IN FOG

Hong Kong, March 1.—(By the Associated Press.)—The British river steamer Keung Shan, bound from Hong Kong for Canton with more than 700 passengers, strauck a rock in a dense fog last night and went aground 12 miles from Canton. Many passengers, including nine American men and women, and the mail were taken off by the steamer Kwangesai and safely landed at Canton.

The steamer Tin Sing transferred the remaining passengers to Canton. A British gunboat is standing by the grounded vessel and a tug is proceeding from Hong Kong to attempt to refloat the Keung Shan, whose stern is partly submerged.

Mr. Woodruff, who is now a member of the legislature, is being urged by a number of business men and shippers to make the race for railroad commissioner and at the same time he is being urged to run for congress from the Fifth district.

Mr. Woodruff states that he does not think that it is possible to run for either one of the offices, due to the fact that he has made plans to remain in the state legislature for two more years and that his business keeps him on the job most all of the time.

Mr. Woodruff sells the well known Farquhar line of machinery, which is known to every sawmill man in the country.

BAKER IS MANAGER HIGH'S SHOE DEPT.

R. P. Baker, one of the best known retail shoe men in the south, has recently taken over the shoe department of the J. M. High company and has been very much encouraged by the business done by his department since his arrival in this city.

Mr. Baker comes to this city from Montgomery, Ala., where he was connected for a number of years with the Campbell Shoe company. Prior to his connection with the Montgomery firm,

R. P. BAKER

Mr Baker was in the shoe business in his own home town, Rochester, N. Y. He was associated there with the firm of W. Powers company, a prominent Rochester shoe firm.

Although a northerner by birth, Mr. Baker is delighted with the south and prefers this to any other section of the country—especially so since coming to Atlanta. In speaking of his connection here he had the following to say:

"Although I have been in Atlanta only a short time I have lived here long enough to be delighted, not only with the business qualities of the city, but with Atlanta people as well. Atlanta is unquestionably the leading southern city and it will become a more pronounced leader in future years."

MRS. THOMSON ENTERS IN RACE FOR CONGRESS

New Orleans, March 1.—Genevieve Clark Thomson today announced her candidacy to fill the unexpired term of the late representative H. Garland Dupre, of the second congressional district of Louisiana, and in a platform submitted to a caucus of "Old Regular" democrats, declared for a tariff on sugar and rice, development of river and waterway traffic, flood control and a reduction of federal taxes.

New York, March 1.—The University of Southern California today was admitted to membership in the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America and will send a team to compete in the 1924 championships at Harvard stadium, May 30 and 31, it was announced today after the annual meeting of the I. SPRING WEATHER STIMULATES SALES

George Smith, popular salesman for the A. M. Robinson company, who travels South Carolina, has been in the house all this week getting out a number of rush orders for his customers. Other Robinson men, who are on the road, have been sending in some good orders and from all reports business will be on the up-grade this spring.

According to Charlie Williamson, sales manager for the Robinson company, their stock is in magnificent shape and it includes the greatest variety of choice values in dry goods and notions that have been shown in years.

The advent of spring weather has proved a big impetus to trade and many out-of-town buyers have taken advantage of the last few days of sunshine to come in and make purchases.

SPRING BUYING GOOD AT H. MENDEL CO.

Sales in ready-to-wear, dresses and spring wash goods for the last ten days have shown a remarkable increase at the H. Mendel company, well-known dry goods jobbers, according to a statement given out by Mr. Mendel yesterday. Orders have come from out-of-town buyers, who have been in the store during this period and from the road men. "Our trade shows that there is an unusually early amount of buying for this season, which seems to indicate that the retail stores are expecting splendid business this spring," Mr. Mendel said.

CONDUCTED IN THE INTEREST OF THE DEVELOPMENT OF ATLANTA AND THE SOUTH

MOVE TO EXTEND CITY LIMITS MEETS FAVOR.

The movement now on foot in city council to extend the limits of Atlanta and to take in the attractive suburbs Buckhead, the territory between Atlanta and Decatur embracing the famous Druid Hills district and other sections lying within range of the city improvements, is expected to meet with the general approval of the people, according to many statements that have been made in the presence of the writer.

Atlanta's population, while not congested in the strict sense of the word, is contained in a much smaller area than many other cities of the south and in other parts of the country, and it is believed that an ordinance taking in the adjacent suburbs and residence districts named above should be adopted in order that this city might have its rightful standing among the cities of the United States in point of population. A referendum to the people on this important move, it is declared, would find a favorable response among the people living in the metropolitan district as well as those within the city proper who can appreciate the mutual advantages that would accrue to all concerned by the extension of Atlanta's city limits.

REALTY BOARD HAS A ROUSING MEETING TUESDAY.

The meeting of the Atlanta Real Estate board, which was held as a regular function of that body last Thursday is said to have been one of the most enthusiastic gatherings of that body that have ben held under the administration of Albert S. Adams, who exacted from each member present at the election of 1924 officers before he would agree to undertake the leadership of the real estate organization for this year.

Presett at the luncheon as the principal speaker of the occasion was C. F. Palmer, head of the corporation that erected the Palmer and the handsome 101 Marietta street, who gave a most enlightening address upon office buildings and agents for these business structures. Among the outstanding facts brought out by Mr. Palmer with reference to office buildings was that a building 100x100 is more economical than one of the same area but of varying dimensions, for instance—50 x 200 feet. The savings in the structure of the former dimensions, he explained, was through the economy of the lineal wall construction. "Often times," he declared, "agents sacrifice economy by failing to figure in elevator and corridor spaces, and they some times fail also to gather accurate data on operating expenses."

One agent, the speaker explained, presented a project to him for a large office structure, failing to secure the essential data with reference to vital expenditures, and a structure that the agent claimed should cost something like $700,000 figured later beyond a one million dollars. "This agent," Mr. Palmer declared, "had failed to properly analyze the building specifications and did not deduct the waste occasioned by space devoted necessarily to elevators and other requirements needed for the operation of the building.

"Local agents," he ventured, with apologies to the realty men present, "according to my information and belief, do not charge enough commissions." He expressed some fear to stepping upon the toes of some one present, but no protests were made by his hearers.

Mr. Palmer is a well known figure in the real estate and building world of Atlanta, having been prominent in the two big enterprises named above, as well as other local business projects. He has made a deep study of modern offices buildings and conditions surrounding their erection and operation, and is looked upon as an authority in this line. Until recently he was president of the Southern association of Building Owners' and Managers', and is an outstanding figure in the office building circles of the country.

INTERIOR OF RICH'S STORE BEING COMPLETED.

While the exterior of the immense new department store of M. Rich & Bros. Co., now in course of completion, conveys some idea of its hugeness, a real conception of its immensity can only be gained by a visit to the interior of the structure, where a view of its great floor area can be had unobstructed, as can be had on the fourth floor which is entirely open pending the installation of such fixtures and equipment as will be used in the department that will occupy this part of the building.

Neither can the passenger along Alabama or Broad street gain anything like a true picture of elegance and beauty of this supurb commercial structure by studying the handsome facade or the beautifully ornamented outer walls of the great building. A visit to the interior of the big Rich building, however, where the finishing touches are being made to many of the departments, not only conveys to the visitor the appropriatness of its arrangement and appointments and a splendid opportunity to study the various modern devices with which the big store is being equipped, but many marvellous scenes follow one after another as one walks from one department to another and floor to floor.

The beauty of its finish rivals the engenuity of its equipment and when the big commercial structure is thrown open to the patrons of this pioneer Atlanta firm those who visit the great emporium will find many things at which to marvel with reference to the imposing structure before entering into the matter of buying goods.

The description of this splendid structure could not be attempted in this space, and it must suffice to say that the people of Atlanta and the entire south have in store a real treat when they are invited to inspect this company's new million dollar department store. No date has yet been announced for the formal opening of the Rich building, but it is expected to take place within the next thirty days.

F. A. OWENS, CAPITALIST OF OWENSBORO, VISITS ATLANTA.

Visiting the city to look over his local holdings, for which the L. W. Rogers Realty company are agents, F. A. Owens, wealthy citizen of Owensboro, Ky., was in Atlanta for several days during the past week. Mr. Owens, realizing the constantly increasing values of Atlanta dirt, and being a capitalist of reputed wisdom and carefulness, he invested a sum of money in a tract of northside land adjoining the beautiful Virginia Highlands, which was subdivided and sold successfully within the past few months by the Rogers house.

Mr. Owens was the guest of Ben Padgett, popular head of the Rogers Realty company, and it is reported that he is much impressed with the brightness of Atlanta's real estate future.

authority that many more large and highly luxurious buildings will be erected during the coming months.

ADAIR REALTY CO. OPENS SOUTH GEORGIA BRANCH.

In giving out the announcement that the firm will immediately open an office in the thustling south Georgia city of Valdosta, the Adair Realty & Trust company also gives the information that H. B. Shannon, well known member of its local staff will have charge of the new office for the present.

Mr. Shannon, in confirming the report that he is to be in temporary charge of the Valdosta branch, said that he would leave for the new location Sunday night, "I do not know how long I will remain in charge of the Valdosta branch," said Mr. Shannon, "but I will remain on the ground there, I infer, until some one is appointed to take my place."

In the new branch office, it was stated, Mr. Shannon, secretary for the Georgia Association of Real Estate boards, and publicity head for the farm land division recently organized by that body, will have an excellent opportunity to observe the agricultural conditions in that section of Georgia, where the boll weevil has forced a most drastic change in farm practice

FRANK ADAIR VISITS KNOXVILLE ON BUSINESS.

Frank Adair, head of the business leasing department of the nationally known real estate and renting house of the Adair Realty and Trust company, spent several days of last week in Knoxville, Tenn., attending to business for his firm. Aside from having important business connections in the east Tennessee city, this firm mantains branch offices and correspondents in practically every city of importance in the country. Its chain store department in various cities of the country are constantly engaged, it is declared, in finding locations for business concerns that seek locations for retail establishments, and the firm is equipped with the most modern devices and facilities for locating these enterprises in places that will make returns.

PADGETT WRITES ARTICLE ON ATLANTA REAL ESATE.

A highly instructive article has been written by Ben Padgett, well known head of the Rogers Realty & Trust company, for the coming issue of the City Builder, dealing with real estate and building situation in Atlanta.

Mr. Padgett, as managing head of one of the largest realty firms in the south, and as an active participant in a large number of important transactions that have been conducted by his firm, occupies a peculiar advantageous position from which to observe the conditions that surround the realty market of Atlanta and Georgia, both past, present and future. He is the author of an article that is expected to deeply interest those who are prone to enthuse over Atlanta's future and those who are proud of her achievements of the past.

"Atlanta's wonderful past," said Mr. Padgett, "which is now recorded upon the pages of history, points unerring, when taken into consideration with existing circumstances, to a future of great brilliance. There is perhaps not a community of like size on earth that has accomplished more, all things considered, than has been done by Atlanta, and no one can make a mistake by pinning his or her faith upon the future of this splendid city."

Mr. Padgett, with a large staff of salesmen, and with ample resources behind him for big achievements, constantly seeks, it is declared, to enthuse his men with the conviction that Atlanta and Georgia both have futures of great promise and they do not hesitate to advise prospective purchasers of either homes, business property or agricultural lands, to buy property in the Empire State of the south. His article, which is to be published about March 1, will be looked for with interest.

MORNINGSIDE PARK CONTINUES SPLENDID DEVELOPMENT.

The splendid record of sales that has been made by the J. R. Smith & M. S. Rankin company in Morningside Park, and other attractive subdivisions, as published in the last issue of the Real Estate Review, is being kept up by the big force of salesmen under Manager E. F. Luna, according to a recent announcement made by that firm. These lots, upon which a number of modern houses have been erected, are said to be among the choicest home sites yet unsold to prospective home buyers in and around Atlanta, and it is expected that with the opening of the balmy spring weather, for which Atlanta is famed far and wide, the exchanges of properties in Morningside, North Highlands and the southside subdivision, Sylvan Hills, also under the auspices of Smith & Rankin company, will break all previous records. There can be no doubt as to the increasing influx of people into Atlanta, and there is less uncertainty as to the needs these people will have for places in which to live, therefore this concern, as well as other residence developers expect record-breaking sales.

L. W. ROGERS CO. CONDUCTS SALESMANSHIP CLASS.

Beginning with the coming week the L. W. Rogers Realty and Trust company will conduct a regular class in salesmanship, through which the men on its large staff will be given the most modern and efficient instructions regarding the selling of real estate and other commodities. Lectures upon salesmanship will be delivered to the class by W. W. Davidson, well known expert in selling efficiency, and a former member of the faculty of Virginia Military Institute. It was through these classes conducted by the Rogers firm during the past few months that a number of expert salesmen have been developed—men, it was stated, who have taken their places in the business world of the city and who are keeping step with the progress of affairs.

"REAL ESTATE ACTIVITY FINE," SAYS EWING.

Giving out information regarding a number of big sales recently made by him for his firm, the J. H. Ewing & Sons Realty company, Charles Ewing, one of the youngest sales managers in the south, stated that the local real estate situation is of the most pleasing nature.

"While no sensational sales or transactions are being announced," said Mr. Ewing, "many big things are in the making, and there is no dirth of trading in moderately priced business property and in the exchange or home ownership.

"During the past few days," Mr. Ewing continued, "there have been many fine residence sales recorded, and there have also been many fine central property transactions. The outlook for business during the coming year," said he in conclusion, "is fine indeed, and our firm is preparing for a splendid year."

J. H. Ewing & Sons, for which Charles Ewing is officially connected, has taken over the splendid Lullwater subdivision belonging to Walter Candler, and the preparations are being made to dispose of this valuable tract, in the center of which the magnificent modern residence of Mr. Candler stands as a splendid speciment of Atlanta homes.

PROGRESS BEING MADE ON THE HURT ANNEX.

The million-dollar annex that is being added to the great Hurt office building, which was started about the first of the present year, on the vacant lot in the rear of the big structure, is being pushed with all speed in order that it may be ready for occupancy by patrons who are understood to have signed long term lease contracts for space in the building.

The excavations for the immense foundations have been practically completed, and structural work is going rapidly forward. This building with the new Commercial Exchange building recently turned over to its owners, the remodelled building purchased a short time ago by the Southeastern Trust company at the corner of Ivy and Edgewood avenue, and the splendid building that is being completely overhauled for the Haverty Furniture company, are improvements that have given added attractiveness and activity to this section of the city, which bears the distinction of having the first real skyscraper, the Equitable or Trust company of Georgia building. The completion of these new and revamped structures and their occupancy by the business concerns for which they are prepared, will also serve to stimulate and greatly revive this portion of the city, it is expected.

RETURNS FROM VACATION TRIP TO CUBA.

L. G. Brantley, of the Capital Stone company, the firm that constructed the stone portions of the Rich department store and many other large buildings of Atlanta, has recently returned from a vacation trip to Cuba, giving a most graphic account of the many attractions of the island. Speaking of the delightful sensation realized from stepping within a few hours from the chilliness of an Atlanta midwinter day into the badlmy sunlight of Havana, Mr. Brantley gave a most tempting description of the many delights that may be enjoyed in the great resort city.

"It's a strange but nevertheless a real fact," said Mr. Brantley, "that with several thousand saloons running open day and night in Havana, I did not see a dozen people drinking whisky. I did see plenty of people drinking beer, including American tourists, who had gotten their fill of liquor, but the only ones I saw drinking the more ardent liquors were people from the states where such drinks are taboo."

Mr. Brantley gave a most interesting account of the hotels and the many things that have been provided for the entertainment of the American people, and he said that prices are most reasonable, all things considered.

LABOR UNIONS TO COOPERATE WITH EXHIBITION.

At a recent meeting of the Atlanta Federation of Trades, a representative of the "Own-Your-Home" exposition that is to be held during the coming spring in the auditorium, supplemented a communication that had been addressed to the central labor body, asking that the members of organized labor cooperate with the managers of the exhibition in making it the record-breaking exposition thus far held in this city.

A request was made that the members of the building trades contribute their time and talents toward the construction of the novel feature of the show, the model house of five rooms that is to occupy the center of interest.

It was stated that carpenters, the bricklayers, electricians, painters, plasterers and other artisans in the building trades could give a few hours each, which would not impose any great burden upon an individual, while at the same time it would mean a big thing in the aggregate to the house. The request was spoken of favorably by members of the above crafts who took the floor to discuss the matter before it was officially sent to the Atlanta Building Trades council by President C. W. Cunningham.

ABE ADAIR RECOVERS FROM ILLNESS.

Suffering from a slight disorder, Forrest Adair, Jr., of the Adair Realty and Trust company, was absent from his desk for a couple of days last week.

SMITH AND LUNA VISIT FLORIDA.

Visiting the "land of flowers" in order to relax from a continuous rush of business and to enjoy the many pleasures to be found in Florida resort cities J. R. Smith, head of the J. R. Smith and M. S. Rankin Realty company, and E. F. Luna, chief of the big subdivision sales department, returned to Atlanta early in last week to take up again their duties. Both vacationists reported good times.

WHITE WAY LIGHTS FOR TRINITY AVENUE.

A movement by the Atlanta Federation of Trades to place white way posts on Trinity avenue is understood to have found favor among many of the owners of property on that street and it is expected the project will go in a short time to the city fathers for approval.

Many new buildings have been erected in this part of the city during recent months and the importance of the district traversed by Trinity and Central avenues, Garnett street, South Pryor and other thoroughfares has greatly increased in activity, it has been stated.

WATKINS GOES WEST FOR HEALTH.

Benjamin D. Watkins, president of the Georgia Association of Real Estate boards, and one of the leading figures in the Atlanta realty world, left the city last week for a vacation of about two weeks.

Mr. Watkins will visit Hot Springs, and other cities before returning to his home in Atlanta.

WALTER WILSON RETURNS FROM GULF CRUISE.

After spending two weeks in a house-boat, cruising the waters of the Gulf of Mexico, Walter Wilson, popular member of the staff of the Calhoun real estate agency, has returned to his office here. Mr. Wilson, joint owner of the craft in which he and other members of a select party enjoy several days' cruise each winter, is known as one of the most enthusiastic fishermen in the city, and he devotes a portion of each winter to the sport. His trip to Florida waters this year followed a severe spell of illness, and much improvement was noted in his physical condition by his friends upon his return to Atlanta. In giving an account of his fishing trip, Mr. Wilson created some amusement and much wonder by relating the details of a battle with a sea monster, which proved, upon landing, to be a "sea cow," or manette.

"When a man from the dryer sections of the country, after a few days cruise on the waters of the gulf hooks a monster of that kind, he is more than likely to be a bit uneasy about himself until he learns from more experienced fishermen that such an animal really does exist," explained Mr. Wilson, "and one can imagine our relief when we found that we had only captured a sea cow, and that others had done the same thing before us."

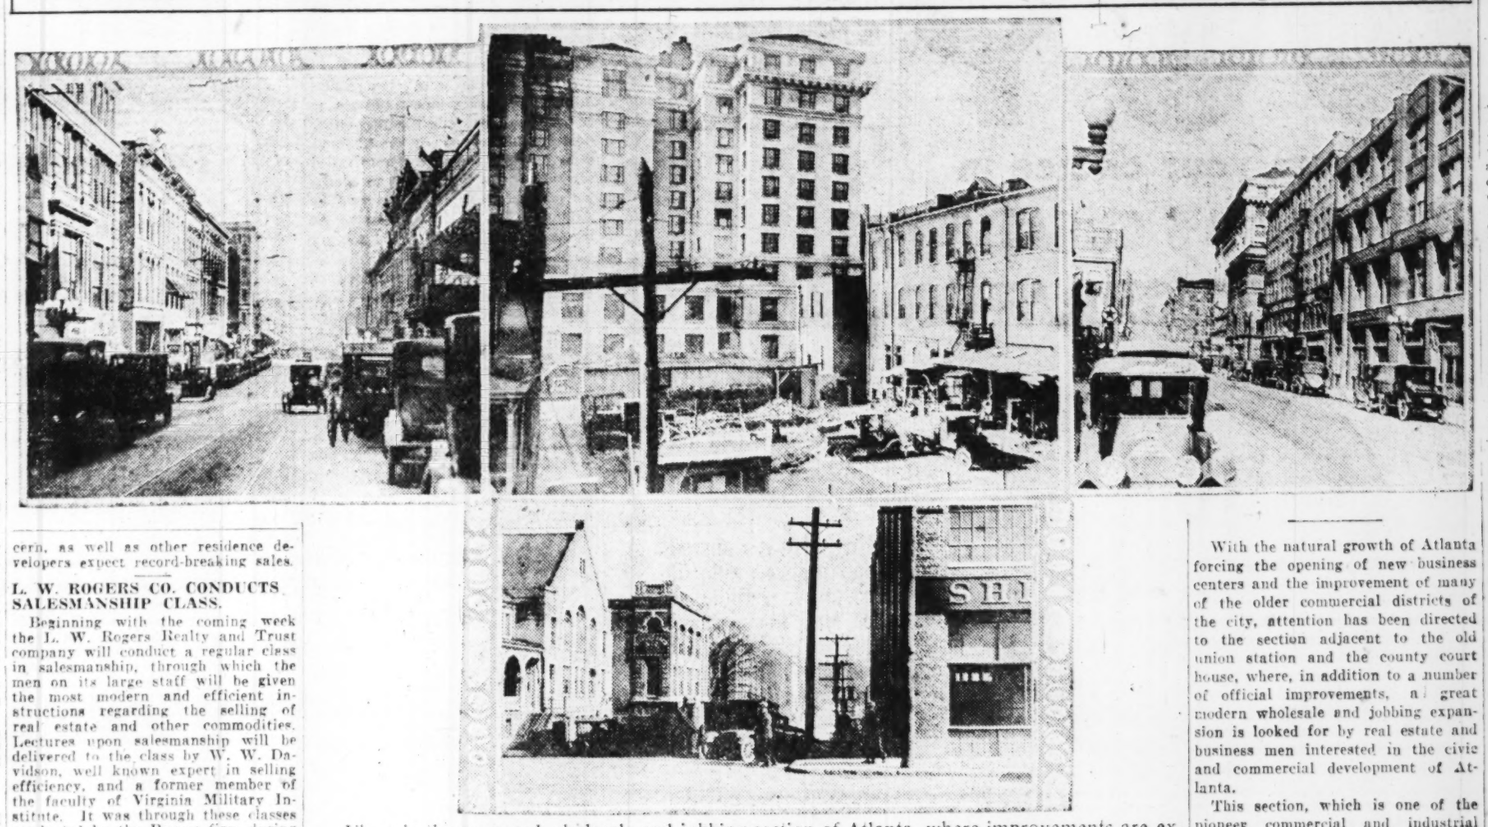

SENCY ILL DURING THE PAST WEEK.

J. W. Sency, popular member of the Watson-Woodward Realty company, was listed among the physically indisposed during the past week, being absent from his office for several days. He was much improved at the end of the week, however, taking up his duties again on Friday morning.

MRS. HARLEE ILL DURING PAST WEEK.

Mrs. Harlee, well-known member of the office force of the Robson-Holloman Realty company, who has many friends in the Atlanta real estate world, was reported ill several days during the past week, and many of her friends and business asosciates have expressed the hope that she will be able to resume her duties within a short time.

Pioneer Business Section of Atlanta To Be Improved

Views in the proposed wholesale and jobbing section of Atlanta, where improvements are expected. Upper left,, scene on East Alabama street, where a business revival is expected to follow the opening of the Rich department store and other improvements. Center, vacant property back of courthouse, where county officials advocate erection of new jail and juvenile courts. Right, scene on South Pryor street, which is now a wholesale center and where many improvements are expected. The handsome Fulton county courthouse stands on this street. Below, Trinity avenue, on which the property owners want white way posts. This street leads to the temple of labor, the state capitol, the Trinity Methodist church and many important commercial and industrial establishments. A great commercial awakening is looked for in this pioneer business section of Atlanta.

With the natural growth of Atlanta forcing the opening of new business centers and the improvement of many of the older commercial districts of the city, attention has been directed to the section adjacent to the old union station and the county court house, where, in addition to a number of official improvements, a great modern wholesale and jobbing expansion is looked for by real estate and business men interested in the civic and commercial development of Atlanta.

This section, which is one of the pioneer commercial and industrial districts of Atlanta, is traversed by Central avenue, South Pryor street, Trinity avenue, Mitchell and Alabama streets. In addition to the $1,000,000 county court house, which stands as an ornament to this district, this part of the city can now boast of many handsome commercial structures, while other improvements are expected to follow the building of the proposed viaducts at Pryor street and Central avenue, that are expected to solve the congested traffic situation which has been looked upon for several years as an obstacle to the proper expansion and improvement of this part of the downtown section.

City's Constant Growth.

With constant growth of the city, which has caused the absorption of practically every available site within a reasonable radius from the center of town, the necessity for expansion of the commercial district is expected to force the development of the above-mentioned section, and many of the realty and business men of the city have given it as their opinion that there is no part of the city better suited for a wholesale and jobbing center than Central avenue, South Pryor street and other thoroughfares in this section. The proximity to railroad tracks, the terminals, the court house and capitol and the fact that already a large number of wholesale houses have become established there, are other features that will influence the development of this district, it is believed.

The fact that the county owns a fine parcel of property directly in the rear of its classic court house is also expected to bring about eventually the erection of a modern prison and additional court rooms, which are said to be badly needed at the present time. In a recent interview with Sheriff James I. Lowery it developed that the present Fulton county tower is by no means large enough to properly house and care for the prisoners detained in that antequated structure.

Child's Prison and Court.

The county also needs a prison for the detention of women and children, as well as court rooms for the proper handling of cases that should not come in contact with the more hardened criminals filling up the county jail.

"The county owns a fine piece of property in the rear of the court house," said Sheriff Lowry, who is known as one of the most humane and progressive officers in the state, "and I have advocated for some time the proposal to dispose of the present tower property and the building of a modern prison on this property that is now not only vacant, but an eyesore to people travelling along Central avenue."

Sheriff Lowry and other officers of the Fulton county courts have many times expressed themselves in favor of the proposal to erect a new jail and a juvenile prison and court rooms on the county property, and this development is confidently expected as a part of the big scheme of development that is looked for in this section of the city.

The removal of a number of packing houses from Alabama street, which has been talked of for some time, will permit of the development of that street into a jobbing center. It is near the Union depot and runs parallel with the railroad track. Alabama street will also receive new life through the opening of the Rich department store that is expected to attract many new shoppers to this street.

Local Apartments Shown Ninety-Six Per Cent Rented

Giving a most conclusive answer to various rumors said to have been circulated recently with reference to vacancies in local apartments, a survey has been made and presented to an official of the Adair Realty & Trust company, in which it is shown that out of 1,881 apartments in the city, only 108, or about 4 per cent, were without occupants. It was also shown that many of these found vacant were without tenants because of some feature or condition that rendered them undesirable.

"This showing of about 4 per cent vacancies, when 10 per cent is looked upon as normal," said a member of the Adair company. "does not look as though Atlanta has yet been overbuilt in so far as apartments are concerned, and it also points to the fact that this city is growing with great strides, for a larger number of apartment houses have been erected in Atlanta during the past few months than ever before in the history of the city."

Within the past four years Atlanta has experienced a building campaign that has broken all previous records, and much of the large total expended for buildings here was put in residence sand aaprtment houses. Some of the largest and finest apartment houses in the country have been built in Atlanta and despite predictions that were made with reference to a possible over production of such buildings, it has been shown that they are filled up practically as rapidly as they are completed.

In fact, as has been stated in this department, many of these large and luxurious apartment buildings have been leased practically 100 per cent before they are ready for occupancy, and tenants offer for them as rapidly as they can be built. With this condition in view capitalists of Atlanta and other cities do not permit pessimistic statements to affect their determination to invest their money in paying projects, and the building of apartment houses goes steadily onward in this city despite the fact that its has today a larger number of all kinds of apartments, perhaps, than any city of its size in the country.

Baltimore Paper Prints Story of Atlanta's Growth

A splendid story of the development that has been experienced by Atlanta within the past few years, with illustrations of the many outstanding public and semi-public structures that have been erected during Atlanta's great building program, is published in the current issue of The Manufacturers Record, the most important financial and industrial periodical in the southern states.

Another article in the same issue, written by Rogers Winter, gives a most entertaining description of the gigantic task now being performed by Gutzon Borglum at Stone Mountain, where the great sculptor is cutting the figures of Confederate heroes into the sheer face of the great monolith.

The first article, from the pen of J. H. Reed, ascribes Atlanta's wonderful growth to the strategic location of the city and the fact that it forms the railroad gateway into the southern states. He also pays a tribute to the enterprise and the cooperative spirit of the people. The article is profusely illustrated, and is expected to result in great good to the city.

The story of Stone Mountain and its great monument is also splendidly illustrated, and the article will add another chapter to the many fine stories that have been written about this modern marvel for papers and magazines in all parts of the world. Stone Mountain and its monument will prove to be as valuable to Atlanta, from a standpoint of advertising, as the opening of King Tut's tomb has proven to Egypt, it has been declared, and thousands of people are coming every month to visit this wonderful piece of handiwork. Real estate values have long since felt the influence of the increasing number of visitors to Stone Mountain, it is said.

Thibadeau Opens New Real Estate Office in Atlanta

Announcement has been made of the opening of an office by William C. Thibadeau, in the Atlanta National Bank building, and information has also been given that the new realty concern will specialize in the sale of improved and vacant residential property in this city.

Many Atlantans in the business and real estate world will doubtless remember Mr. Thibadeau as having been for several years connected with the well known Atlanta Title and Trust company, one of the most popular and important institutions of its kind in the south. The service with the above firm, it has been stated, gave Mr. Thibadeau a clear insight into the Atlanta home situation, and he also secured much comprehensive knowledge regarding locations and values through his connection with the institution that handles a large proportion of the titles for Atlanta property.

Mr Thibadeau announces that he is ready to meet his prospective clients and to offer them service of reliability and promptness. Close attention to business and reliable performance of duty to individual patrons, will be made the keynote to the business of the new establishment, it was stated, and a large proportion of the public's business is expected for this house Mr. Thibadeau has been a life resident of Atlanta, and he has made a large number of friends through his extensive business associations.

WAYCROSS LAYS PLAN FOR TOBACCO PLANT

Waycross, Ga., March 1.—(Special.)—A committee of local business and professional men from the Waycross and Ware county chamber of commerce has the matter of establishing a tobacco stemming and drying plant in this city under advisement.

W. D. O'Quinn, in bringing the matter to the attention of the local chamber of commerce, pointed out the needs of such a plant in the community, and stated that Waycross located in the heart of the tobacco belt, would be the logical location for such a plant.

The committee handling the proposition is composed of Mr. O'Quinn, B. G. Parks and Dr. B. H. Minchew.

WARE POULTRY SALE BRINGS HIGH PRICES

Waycross Ga., March 1.—(Special.)—Although adverse weather conditions prevented many farmers from attending the first co-operative chicken sale ever held in Ware county, the sale was a distinct success from the viewpoint of the prices brought.

The successful bid was 30 cents for fryers, offered by the Georgia Hide & Fur Co., of this city. Twenty-five cents was paid for heavy hens and 22 cents for light hens. A number of the hens brought as high as $1.25.

WITH ROGERS CO.

J. K. WOOLFOLK.

Rogers Company Adds New Men To Office Force

Contemplating a record-breaking rush of business for the coming months of 1924, and adopting the principle of preparedness by enlarging the official personnel as well as the sales force of the company, Ben Padgett, of the L. W. Rogers Realty & Trust company, announces several additions to the forces employed by the popular real estate house.

Additions to the large sales staff of the Rogers Realty company, as announced by Mr. Padgett, are as follows: Ben A. Mayer, who comes to Atlanta from Los Angeles, Cal., perhaps the most remarkable real estate city in the world today, where he is said to have had much experience as a realty salesman.

W. J. Woolfolk, who for some time was a popular member of the official personnel of the local office of the Westinghouse Electric company. He joined the sales staff of the Rogers Realty company within the past few days, it was said. Mr. Woolfolk, aside from occupying a responsible place with the above mentioned electrical house, where he made many friends, is well known in business and social circles of the city.

A. H. Miller, Jr., son of General Manager A. H. Miller, of the Woolworth company, for the southeastern division, and who was himself with the popular 10-cent concern for some time, has also become a member of the L. W. Rogers Realty & Trust company, according to the announcement of Mr. Padgett. He is said to be a young business man of great popularity, with many friends in the city.

Hollard Curran, who for several years has served in business circles of Atlanta, and who for a time was in New York in the real estate business, has been appointed to the sales force of the L. W. Rogers Realty & Trust company. Mr. Curran is well known to many people in Atlanta and has a wide circle of friends and business associates.

Ewing Announces Quarter Million In Realty Sales

The announcement of many large real estate sales were made during the past week by Charles Ewing, sales manager for the well-known real estate house of J. H. Ewing & Sons, of North Forsyth street. Among these sales are several well-known parcels of Atlanta property, and the announcement of a proposed $150,000 apartment house, is contained in the information given out with reference to one of the transactions. The total amount involved in the sales announced by Mr. Ewing is, $255,500, and the deals are as follows:

From Ewing Realty company to a client, 2-story brick building and lot, 30 on frontage on West Peachtree and 140 feet on Pine at the southeast corner of West Peachtree and Pine streets, sold for $57,500, and a lot on Westminister Drive in Ansley Park, valued at $18,000 was taken as part payment.

From A. H. Harper to L. W. Randall, 8-family apartment house, Auburn avenue, $13,000.

SIX MEN SOUGHT IN DUFFY KILLING

Chicago, March 1.—Police began a city-wide search today for five men, said to have escaped last year from the Philadelphia penitentiary, and Sam Dougherty, in connection with the murder of Dougherty's brother, known here as John Duffy, and his wife, Maybelle Exley Duffy.

After receiving word from Philadelphia that the men are thought to be in the city, police believe they either were double-crossed by Duffy and came here for revenge or were called together by Duffy's brother to avenge his murder. The brother is said by Atlantic City, N. J., police to be involved in a $105,000 jewel robbery there.

Descriptions and criminal records of the five men were received from Philadelphia today and every policeman warned to be on the lookout for them.

Julian Kaufman, out on $30,000 bond charged with murder, was rearrested today with his wife and both charged with receiving stolen property.

Police claim it was in Kaufman's automobile Duffy escaped after he is said to have shot and killed his wife in their apartment during a quarrel.

BRIDGE UNITING GEORGIA-FLORIDA MAY BE ERECTED

Although the bill authorizing construction of a bridge over St. Mary's river at Wilds Landing, Camden county, is being held up in the house, passage of the measure at an early date is practically assured, according to John S. Holder, state highway commissioner.

Action on the bill, which was favorably reported by a house committee or congress was halted when a group of men who attempted to build the bridge several years ago, asked reimbursement for the money spent on the project at that time. The bill was held up until their claims could be settled. Mr. Holder stated that the measure undoubtedly will pass when the matter of these claims is settled.

The proposed bridge will connect Georgia and Florida. It will cost $150,000, of which sum Florida will pay $100,000 and Georgia $50,000, it was stated.

Mr. Holder has just returned from a tour of inspection of highways in about 20 counties of the state. He said that added provisions had been made for the maintenance of state highways this year, and indications are that the roads will be kept in better condition than ever before. Maintenance crews have been furnished more equipment and more men, and sections to be maintained by the crews have been shortened, he said.

AUTO TAX REPEAL URGED BY TRACY

Automobile Owners Should Protest Tax on Automobiles, Says Oakland Sales Chief.

Every man who owns a motor car and every man in the automobile trade should protest for the repeal of the discriminatory tax on automobile products.

W. R. Tracy, assistant sales manager of the Oakland Motor Car company, thus urges a real fight by the 15,000,000 automobile owners who have been ignored in the tentative schedule of the house ways and means committee which proposes to do away with the special war-time levies on bowling alleys and billiard tables; all sorts of amusement tickets up to 50 cents, jewelry and other items while motor cars, trucks and accessories are considered luxuries.

"Tentative agreements were passed by the committee reducing various excise taxes to a total aggregate of more than $163,000,000," explains Mr. Tracy, "yet approximately $57,000,000 of these reductions will be the taxes on entertainment, candy, jewelry and sports, all of which have been classified as essentials, while automobiles, trucks and accessories remain classified as luxuries.

"While it is commendable to reduce taxes on all the items included, it is highly unfair to give relief to many items and completely ignore the 5 per cent tax on motor cars, the 3 per cent tax on trucks and the 5 per cent on parts and accessories, aggregating nearly $150,000,000 a year. It is easy to collect for the government but highly unfair to transportation.

"The government should not lose sight of the fact that motor car users frequently pay 4 to 10 federal, state and municipal taxes.

"The only favorable consideration at all given the motor industry so far was the exemption of motor busses used exclusively for transporting children to school from the tax on automobiles for hire.

"The excise tax on trucks should have been eliminated when the government eliminated the tax on railroad transportation because of the universal use of trucks for transportation purposes.

"Excise tax, amounting annually to $40,000,000 is paid on parts not included in the manufacture of completed vehicles. This 'misfortune tax,' as it has been aptly named, is an additional penalty to the individual who is unfortunate enough to require either a repair or restoration of some essential part of his motor vehicle.

"The whole proposal is unfair when it is considered that motor vehicles transport six times as many persons in a year as the steam railroads and carry 90 per cent as much freight—when it is considered that motor vehicles have made profitable the farming of millions of acres of land shut off from the markets before their advent—and when motor vehicles are relieving the railroads of unprofitable short hauls and speeding deliveries by lessening terminal congestion.

"The railroads and the industries producing luxuries have been relieved of war-born taxes, but they are still levied upon individual transportation."

MEMEL CONTROVERSY SETTLEMENT DRAFTED

Geneva, March 1.—(By the Associated Press.)—The league of nations special committee for the settlement of the Memel controversy today presented the general draft of a convention forming the basis of a settlement of the question.

The solution reached is the application of the decision of the conference of ambassadors made in February 1923. Under this, the sovereignty of Memel goes to Lithuania, but with Memel territory retaining full autonomy. All international transportation rights on the Neimen river and the port of Memel are safeguarded. The impression prevails here that the recommendations of the commission are likely to be accepted by all the powers interested.

ALABAMA LEASE PLAN AT BEGINNING OF END

Montgomery, Ala., March 1.—Contract for leasing by the state of the coal mines at Belle Ellen, Ala., which will be operated by state convict and free labor, was said by convict officials to probably mark the beginning of the end of the lease system in Alabama.

The contract was approved late today by Governor Brandon and provides for the leasing of the Belle Ellen mines from the Bessemer Coal, Iron and Land company. The action is effective during the period dating from February 1, 1924, to June 30, 1925, it is said, and if successful points to the extinction of the present system.

Leasing of the mines is on the royalty basis, on the same plans as other mines are being operated by the lessees, it is said, with a special compensation fund for injured convicts being created.

Workers Busy Forming Clubs For McAdoo and Underwood

News emanating from headquarters of two candidates for support of the Georgia delegation at the national democratic convention for the party nomination for the presidency on Saturday, was concerned chiefly with the formation of clubs in Fulton and DeKalb counties.

Headquarters for U. S. Senator Oscar W. Underwood announced that James R. Nutting, former member of city council, would be chairman of the "Underwood club" in Fulton county, while forces directing the Georgia campaign for William Gibbs McAdoo, former secretary of the treasury, gave out details of the formation of a "McAdoo club" in DeKalb county.

McAdoo Club Prospers.

The "McAdoo club," in DeKalb county is reported to have more than 500 names on the membership list. In addition the women of DeKalb have formed a separate organization, it is stated, with Mrs. James A. Campbell, of Decatur, as president, and Mrs. Frank A. Armstrong, of Clarkston, as secretary.

A mass meeting will be held at 8 o'clock Monday night in the court house at Decatur, at which time E. B. Weatherly, prominent Macon lawyer and chairman of the Central Georgia McAdoo club, will make an address. Other speakers will include Mrs. Campbell and Mrs. W. F. Trenary, of Atlanta.

Dr. W. S. Ansley, of Decatur, is chairman of the DeKalb club, and Glen Jolly, of Clarkston, is secretary.

In a statement given out Saturday at McAdoo headquarters in the Kimball house, Miller S. Bell, of Milledgeville, manager, asserted that McAdoo will sweep the state in the presidential primaries of March 19. The statement is as follows:

McAdoo Statement.

William G. McAdoo will sweep the state in the democratic presidential primary March 19. Well over 50,000 Georgia men and women have been enrolled in McAdoo clubs organized in more than 100 counties and the enrollment is growing every day. Farmers, merchants, bankers, lawyers, editors, judges, county officials, legislators and other leaders are supporting him actively. He has the indorsement of such representative daily newspapers as The Athens Banner, The Augusta Chronicle, The Savannah Press, The Macon News, The Thomasville Times-Enterprise, The Cordele Dispatch, The Albany Herald and The Atlanta Journal. His support is general throughout the state. His supporters are outspoken, active, aggressive and confident.

Mr. McAdoo deserves Georgia's support because he was born and reared in Georgia and because his record of achievement, of service to his party and his country, makes him the foremost progressive leader of democracy. More especially does he deserve the support of Georgia because of the outrageous personal attacks recently made upon him by republican politicians. Georgians know his record. They know its character is above reproach. They know he raised and handled during our country's participation in the world war a greater amount of money than was ever administered by any other man in the history of the world, and no republican smelling committee was ever able to question either his ability or his integrity in performing that great task.

Many Georgia democrats who supported Senator Underwood in 1912, and who might have supported him again in the present contest, resent this outrageous attempt to besmirch the good name of a native Georgian whose character is clean and above reproach, and whose public service has added lustre to the name of the state which gave him birth. Consequently, they are supporting Mr. McAdoo.

Predict Majority Vote.

Mr. McAdoo will enter the democratic convention in New York in June with a majority of votes on the first ballot. This is conceded generally throughout the country. Washington correspondents concede it. The Associated Press and other news agencies concede it. Even eastern papers which dislike him because of his progressive and independent platform concede that the race is McAdoo against the field. In so far as it is humanly possible to predict the nomination, it will be McAdoo. But if by any chance the McAdoo delegates do not go over the two-third majority handicap, then McAdoo and his delegates will name the nominee, and that man, whoever he may be, is going to be a progress, independent democrat—not a reactionary of the type of Senator Underwood.

Nowhere except in Alabama is Senator Underwood a serious contender for the nomination. He is able and clean, to be sure, but he is a reactionary. His legislative record of opposition to such progressive measures as prohibition, woman suffrage, child labor laws and others too numerous to mention, eliminates him from any possible consideration by the democratic party, which has always been the party of progress. Those who are looking for reactionary government can get it from the republicans. The democratic party will go before the country on a platform of progress with a progressive candidate.

McAdoo will sweep Georgia. Democrats of this state are not going to throw away the opportunity of placing a native Georgian in the white house. They are not going to turn down a progressive in favor of a reactionary. They are not going to turn down a national candidate in favor of a one-state candidate. They are not going to repudiate McAdoo's magnificent ten-point platform enunciated by him in Chicago in favor of Senator Underwood's complete lack of any platform at all.

Nutting Is Elected.

Election of Mr. Nutting as chairman of the Fulton County Underwood club took place at a meeting held Saturday. He is a native of Marietta, but has been a prominent figure in Atlanta business, civic, social and church activities for many years. It was stated that the full membership of the campaign committee for Fulton county would be announced in the next few days.

In accepting the chairmanship, Mr. Nutting expressed the belief that the sentiment of the people of this county was at this time very strong for Senator Underwood, and that he felt perfectly confident that Fulton would be in the Underwood column on March 19 when the primary was over.

Nutting Statement.

Mr. Nutting later gave out a statement as follows:

As one of the large number of Cobb county boys who have cast in their lot with the great county of Fulton and the capital city of Atlanta, as one who for many years lived almost in the shadow of historic Kennesaw mountain and breathed the unsullied air that blows from its picturesque heights, it gives me a feeling of pleasure and satisfaction to appeal to the voters of Fulton county in behalf of the candidacy of that sterling patriot and brilliant statesman, Oscar W. Underwood, for the democratic nomination for the presidency.

On all the great public questions of the day, Senator Underwood's position is absolutely sound. He has never used his high position for the promotion of any personal or selfish ambition. He has never prostituted his great influence and his place in the confidence and affections of his state and his section to the pursuit of any unworthy aim.

As a member of the lower house in the national congress for many years, and as chairman of the powerful ways and means committee, he established a reputation for progressive and constructive statesmanship that was country-wide, and a reputation that has never been dimmed by his no less useful and distinguished service in the senate.

Of the large number of senators who were fitted by training and character for the position of democratic leader, Underwood was chosen with very little show of opposition, and it is interesting to note that he commanded the support of Senator Hoke Smith, when he was first chosen leader, and at the next session of the senate was supported by Senator Thomas E. Watson.

Underwood Lauded.

He is one of the big, outstanding figures in the councils of our great party, and in the presidential chair at Washington he will uphold our party's traditions, and clean out the Augean stables of corruption and extravagance and inefficiency, and restore our national government to the confidence of the people.

The recent investigations in Washington have brought so many reputations under serious suspicion—to use no stronger language—that the people are fast losing confidence in the purity and patriotism of their trusted representatives and leaders. But amid all the tumult and all the charges of graft and entanglement with the unholy toils of corrupt business, and amid all the exploitation of trusted position and subversion of the public interest, and the devotion of those interests to the base uses of greed and avarice, Oscar W. Underwood's reputation has remained unscathed and above even the breath of suspicion.

Georgians will honor themselves in honoring the gifted son of our sister state of Alabama, and with full confidence in the result, we appeal to our fellow citizens of Fulton county to rally around our great leader and give Underwood a rousing majority in the primary of March 19.

STATE OSTEOPATHS MEET HERE IN APRIL

The Georgia Osteopathic association will hold its twenty-third annual convention in Atlanta at the Ansley hotel April 18 and 19. This convention will bring to Atlanta leading osteopaths of the state, who will participate for two days in a program of unusual interest, arranged by the local committee, of which Dr. John W. Phelps is chairman.

A feature of the convention will be the public lecture of Dr. Arthur G Hildreth, of the Still-Hildreth sanitarium, Macon, Mo., on the night of April 18. Dr. Hildreth is one of the best known osteopaths in the country having taken his degree in osteopathy under the founder, Dr. A. T. Still. For several years Dr. Hildreth was a lecturer at the American School of Osteopathy, Kirksville, Mo., and for the last fifteen years he has been one of the staff of Still-Hildreth sanitarium for treatment of nervous and mental diseases.

The convention will close with a banquet on the night of April 19.

Atlanta has been suggested as the 1925 convention city of the National Osteopathic association and the state association will decide at this convention whether to press Atlanta's invitation for the national convention.

Local officers of the association are: President, Dr. Elizabeth Broach; vice president, Dr. W. E. Gottreu, secretary and treasurer, Dr. John W Phelps.

BEN HILL BREEDERS TO SELL CHICKENS

Fitzgerald, Ga., March 1.—(Special.)—Carload shipments of spring chickens are anticipated from the successful operation of the Fitzgerald hatchery, which is now hatching 3,000 chicks per week, with orders for the full capacity of the incubator of the company booked for the next four weeks. For several weeks the local hatchery has sold thousands of day-old chicks to Ben Hill county farmers, with a prospect of an increased demand with the arrival of more favorable weather. The company intends to add another large incubator to their plant to meet the demand.

USE NEW CATALYSIS IN SHOALS PLANTS

Chattanooga, Tenn., March 1.—(Special.)—The new catalysis for bringing about the union of hydrogen and nitrogen, claimed by scientists to be the greatest chemical achievement of the century, the discovery of which has just been announced by Dr. F. G. Cottrell, director of the Fixed Nitrogen Research Laboratory, at Washington, will be used by the southern power companies and their associates in the manufacture of fertilizers at Muscle Shoals in the event their offer for the lease of the government's nitrate and power plants there is accepted by congress, according to an announcement made here today by B. C. Edgar, vice president and general manager of the Tennessee Electric Power company, on behalf of his company and its associates.

Yale Beats Army.

West Point, March 1.—Yale won from Army at wrestling today, 17 to 8. Army swimming team defeated University of Pittsburg, 44 to 18, today.

An odd parallel marked the lives of two young men, Clarence Achley and Dewey Anderson, who were born on the same day twenty-six years ago at Gilman, Iowa, and died recently on the same day at Salem, Ore. The two were not related.

PERSIAN SHAH DENIES THRONE IS IN DANGER

Nice, France, March 1.—"These reports originated in false news published by Turkish newspapers whose aims are well known," said the shah of Persia today when his attention was called to articles appearing in the European press purporting to report grave political controversies and criticisms in Persia because of his repeated and prolonged trips to Europe.

The shah appeared surprised at the correspondent's inquiry.

"There has been a campaign blaming me along the lines suggested, but it has been confined to other countries in the Near East and never has crossed the frontiers of my own where by absences in Europe never have caused controversies, criticisms or incidents," he said.

Later the shah sent word by one of his aids to the correspondent who had asked when he intended to return to Persia that he had not yet made up his mind.

A cool weather thought, which may add zest to the coming winter, is the discovery that in Chicago 3,500,000 quarts of ice cream are annually manufactured by electricity.

HUDSON-ESSEX MAKING PRODUCTION RECORDS

"The Hudson Motor Car Co. is at the highest point of production in its entire history," declares J. W. Goldsmith, "and that is particularly fortunate for us, because the demand for the new Essex and the Super-Six is far ahead of the supply.

"I have seen new automobile models come and go, almost from the beginning of the industry, but I never before saw a car take hold on public demand, and keep that hold, as has the new Essex Six.

"There is no doubt but that twice, and probably three times, as many motorists will buy Essex cars in 1924 as did in 1923.

"The machines and manufacturing methods which make this new Essex possible at its unusual price are among the most interesting sights I have ever seen.

"They range from mighty steam hammers and giant grinding machines to little devices so delicate and sensitive that they put human powers of perception and measurement to shame. There are whole rows of automatic machines which work to an exactness worthy of a watchmaker or jeweler.

"One of the most interesting machines was a delicate testing device for checking the balance of the crankshafts. A crankshaft revolves about 1,500 to 2,000 times a minutes for average driving, and unless it is perfectly balanced it sets up vibration. To guard against this, each Hudson and Essex crankshaft is placed in a special testing machine and revolved. This device is so minutely accurate that it registers visibly a mere tapping with the fingers. It discloses immediately every unbalance, however slight.

"This inaccuracy is then corrected, and the shaft is re-tested until it is exactly right. This eliminates one of the principal causes of vibration, and results in the remarkable smooth running of the new Essex.

"The plants are light, clean and equipped with the latest safety devices. Raw material enters the factory, and after inspection moves steadily through the various manufacturing operations toward the point where it is finally installed as a part of the complete automobile. The work is greatly sub-divided and specialized and when one task is finished the material moves on to the next group of men. It is all on a carefully maintained schedule, with no confusion haste or waiting.

"In the Hudson factory, ninety per cent of the constituent parts which make up Hudson and Essex cars are manufactured and finished. Even such units as axles, clutches, and transmissions are produced by Hudson's own working force in its own plant—not bought outside and assembled. That means only one manufacturing profit."

Cardinal Logue Denounces Dances And Women's Dress

Armagh, Ireland, March 1.—(By the Associated Press.)—The "crying scandal" of women's dress and the growing "mania" for dancing are denounced by Cardinal Logue, primate of Ireland, in his Lenten pastoral to the arch diocese of Armagh. The pastoral, which will be read in all the Catholic churches tomorrow, says:

"If there be one thing before all others of which Ireland was justly proud, it is the reserve and scrupulous modesty of her women and girls. In every country to which they have been scattered this distinction clung to them. Whether it be from a general loss of that tenderness of conscience or a slavish devotion to fashion, I fear we can pride ourselves on this no longer.

"The dress, or rather the want of dress, of the women of the present day is a crying scandal. There seems to be rivalry among them as to how little dress they can wear without incurring universal reprobation. We see enough of this in every-day life, but if we can judge from the advertisements of the newspapers, we do not see the worst.

"What shocks one most is to see persons presenting themselves for holy communion in these dresses. I often have felt the impulse to pass them over. In Rome the cardinal vicar, no doubt, with the approbation of the pope, has published a decree forbidding the clergy to give holy communion to those who present themselves in unbecoming dress. I fear his example must be followed if the scandal is to be stopped.

"Another abuse is dancing, especially all night dances. Latterly there seems to be a regular mania for dancing. As to the character of the dances I know nothing, especially those imported dances, some of the names of which I see in the newspapers—and certainly the names are bizarre enough. Those who do not know tell me they are most objectionable on the score of morality. They seem to be an outcrop of the corruption of the age."

CLARKE OPENS WAR AGAINST BOLL WEEVIL

Athens, Ga., March 1.—(Special.)—Clarke county already has begun its fight against the boll weevil, according to plans made public by J. W. Firor, county farm agent, who announces that beginning March 3 demonstrations will be given in weevil control methods.

The plan outlined by Mr. Firor is similar to the one pursued in this county last year with much success. Demonstration plots will be conducted on farms of Grady Pittard, J. R. Bray, J. R. Evans, O. T. Adams, W. H. Cabaniss. Use of pure seed, of high grade fertilizers and of the most adaptable land are principal features of the campaign.

FOUR ARE CHARGED WITH FORD MURDER

Gastonia, N. C., March 1.—A warrant charging four persons, including two women and a man arrested here last night and held as "material witnesses," with the murder of John Ford, of Lincoln county, on November 7, 1920, has been sworn out by F. B. Ford, father of the dead man, it was announced here today. The fourth person named in the indictment is Joe Orr, of Charlotte, son of a former chief of police of Gastonia.

Sheriff G. R. Rhyne, of Gaston county, left for Charlotte this morning to arrest Orr and took with him Ransome Killian, of Lincolnton, who, with Effie Grice, of Kings Mountain, and Essie Beattie, of Gastonia, was arrested last night. Rhyne's attorney secured a writ of habeas corpus from Circuit Judge A. M. Stack at Charlotte in an effort to have Killian released.

The arrests in the case were brought about by an alleged confession made by Arthur Crowder, who was arrested at Decatur, Ala., and who was brought back here yesterday. Killian and the two women were in an automobile with Ford when the latter was killed. They claimed two negroes held them up, robbed them, killed Ford and attacked the girls. Two years later, however, the Beattie girl, who was seriously wounded, charged the father and uncle of the Grice girl with the crime and they were tried but the jury disagreed.

Arthur Crowder also was taken to Charlotte. He was expected to testify in the habeas corpus proceedings.

ORR ARRESTED IN GASTONIA.

Charlotte, N. C., March 1.—Joe Orr, wanted in Gaston county on a charge of being implicated in the murder of John Ford, of Lincoln county, in 1920, was arrested here today. The arrest was made on a warrant sworn out by F. B. Ford, father of the dead man, and brought here by Sheriff Rhyne, of Gaston county. Orr and Rasome Killian, who was arrested in Gastonia last night, were released by Circuit Judge A. M. Stack on bonds of $10,000 each pending preliminary hearing at Gastonia on March 31.

The meeting will be held at the Cecil hotel and will follow a supper on the roof at 6:15. Members of the auto association, their executives, sales managers, salesmen and service employees will attend, it was stated.

Wylie West, chairman of the program committee, is arranging a number of special features for the meeting, including "stunts, prizes and other features," according to the committee's report.

It is expected that S. C. Porter, chairman of the show committee for 1924, will make an incomplete report of the recent show. Such a short time has elapsed, however, that it is not believed the report will be in detail or complete.

SALE OF U. S. SHIPPING INTERESTS BRITISH

London, March 1.—British shipping circles are much interested in the announcement of the United States shipping board's intention to sell its fleet. Some British shipping men are skeptical over the appearance of buyers.

Sir Thomas Royden, chairman of the Cunard Steamship company, is quoted by The Daily Mail as saying: "I don't know what the board is after. Maybe they simply want proof that they cannot sell the ships and, therefore, have no alternative but to run them."

Editorially The Mail says:

"The American state shipping enterprise has been one long record of muddle and waste. It accords exactly with the similar experience here when during the war our government departments embarked upon vast trading schemes."

Says The Daily News:

"Britannia is to continue to rule the waves, or anyway, the Union Jack is not immediately to be displaced by the Stars and Stripes."

The committee for selecting a place for the meeting of the conference met in Cordele, Ga. February 25, and selected Macon.

CORONER PROBES CAUSE OF FALL THAT KILLED GIRL

Chicago, March 1.—Coroner's jury is investigating the death of Ruth Hillman, 24, daughter of Edward Hillman, millionaire Chicago department store owner, who fell to her death from the Hillman suite on the eighth floor of a Chicago hotel Saturday.

Death was accidental, according to reports to the police. Miss Hillman had opened a window to get a breath of fresh air, according to Miss Merl Hammond, Milwaukee, Wis., who spent the night with her.

"When I turned around she had disappeared," Miss Hammond said. "I ran to the window and saw her lying on the lawn in the court below."

Miss Hillman was subject to fainting spells, her parents said.

Some public school teachers in Beaufort county, North Carolina, receive but $45 a month for their services.

Fort Valley Laying Elaborate Plans for 1924 Peach Festival

BY PAUL WARWICK.

Fort Valley down in the heart of Georgia, and at the same time the very center of the wide world's peach industry, is making mighty preparations for the peach blossom festival, that romantic and annual affair which will this year take place Thursday, March 27.

Just a fleeting two-hour visit to the busy south Georgia city showed evidence on every side of concentrated activity and zeal -zeal for the cause and well coordinated activity on making the occasion even a greater success than it has been in previous years, when its sheer beauty and majesty of sentiment have enthralled those who viewed it and fascinated those who have heard of it.

Guests of honor at the festival will be Major General David C. Shanks and Mrs. Shanks and the military attaches of the fourth corps area, which General Shanks commands. The general will make the address of the day, an address which will cover reminiscences of his forty years service in the United States army, a career, by the way, equalled by few, if any in colorful experiment and achievement.

The morning of March 27 will be devoted to general entertainment—many features of which are still pending but which will be worked out in attractive detail before the occasion. Added features are well enough and a credit to the unflagging ardor of those connected with the movement, but they hardly seem necessary.

Great Barbecue.

Certainly they will not seem necessary to those who have travelled, either by train or by automobile—preferably the latter—through that fertile fruit belt when the pink blossoms adorn the miles and miles of trees. Just to stand in the center of one of those great orchards, with the sea of pink stretching sweetly away on every side, giving the observer the feeling of being submerged in a limitless ocean of the Creator's masterpiece of delicacy and beauty—that were entertainment enough.

The barbecue, always a colossal affair, will take place at noon. An idea of the magnitude of the occasion can be gleaned from the fact that those in charge are planning to feed 40,000 people—a veritable gastronomic cataclysm, if you'll pardon a personal impression. Last year in the neighborhood of 25,000 people were fed and entertained, and the great popularity of that 1923 event and added plans for this year make the 40,000 estimate seem not improbable.

History of Peach.

The pageant, the crowning feature of the day, will trace the history of the peach from its origin in China, through its progress in Japan, India, Persia, Greece, Italy, France, England, Belgium, Holland, Spain—thence into Mexico and, very naturally, then into the United States and into Georgia, the world's center. The costumes of these nations will be faithfully carried out, and in the allegory will be characterized the goddesses of past, present and future—for the pageant will not stop at the present marvelous development of the peach but will peer into the future.

It appears that it will be a glorious occasion, and indications are that it will draw people from all quarters of this old globe to witness it. Certainly no detail which has for its motive the success of the occasion is being overlooked.

Concord Winner.

Concord, Ga., March 1.—(Special.) The Concord and McDonough boys played the final basketball game Friday night at Griffin for the fifth district championship, the Concord quintet winning by the score of 41 to 18. It was easily Concord's game from the start. At the end of the first half Concord had the big end of a 21 to 1 score. In the last half McDonough managed to bring the score up to 18.

Better Tires
---and Better Service

SERVICE — the good old word, along with GUARANTEED and WARRANTED—has been so badly abused that it is hardly recognizable. At its very best there are many constructions and definitions for it.

In the tire business the word SERVICE means to go to a customer's assistance when he is in trouble and in addition to that GO WITH SPEED AND A SMILE. Both are essential because the man or woman waiting on some lonesome road-side is in no humor to entertain a tardy grouch.

Speed and Smiles are included in our road tire service.

Think of owning a Car with a body finish like this!

For the first time in motor car history—Oakland has successfully combined beauty and permanence in an automobile body finish. This extraordinary achievement is made possible by adapting and perfecting the application of an entirely new substance—Duco, the remarkable qualities of which provide—

A finish in a beautiful Oakland Blue, distinctive and striking;

A finish which, though covered with mud, can quickly be restored to its original beauty, without scratching, by wiping with a dry cloth. Frequent rubbings actually improve its appearance;

A finish impervious to all weather, to sun and wind, rain and snow, salt air and alkaline conditions;

A finish so resistant to harm that sulphuric acid and the chemicals of fire extinguishers have been sprayed upon it, then wiped off, leaving no marring trace;

A finish so enduring that it will retain its original beauty and lustre indefinitely without checking or dulling.

BALLOON TIRES ADD TO LIFE OF CAR, SAYS FOX

"In the balloon gum-dipped cord Firestone has originated and perfected a new type of tire that absorbs all ordinary obstables and irregularities in the roads," says Tom Fox, local distributor of Firestone tires.

Mr. Fox said further that the hardest shocks and impacts are effectively cushioned by this new tire. They protect the chassis, engine and body of the car. Cars stay new and run at peak efficiency for months after purchase.

Another surprising result is the decreased vibration. Squeaks and rattles, which have long been an annoyance of the closed car, are greatly lessened by balloon gum-dipped cords. This saves the expense of continual adjustment and tightening.

Interest in this new Firestone tire has developed very fast the past few weeks. Motorists are daily inquiring about these wonderful tires.

The balloon gum-dipped cord tire is really a huge, flexible air-cushion. It is not an oversize cord of the usual type. It is an entirely new type, with enlarged air capacity and an unusually thin, supple carcass. Strength, toughness and elasticity are given to this construction by means of a special Firestone gum-dipping treatment. The Firestone balloon gum-dipped cord is the first tire in history to be successfully operated on such low air pressure—less than half the amount required by the usual cord tire.

Of course, there are very many other advantages of this tire which arise from its wide, soft tread surface. Traction is greatly improved while the breaking effect of the tire is nearly doubled. Slipping, skidding and spinning are minimized, insuring safer car control under all conditions.

One point that should be made clear is that balloon gum-dipped cords are giving just as big mileage as the best regular cord tires on the market. Also, in numerous rigid tests they require no more fuel.

To make the flexible balloon gum-dipped cord durable and long-wearing, Firestone employs the well known gum-dipping process, which has proved so successful in giant truck pneumatics and in regular Firestone passenger car tires. By means of gum dipping, the cords in the body of the tire are impregnated and insulated with rubber and thus protected from internal wear. This gum joins the component parts of the tire into a strong, inseparable union. Gum-dipping has actually made the balloon cord practical for everyday use.

It is said that this is the most important tire improvement in recent years. Already many motor car manufacturers have adopted them and the entire industry has generally accepted them as the model. The extraordinary advantages of the balloon gum-dipped cords should lead to a heavy demand during the coming months. A demonstration usually results in a sale.

DR. HILL TO ADDRESS COLORED "Y" MEETING

BRANDES GETS BIG BATTERY CONTRACT

F. L. BRANDES,
Treasurer and general manager of the Battery Sales company.

The Battery Sales company, aggressive and growing local battery dealers, have been appointed Exide service and sales dealers for Atlanta. Their present location at 44 Spring street will soon be supplemented by a new station on Gordon street between Whitehall and Lee and will give the new Exide dealer an excellent service organization capable of handling the large number of Exide battery users in Atlanta. The Exide account is one of the largest in this section, if not the largest, in point of batteries in use. The big factory branch of the Electric Storage Battery company, under the supervision of Charles W. Bell, carries in Atlanta a large stock of automobile batteries and parts with which to serve the southeastern dealers. This large stock will naturally supplement that carried by Mr. Brandes and will enable him to render a service quite complete and always prompt.

Mr. Brandes entered the battery business for himself a little more than two years ago and during this time he has built a substantial business.

"Service has been the keynote in our growth," says Mr. Brandes, "and it is our hope to build up the largest battery business in the south upon this principle. The establishment of our new store in West End, which will be under the management of L. J. Pilliviant, a trained and competent battery man, is our first step toward providing service facilities of the highest type for Atlantans."

Both stations of this company will use the constant potential charging method which enables them to give one-day recharging service.

Fine Motor Cars Permanent, Says LaFayette Chief

BY EARLE C. HOWARD
(Vice President, LaFayette Motors Corporation.)

With millions of low and medium-priced automobiles being made each year, a question quite naturally has arisen in the minds of many people. This question touches on the permanency of that portion of the automobile business which is devoted to the making of highest quality motor cars like the LaFayette. Let is be understood at the start that cars in the LaFayette class will always be made because they justify their existence and consequently there will always be a steady demand for them.

If one thing, more than any other, has placed the United States in a position of world supremacy today it is our ability to make everything from shoe laces to automobiles well and inexpensively because of our methods of mass production.

The typical LaFayette owner is very much of a metropolitan, yes, even a cosmopolitan character. His interests are far-flung—he is in constant communication with men who do the same kind of executive work, play the same games, read the same books and magazines, and, in fact, do all those things in common that tend to create a community interest. The fact that these men may be separated by miles means little, for much of their time is spent in traveling, in order that they may be in personal contact with the fundamental factors influencing their business. When these trips are not too long, they are often made by automobile, and it of a necessity must carry its passengers quickly and without fatigue. Only fine cars like the LaFayette are able to do this.

That mass production will continue to be the chief methods of manufacture in the United States goes without saying, but that more and more people are becoming tired of the mass-made article is just as self-evident. There is latent in all of us a desire to have those things that are above the average and have the spark of originality and individuality that men have long searched for and deeply cherished. For a time these ideals were dimmed by the influences of the new age that deals in millions. Those influences have lost their force for those who are in a position to gratify their desires and are giving way to the old ideals. Mass production is the greatest aid the average man has had since the invention of the printing press, which after all is nothing more than the means for mass production of writing. It has given to the artisan and farmer comforts and the power and glory that a Caesar or a Napoleon could not buy. Now, however, the man who is in a position to select and choose, is returning to the idea that his possessions must give evidence that time and highly trained individual skill have been expended upon them, even though he knows, for instance, that no set of four wheels can do more than to get him to his destination and bring him home.

Unmistakably there will always be motor cars like the LaFayette and the indications today are that the recognition of their value and consequent demand for them is on a very positive increase.

Dedicate Tree Memorial To Woodrow Wilson Today

Dedication of a tree memorial to Woodrow Wilson, under the auspices of the woman's division of the Bankhead highway commission, will take place at 2 o'clock this afternoon at the intersection of Bolton road and the Bankhead highway.

The memorial is a live oak and will be planted in the center of a plot of ground, 20 feet square, deeded to the tree by T. W. Willingham, prominent citizen.

At the same time approximately 200 trees along the "Road of Remembrance," planted during the past few days along the highway route in Fulton county, will be dedicated to various Fulton county soldiers who lost their lives in the world war.

These trees are planted 50 feet apart on both sides of the roadway and each tree is to bear a marker dedicating it to the memory of the soldier whose life was sacrificed in the world war.

Mrs. Thornton Active.

Mrs. Albert E. Thornton, president of the woman's division of the Bankhead highway commission, and Mrs. R. K. Rambo, woman commissioner for Georgia, will preside at the opening of the exercises.

The plan being fostered by the woman's division of the Bankhead highway is to make of the highway a "Road of Remembrance," as is being done along parts of the Lincoln highway and several other important highways in northern states.

Governor to Speak.

Mrs. Bun Wylie, president of the Atlanta chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, is chairman of arrangements for the exercises, and announces that Chaplain Miller, of Fort McPherson, will open the exercises, after which Edwin Johnson, chairman of the Fulton county commissioners, will introduce Governor Walker, who will speak briefly in tribute to Woodrow Wilson. Mayor Sims will speak, and Gen. William Johnston, of Fort McPherson, will pay a further tribute. Commander Conyers, of the American Legion, will read the roll of Fulton county's dead heroes.

Music will be rendered by the Elks' quartet, led by Signor Volpi. Their first song will be "Lest We Forget," and the second song will be "Lead, Kindly Light." J. L. McCord, chairman of the $50,000 Wilson memorial fund, will be a speaker, and Dr. M. Ashby Jones will give the benediction.

Governor Walker will place the first spade of dirt around the tree, followed by Mayor Sims, Edwin Johnson, representing Fulton county commissioners; General Johnston, representing the army; Capt. Walter Roper, representing the navy, and Commander Conyers, of the American Legion.

Members of all patriotic and civic organizations are invited to attend the exercises.

EMORY BANKING STUDENTS HEAR TALK BY SIMMS

A. B. Simms, president of the Atlanta Joint Stock Land bank, Friday delivered a lecture to the class at Emory university on banking and currency, his subject being "The Federal Farm Loan Act." He explained to the class operations of the two systems of banking under this act, the federal land banks and the joint stock land banks, and showed that farmers of Georgia and Alabama, the two states in which the Atlanta Joint Stock Land bank operates, can borrow money through this institution at 6 per cent, without commission, for a long term of years on the amortization plan.

The popularity of this system of banking with farmers, according to Mr. Simms, is evidenced by the fact that the Atlanta Join Stock Land bank received over $9,000,000 in applications during the past twelve months.

The class in banking and currency at Emory will make a specially conducted tour next week through the federal reserve bank, where its members will study different departments of this bank. The business course at Emory, which includes banking, is proving popular among students.

Robert B. McCord To Address Lutheran Men's Brotherhood

Robert B. McCord, secretary of the Georgia Children's Home society, will address the Men's Brotherhood of the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer at the regular monthly literary meeting Monday night. Supper will be served by the ladies of the congregation under the chairmanship of Mrs. Mamie Boinest.

The meeting will be the last to be presided over by Victor S. Woodward, who leaves with his family on March 15 for Greensboro, N. C., where he has accepted the managership of the Community Chest campaign in that city. An election will be held during the evening to choose his successor as elder of the brotherhood.

Mr. Woodward, who is president of the Atlanta Social Workers' club, was connected with the American Red Cross in Atlanta during the war, and for the past year has been serving as special agent for the Georgia vocational bureau.

Fundamental Hubby Blames Modernism In Divorce Case

New York, March 1.—The "divine right of wives," fundamentalism and modernism, figure in the divorce suit brought against William H. Griffin, a lawyer.

In an answer to his wife's complaint filed in the supreme court yesterday, Griffin denies her accusation that he misconducted himself with a woman at Atlantic City and avers:

"With her divine right of wives is a vital an insistent principle of life, as the divine right of kings was with her illustrious ancestor, King Charles I., of England.

"The plaintiff favors the school of thought of which the Rev. Percy Stickney Grant is the most conspicuous exponent at the present time, and his 14-year-old daughter through her mother's inluence has reached a state of mind in which she refuses to accompany her father, an orthodox Episcopalian and member of the diocesan organizations, to church, declaring that she does not believe in the divinity of Christ, the miracles and numerous other articles of Christian faith."

Mrs. Griffin has asked the courts to award her the custody of their two children. The Griffins were married in New Orleans in 1906.

LOVICK G. FORTSON MADE NEW MEMBER OF LOCAL LAW FIRM

The legal firm of Randolph & Parker Saturday announced addition of Lovick G. Fortson. The firm will hereafter be known as Randolph, Parker & Fortson.

This firm began business more than 30 years ago under the name of Gray & Randolph, members then being James R. Gray and Hollins N. Randolph. Later Mr. Gray retired from the firm, and Edward T. Brown succeeded him, the firm then being known as Brown & Randolph, and for years occupied offices in the Brown and Randolph building, located at the present site of the Transportation building on Marietta street. Subsequently Robert S. Parker became the junior member of the firm, and on the retirement of Mr. Brown, the firm was known as Randolph & Parker, with offices in the Healey building.

Mr. Randolph is a Virginian by birth. He takes great interest in public activities and is interested in the success of the Stone Mountain Memorial association, of which he is president.

for a car, without knowing what the leader offers in the fine-car field

WE made a canvass of many who bought rivals of Studebakers. We said, "Tell us why you liked your car the better."

The majority said, "We did not even look at the Studebaker." Most of them bought new models of the car they owned before.

Yet Studebaker is a leader in the fine-car field today. Studebaker builds more quality cars than any other plant in the world.

Studebaker is the sensation of modern Motordom. Its amazing growth signifies a new situation in this field.

Last year, 145,167 fine-car buyers paid $201,000,000 for Studebaker cars. Nearly three times as many as in 1920.

Is it fair to yourself—or fair to us—not to learn the reasons for this trend?

Facts to consider

Studebaker assets are $90,000,000 — all staked on satisfying, better than others, buyers of high-grade cars.

Over 23,000 men have their future at stake on giving you maximum values.

$50,000,000 in modern plants and equipment, of which $32,000,000 has been added during the past five years.

$10,000,000 in body plants to give you superlative beauty. To give that final touch for which Studebakers have been famous for decades.

125 experts who devote their whole time to studying betterments. Who make 500,000 tests per year to maintain our supremacy.

Consider Studebaker history. For 72 years this concern has stood for high principles and policies.

For two generations, against all the world, it held first place in horse-drawn vehicles.

Now for years its name and fame have been committed to like attainments in fine motor cars.

If you only knew

There is no room here for details and comparisons. You will find them all in Studebaker showrooms. But let us cite some significant facts.

That lack of vibration, so conspicuous in Studebakers, costs us $600,000 yearly in extra machining of crank shafts.

That matchless strength in vital parts comes from the costliest steels. For some we add 15% to the quoted price to get exactness in them.

That Chase Mohair, used in our closed cars, is made from the soft fleece of Angora goats. Cotton or ordinary wool, or a combination of both, could reduce our price $100 to $150 per car, but it would sacrifice Studebaker quality.

Note the bumpers, the steel trunk, the extra cord tires, the motometer, the courtesy light on some models. Figure what they would cost as extras.

The infinite care

We use 35 formulas for steel, each worked out to exactness for supreme service in its place.

We employ 1,200 inspectors to make 30,000 inspections of the material and workmanship in each Studebaker car — before it leaves the factory.

Consider how Studebaker has always led in the building of high-grade cars. We were first to use cord tires as standard equipment. We were the first quantity manufacturers to build bodies of the highest grade.

If you want beauty, fine upholstery, rich finish and equipment, consider that Studebaker has had more experience in fine coach building than any other motor car maker.

Our place no accident

The pedestal place which Studebaker holds in the fine-car field is not the result of accident. It comes from principles as old as this business—the ceaseless and determined ambition to excel.

Learn the result of these efforts. Compare detail by detail, part by part, with any car you wish. When you foot the advantages, you will find that they number scores.

These are facts you should know. They are inducing 150,000 per year to choose Studebaker cars.

Some sell at $1,045. Some meet with every requirement in size and power and luxury. But the chassis are all alike, save in size. The same steels, the same standards throughout. Every important Studebaker part represents the best we know.

People have learned these facts—hundreds of thousands of them. The demand for Studebakers has almost trebled in three years. It has become overwhelming, even for our facilities.

Investigate the reasons. You will find them by the scores. Then, if you choose a rival car, we shall have nothing more to say.

See the Studebakers

Studebaker builds more fine cars than any other plant in the world.

Last year 145,167 wise motor car buyers paid $201,000,000 for Studebakers.

The demand has almost trebled in the past three years. Studebaker now holds a leading place in the high-grade field.

Our modern plants and their equipment cost $50,000,000. All to give you the maximum value at the minimum of cost.

It is folly to buy a car in this class without knowing what we give.

OFFICIAL OF SOUTHERN SOUGHT FOR FORGERY

Macon, Ga., March 1.—Howard L. Jones, who for four years has been chief clerk in the office of J. G. Cain, master mechanic of the Southern railway shops in this city, is being hunted tonight on warrants charging forgery, it is learned from the office of Sheriff J. R. Hicks. The amount involved is said to be in excess of $5,000.

Jones is said to have dropped out of sight when auditors from the general offices of the Southern railway and W. H. Fitton, of Cincinnati, assistant to the general manager, were at work on the books.

Although R. G. Stubbs, of Atlanta, was in charge of the shops tonight as master mechanic, J. G. Cain, who was relieved from that position earlier in the day, declared that he had been relieved only long enough to clear up frauds that had been discovered through a series of forgeries in the shop. Cain himself swore out the warrants for the arrest of Jones.

It is charged in the warrants that Jones forged the name of Cain to vouchers and releases in connection with the settlement of accident cases in the shops, upon which he is alleged to have secured $5,000 during four months. The accident claims in some cases were padded, it is alleged, and in other cases there were no accidents.

PREMIERS' NOTES TO BE PUBLISHED

Paris, March 1.—The publication on Monday of the letters which it was announced today have been exchanged between Premier MacDonald and Premier Poincare may be expected to create a most favorable impression in both countries.

The only comment which the foreign office is prepared to make regarding their contents, however, is that the correspondence is not connected with the recent public speech of Arthur Henderson, the British secretary for home affairs, in which he urged a revision of the treaty of Versailles.

The idea of this personal exchange of letters explaining the attitude of the two governments on present problems originated with Mr. MacDonald, but the suggestion of making them public emanated from M. Poincare. The letters are long documents of six or seven typewritten pages each.

The Temps, which appears to have been more successful than the foreign correspondents in causing the foreign office to break silence, says the two premiers express a common desire to draw closer the ties of the entente and to practice a policy tending to strengthen the league of nations.

JOHNSON DROPS FIGHT ON 'BOSSES'

New York, March 1.—Formal announcement was made today by Arthur B. Murtha, New York manager of Senator Hiram W. Johnson, that the Californian had abandoned his campaign for delegates from New York state to the republican national convention and "will depend upon the force of the public opinion to make the party bosses recognize the sentiment of the people."

Coincident with the announcements were reports that William Wrigley, Jr., and Albert D. Lasker had withdrawn their financial support from Senator Johnson.

Petitions for the spring primary will not be filed, Mr. Murtha announced, chiefly because the state law does not permit a preferential presidential vote, and to obtain the delegates at large through the state party convention "an independent candidate will be under the necessity of spending huge sums of money" because "the primary cards are so stacked."

The campaign in states where delegates are chosen by direct primary will be continued, however, Mr. Murtha explained. This includes efforts in New Jersey, California, Ohio, Illinois, Michigan, South Dakota, North Dakota and "other states."

"The New York Johnson-for-President club is financing its own campaign," Mr. Murtha said, "and has not the money nor the desire to enter into a contest of expenditure with the regular party organization.

"For these and other reasons of strategic nature, we will depend upon the force of public opinion to force the bosses to relinquish their grip on the party and to permit the people's voice to be heard. The great state of New York provides no means by which the voters can register their choice for the nomination for president in the primary."

JORDAN TO ADDRESS AUTOMOBILE DEALERS

BY C. V. HOHENSTEIN.

A special meeting of the Atlanta Automobile association has been called for Mondy evening, 6:15 o'clock, super, roof garden, Cecil hotel, to hear an address from Edgar S. Jordan, president of the Jordan Motor Car company, who is making a special trip to Atlanta to speak to the members of the automobile association. Mr. Jordan is one of the big figures in the automotive industry, is recognized as one of its most forceful and magnetic speakers, and will undoubtedly deliver a message from which every executive, salesmanager, salesman and service man will receive a great deal of benefit. The Atlanta Automobile association feels particularly fortunate in being able to bring Mr. Jordan to Atlanta to address its members, and the indications are that a large representation will be on hand to greet him.

An excellent musical program has been arranged for the occasion, "smokes" will be served, and the entertainment committee, headed by Wylie West, chairman, will put on a few feathres to enliven the occasion. It is probable that the 1924 show committee, through S. C. Porter, chairman, will make a tentative report of the financial result of the staging of the 1024 automobile show, recently, at the city auditorium. In many respects the show was the most spectacular and successful of any yet staged by the association. More cars were sold than at any previous show, and on a least two nights the attendance exceeded the largest recorded attendance of any night of the three shows preceding this one. The enthusiasm of the exhibitors, as well as the entire automotive industry of Atlanta, already assures the success of the next show in 1925. It is probable that plans will begin immediately upon the 1925 show, with the idea of taking advantage of many new points learned through the 1924 show.

STATE MUSEUM GETS UNIQUE "FAKE" ROD

BY S. W. McCALLIE.
State Geologist.

There has just been presented by a citizen of Atlanta to the state museum a divining rod, which has been placed on exhibition on the third floor of the state capitol.

This is one of the many similar instruments often used by self-styled mineral experts in locating gold, silver and other minerals. Such instruments as this are looked upon by scientific men as a fake, pure and simple, and the use of them should be discredited by all the citizens of the state.

The U. S. geological survey has recently published a bulletin on divining rods, which is quite interesting as well as instructive. This bulletin in a prefatory note makes the following statement:

"The use of a forked twig, or so-called divining rod, in locating minerals, finding hidden treasure, or detecting criminals is a curious superstition that has been a subject of discussion since the middle of the sixteenth century and still has a strong hold on the popular mind, even in this country, as is shown by the large number of inquiries received each year by the United States geological survey as to its efficacy, especially for locating underground water and the persistent demands that it be made a subject of investigation by the survey.

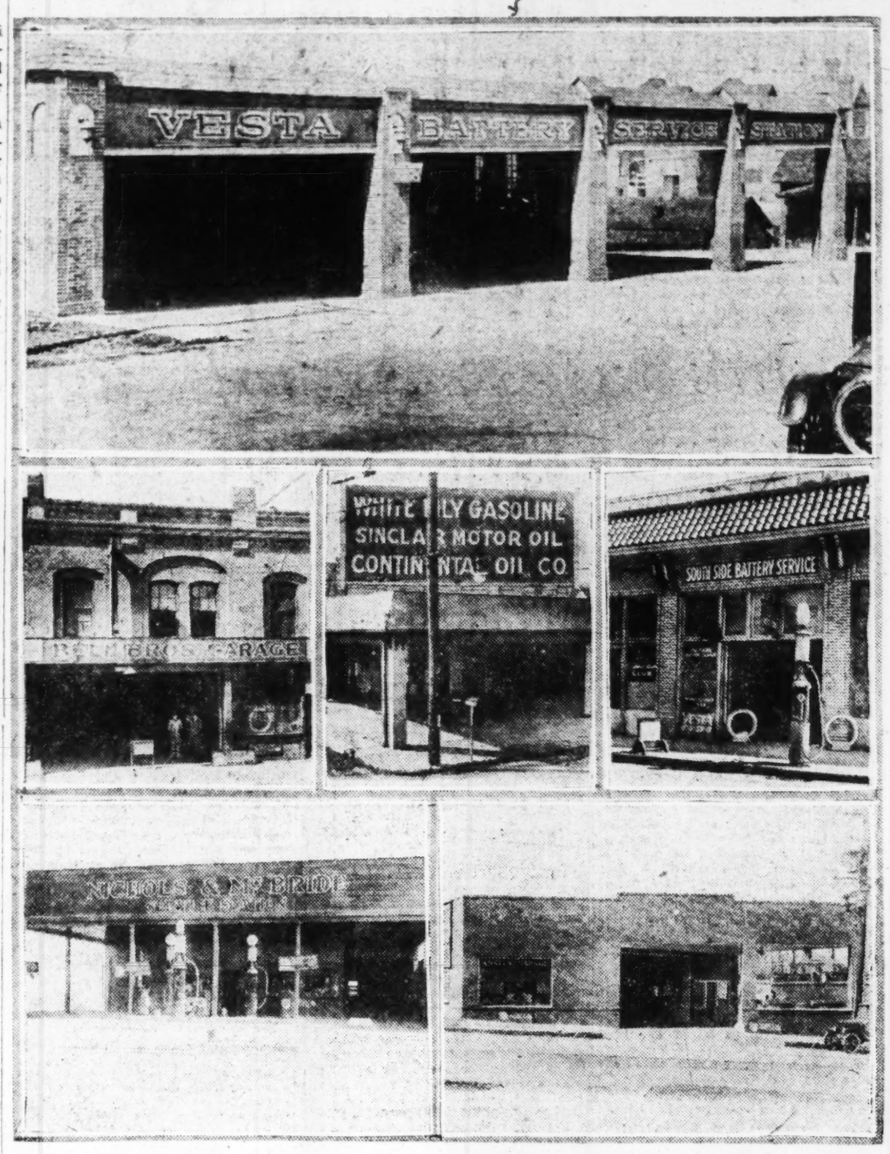

"The bibliography shows that a truly astonishing number of books and pamphlets have been written on the subject. The outline of the history of the subject presented in the bulletin will probably enable most honest inquirers to appreciate the practical uselessness of "water witching" and other applications of the divining rod, but those who wish to delve further into the mysteries of the subject are referred to the literature cited in the bibliography.

"It is doubtful whether so much investigation and discussion have been bestowed on any other subject with such absolute lack of positive results. It is difficult to see how for practical purposes the entire matter could be more thoroughly discredited, and it should be obvious to everyone that further tests by the United States geological survey of this so-called "witching" for water, oil, or other minerals would be a misuse of public funds.

"A large number of more complicated devices for locating water or other minerals are closely related to the forked twig. A favorite trick for appealing to uneducated persons and yet making specific disproof impossible is to give as the working principle of such a device some newly discovered and vaguely understood phenomenon, as, for example, radioactivity.

"It is by no means true that all persons using a forked twig or some other device for locating water or other mineral are intentional deceivers. Some of them are doubtless men of good character and benevolent intentions. However, as anything that can be deeply veiled in mystery affords a good opportunity for swindlers, there can be no reasonable doubt that many of the large group of professional finders of water, oil, or other minerals who take pay for their "services" or for the sale of their "instruments" are deliberately defrauding the people, and that the total amount of money they obtain is large."

Jazzy Denizens Of Tin Pan Alley Fight Nickname

New York, March 1.—On Forty-sixth street, west of Broadway, where pining southerners from as far south as Hester street, write sentimental songs about their dear old Dixie homes, there is a feeling of resentment against the term "Tin Pan Alley."

Forty-sixth street is not very distinctive and no musical or picturesque quality has yet been discovered in the formal label of the thoroughfare which appears thus on the lamp-post at the corner: "W. 46th St."

But it is better than "Tin Pan Alley," which is undignified and implies no great respect for the music which constantly jangles and shrills and gurgles and sobs through the felt-lined partitions of the little composing coops where the authors of a nation's songs do their composing.

New Dignity Weighty.

A new dignity has come upon the authors of the jazz output and their complaint was voiced this week by no less a dignitary of American music than Victor Herbert, himself, who said: "Tin Pan Alley tends to belittle the work of the men who are giving the nation its melodies."

And yet neither Mr. Herbert nor any of the lessor composers of West 46th street offered any substitute which could so well and fittingly and tersely describe the block between Broadway and Eighth avenue from which the jazz of the world emanates. Even in winter when the windows are closed, the baying of saxophones, the braying of trombones and the neighing of piccolos mingles in an appalling jumble of sound with the cigarette tenor of the jazz composer testing his own work and the jangle of a hundred pianos as the orchestration of new dances goes on.

Some Topical Songs Brewing.

The state and sectional motif seems to have been played out or nearly so, however, and there are now more songs of a topical nature. There is one in preparation, for instance, concerning Teapot Dome and the Fall guy and there will undoubtedly be several about welcoming the democratic convention to the sidewalks of New York.

This change had to come in time because the composers had pined to be back in each of the southern states in turn and had repeated on several of them. Northern and western states were similarly honored, too, all except North and South Dakota, New Mexico, Maine and Rhode Island, on which the composers could find no data which gave them any excuse for pining.

Mammy Notion Dies.

This is a dreary reflection on these states, too, when it is considered that a New York song composer has been known to pine for his home in Caroline when he has never been any closer to either of the Carolinas than Perth Amboy, N. J.

The mamy notion also expired lately. Mammy died of overwork and lack of versatility. The only rhyme that a song composer could fit into the restricted boundaries of a 40-word chorus was "Albammy" and, at last, that wouldn't sell any more.

There is no talk about going to law over this thing. If the public still insists on referring to West 46th street as "Tin Pan Alley" the jazz industry can move to Beethoven street or Wagner avenue.

Wallace — "Hello, Fletcher; what's the matter with your arm?" Fletcher—"Gunshot wound." Wallace—"How did it happen? Were you out shooting ducks?" Fletcher—"No; home, learning the saxaphone."—London Telegraph.

"Dearest," he said, sighing, "it doesn't seem like the same old smile you used to give me." "Oh, no, Jack," replied the sweet girl, "this is a new one. I have been studying at a school of dramatic art."—Toronto Telegraph.

BOY SCOUTS HONOR MEMORY OF CHIEFTAIN

Memorial services for the late Woodrow Wilson will be held by Boy Scouts of Atlanta at Wesley Memorial church next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, according to announcement Saturday. Troops of scouts will assemble at respective district points of assembly and march to the church. The military band of Fort McPherson will furnish special music for the services.

The public is invited and all scouts and scout leaders in this section have been requested to attend.

President Wilson's respect for the Boy Scout movement was evidenced in many public utterances during the world war when scouts were particularly active in Liberty loan and war saving stamp sales. As president, Mr. Wilson was head of the scouts for eight years.

The memorial address will be delivered by Dr. Carter Helm Jones, pastor of the Second Baptist church, and scouts will sing hymns sung at Mr. Wilson's funeral.

GEORGIA AND ALABAMA MEET IN S. I. C. SEMI-FINALS

DECATUR GIVES G. M. A. SURPRISE IN PREP TOURNEY

Cadet Five Wins in Final Minute of Play; Boys' High And Marist Also Win Games

BY ROY E. WHITE.

Tech High vs. Marist and G. M. A. vs. Boys' High will be the schedule Monday afternoon in the semi-final round of the city prep basketball tournament now being played on the new court in the city auditorium. Tech High was idle in the first round, while Marist defeated Commercial 39 to 17. Boys' High eliminated Fulton by a 41 to 18 score and G. M. A. won a close battle from Decatur by a 37 to 30 score, Saturday morning.

The scrappy little Decatur five sprang the surprise of the local prep season and gave G. M. A. its worst scare of the season by holding the Cadtes to an unusually low score, Cadets to an unusually low score, of the two. The G. M. A. team with Hearn at center was favored to beat the DeKalb county lads by a large score but Decatur's ability to break into the Cadet offense and hold Patton and Hearn were the reasons for the upset in the dope.

Decatur opened up with a neat offense in the early moments of play and jumped into the lead soon after the game began and never relinquished the lead during the first half of play. G. M. A. tied the score several times but were unable to get into the lead and when the half ended the score was tied with 15 points each.

G. M. A. opened up the second half with a two point lead with a long field goal from the hands of Mathews and then "Long Boy" Hearn took his stand under the baskets to do what damage he could with the Cadets' shots that went wild. He did just what was expected to him and scored 15 of the Cadet points from under the baskets, with his 6 feet and 7 inches of height, plus a long reach.

It would be an injustice to not mention every Decatur player for it was the whole team's playing that gave the Cadets a run for their money. McGeachy and Whittenburg at guards were the outstanding stars with Melton running a close second. Melton was forced to let Hearn have the tip-off at center but did his part of the game by breaking into the G. M. A. passing while McGeachy and Whittenburg held the G. M. A. forwards well under cover.

For G. M. A. it was Captain Patton doing the passing and floorwork Hearn under the baskets and Mathews doing the long shooting. Mathews scored four field goals from almost the center of the court and his misses were taken care of by Hearn.

The Lineup and Sumary.

G. M. A. (37)	Pos.	DECATUR (30)

MARIST EASY WINNER OVER COMMERCIAL.

Marist easily ran away with Commercial in the first game of the tourney winning by a 39 to 17 score, in a loosely passing game.

Commercial scored its first field goal in the last four minutes of the first half and then rang two more in quick succession, making a total of three field goals in the first half of play. In the second half Commercial was again held helpless in scoring field goals getting only one and that came after 8 minutes of play that elapsed.

Marist played a beautiful guarding game as is shown by the fact that Commercial scored only four field goals during the game. The guards were continually breaking into the Commercial passes.

Both teams played a loose game. Marist scored the majority of its field goals from long range with Player and Fee doing the shooting. Player getting 7 field goals and two fouls while Fee scored five field goals and one foul.

The Line-up and Summary.

FULTON DEFEATED BY BOYS' HIGH.

Boys' High also won a loose passing game from Fulton High by a 41 to 18 score in the second game of the city prep tournament Saturday morning. The game was featured by the passing of Captain Gibbs and the shooting of Courts and Hirsch. Courts scored 20 of the 41 points for Boys' High, five field goals and 10 fouls out of 11 tries. Hirsch scored four field goals and three fouls as his part of the victory.

Fulton High was weak in the passing, being unable to locate any of the players at the right time. Boys' High guards played an important part in the victory in the breaking up of the Fulton passes.

The Boys' High-Fulton game was full of fouls, with Boy's High taking advantage of the free throws. No less than 13 personal fouls were called on Fulton, giving Boys' High 19 tries at the baskets.

The work of Courts, Gibbs and Hirsch was the best for the winners, while Allen and Boyle played good ball for the losers.

The Line-up and Summary.

BOYS' HI. (41)	Pos.	FULT. (18)
Hirsch (11)	r.f.	Rogers

ATHENS HIGH WINNER OF TITLE

Athens, Ga., March 1.—(Special.)—The championship of the Northeast Georgia basketball tournament tonight was claimed by the Athens High school quintet by defeating the Watkinsville five 17-9, in the most spectacular and hard fought game of the tournament in which thirty-two teams took part.

The awards to the winnig team and the runner-up as well as the trophy to the player most valuable to his team were made by W. T. Forbes, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. and Rev. E. L. Hill, Presbyterian minister. Mr. Forbes presented the trophies given by the Y. M. C. A. and A. G. Spalding company and Rev. Mr. Hill, the award of the Banner Herald. Gold basketballs were given each player on the winning team as well as the player most valuable to his team in the tournament, the latter being won by James Harris, of Athens. The A. G. Spalding company gave a handsome silver basketball to the winning team.

The closing game of the tournament was witnessed by close on to a thousand people from all this section. Eastanolle defeated Winder, 22-19.

Tech Hi To Prep At Almand Park

While basketball tournaments are still in our midst, baseball practice has not been forgotten, for if baseball practice is neglected, that will cause teams to flunk, and then nothing can entertain the minds of the fans for the rest of the year, so—

Monday afternoon on the Almand Park diamond, candidates for the 1923 Tech High nine will report to Coach Talbert to prepare for the season's grind. Coach Talbert will put his men through a hard workout.

Other prep aggregations are expected to follow suit within the next few days.

Rickey Leads Squad to Camp

St. Louis, March 1.—Branch Rickey, manager, and President Sam Breedon, of the St. Louis Nationals, left St. Louis today for Bradentown, Fla., escorting the main squad of the Cardinals to the training camp. Only one player, Milton J. Stock, third baseman, is now on the unsigned list.

Jeff Pfeffer, pitcher, who was the source of much trade gossip during the off-season, but who ultimately signed a Cardinal contract, will join the party at Ashley, Ill., while Charlie Barret, chief scout, will be picked up at Nashville, Tenn., according to Rickey.

KID ELBERFELD SIGNED AS COACH

Little Rock, Ark., March 1.—Norman "Kid" Elberfeld, veteran manager of the Little Rock Southern association baseball club, will appear in athletics in a new role next fall. The Kid today signed a contract to become athletic coach at Little Rock college, effective at the opening of the fall term at the college this year, soon after the close of the baseball season. He will of course continue as the Traveler pilot.

Bert Niehoff Will Arrive This Morning Accompanied By Other Members of Team

BY HENRY ALLEN.

Sunday will be a general handshaking day around the headquarters of the Atlanta Baseball company as the members of the 1924 Cracker squad start assembling before embarking for the Griffin training camp Monday morning.

Late Saturday only two of the Crackers had reported to President Corbett, Sheppard, a right hand pitcher, and Baskette, a candidate for one of the receiving positions, had checked in.

Manager Bert Niehoff, accompanied by Red Smith, Art Mueller, and Ray Francis, were not expected until early this morning. The remaining candidates for the receiving positions will report at different times during the day.

The squad will probably leave early Monday for the Griffin camp with the first workout scheduled that afternoon, the weather permitting. About fifteen players will compose the first party embarking for Griffin, while the infield and outfield candidates will not report until March 10.

The members of the squad that are expected to arrive today and leave for Griffin Monday are as follows: Karr, Morrison, Spates, Schwartz, Miller, Lewellyn, Niehaus, Francis, Tecarr and Slappey, pitchers; Haworth, Brock and Baskette.

Reports from Griffin indicate that the work of putting the ball park in shape has been progressing rapidly and everything will be in readiness by the time the squad arrives there.

The Crackers will remain at Griffin until March 29 when they will return to Spiller's field to play the first of a series of exhibition games which will last until the Southern League season gets underway the middle of April.

Play Five Games.

The Crackers will play four or five exhibition games while at the Griffin camp with big league clubs training in this secton before returning to Atlanta.

Griffin is close enough to allow local fans ample opportunity of seeing the Crackers in action in the Griffin games several days in advance of the exhibition season here.

With which teams the games in Griffin will be scheduled has not been announced, but they will be played sometime between March 15 and March 26.

Griffin was selected by President Corbett as a training camp after he had announced that he was considering moving his training quarters because the new stands at Spiller's field would not be completed in time. But recently the forces have been doubled and practically all of the steel work will be completed during the coming week.

It has been planned by President Corbett to have Judge Landis present on March 29 at the first exhibition game to dedicate the new stands. The Southern league season will not be opened here until April 17.

Prospects for the Crackers during the coming season are exceedingly bright. There has been practically a house-cleaning since last year and many fans believe that Bert Niehoff will lead the locals down the stretch under the wire a winner.

Capable players have been secured for every position and there is bound to be a merry scramble for all of the positions.

The baseball season is on and watch the Crackers' smoke.

GRIFFIN PARK GETTING IN SHAPE.

Griffin, Ga., March 1.—(Special.) The past three days have been typical of baseball weather and during that time the forces of the city and county have combined in working wonders at Southside park, former home of the Griffin baseball team, in the Georgia State league, and beginning Monday the home of the Atlanta Crackers during their spring training season.

The entire field has been graded, is being rolled and in a short time will be ready for action. The place now would hardly be recognized by those who formerly knew it.

CARBONE AND LOHMAN ARE MATCHED

Macon, Ga., March 1.—(Special.) Frankie Carbone, conqueror of Young Stribling, and considered one of the best fighters in his class, will fight Joe Lohman, of Toledo, Ohio, in Macon March 14, if plans now under consideration are completed to the satisfaction of Holt Gewinner, Atlanta promoter, who is putting on the fistic show.

This announcement was made today by Gewinner, who has just returned from a trip to New York, where he got an option on the services of Paul Berlenbach to meet Stribling. The Carbone-Lohman bout will be staged for the benefit of the Macon Baseball club, which will get 40 per cent of the gate receipts.

The winner of the bout will get the chance to meet Young Stribling in Macon during the latter part of April, if Stribling wins his battle with McTigue in Newark March 31. The Lohman-Carbone battle will be for ten rounds to a decision, preceded by a ten-round semi-final and two fast preliminaries of eight and four rounds, respectively.

MANY TEAMS ENTERED IN TOURNEY

Entries are coming in very rapidly for the city amateur basketball championship tournament held by the Central Y. M. C. A. The success of the tournament last year has made it a very popular event, and by closing time for entries which is Tuesday, no doubt the maximum number of teams that can be handled will be registered.

The pep class of the tabernacle when sending in their entry made a statement they were out to win this year and from the playing they have turned out in the last few weeks, the team that stops them will have a good bid for the finals.

College Park High school, the team which displayed good ball in the tournament last year has again entered a team and hopes for better breaks than last season.

Draughon's Business college is also thinking in terms of a city championship in their weight. Coach Phillips is working his team overtime in preparation for this event.

Regarding the winners in the Sunday School Leagues, all have said they would enter the city tournament following the S. S. A. A. championships, so a very classy entry list will be ready for the drawings on Tuesday night.

No entry will be accepted after Tuesday night. Officials have been selected for the games and fast play should result. The first game will be played Thursday at 7 o'clock, followed by another at 8 and 9 o'clock. All games will be played at Central "Y."

BABE RUTH IS IMPROVING FAST

Hot Springs, Ark., March 1.—"Babe" Ruth, baseball's famous slugger, who suffered an attack of influenza here yesterday, was well on the road to recovery tonight, according to his physician, Dr. W. T. Wooten, who said the patient apparently had passed the serious stage of his illness.

Ruth's temperature had receded early tonight to approximately 100 degrees, the doctor said. His temperature was slightly above 103 degrees this morning.

No unfavorable symptoms have developed, Dr. Wooten stated, and, barring the usual weakness which follows such attacks, he said he thought Ruth would be "all right in a few days." The physician added, however, that he probably would advise his patient to "take things easy" for ten days after he leaves his bed.

"There is not a complication," Dr. Wooten concluded. "The symptoms are mostly favorable and there is every reason now to believe that this attack will be much milder than the attack Ruth suffered here last year."

PLAN TO ORGANIZE NEW BASEBALL LEAGUE

Anderson, S. C., March 1.—Plans to place the Carolina Baseball league composed of Anderson, Abbeville, Greenwood and Laurens, on an organized baseball basis, with a 6-day schedule each week, were laid at a recent meeting of the Anderson club at which officers were elected for the new year.

Scores of fans in attendance are said to have favored organized baseball for the league, which was recommended as a basis for operations by J. Reed Fowler, elevated at the meeting to the office of president of the club. Much confusion and many complications could be eliminated by this plan, President Fowler said. The program includes sale of season tickets before the opening of the season in order to finance the club.

Beside Mr. Fowler, other officers elected were Leon W. Harris, vice president, and Mell Brown, secretary and treasurer. The new board of directors includes the following names: A. M. McFall, B. C. King, J. Reed Fowler, Leon W. Harris, Mell Brown, A. H. Dagnall, Lee W. Milford, Paul Browne, Gordon Ezelle and W. O. Marett.

A PIECE FOR THE PAPER

By Paul Warwick

Countin' Chickens.

All hail the shimmy-finals—upper bracket versus lower bracket and vice versa. Georgia and Alabama occupying the upper berth, North Carolina and the Mississippi Aggies making up the lower. Then what?

That's a gray horse of another color. On form displayed before, Alabama may have the slightest vestige of an edge on Georgia—but Georgia has an ability to rise to occasions, thereby giving profuse possibilities to the Monday evening entertainment.

* * * * * * * * *

On form previously displayed in the tournament, to continue the same line of unblemished thought, North Carolina has an advantage over the Mississippi crowd. Never did basketball team look more finished nor more perfectly co-ordinated than did the Tar Heel crew Saturday afternoon while they were eliminating Lynn Bomar, Gil Reece and the remainder of Josh Cody's hopes. They seemed never at a loss—and haven't been so far.

* * * * * * * * *

On the other quintet of digits, however, the Aggies have a habit of winning games, no matter whether they show what is sometimes labelled "class," exactly, or not. Young Perkins, inventor of the 220-yard snowbird, has not yet vanquished his contrary thumb sufficiently to show his wonted accuracy, and when he does start flinging them from Five Points, there's no telling what may happen to the smooth precision of Carmichael, et al. It must be rather disconcerting to have those long shots sift through.

* * * * * * * * *

From a pure analytical standpoint, the lower berth is a bit more desirable than the upper, just like it is on railroad trains—although sentiment and an aversion to dope make one entirely willing to admit that either Georgia or Alabama is liable to put the skids to either the Ags or Carolina. "You never can tell" should be the motto graven on the shield of every sporting writer.

* * * * * * * * *

The tournament committee, we understand, has done one very kind thing. It has eliminated this business of having the losing semi-finalists play it out for third-place as an introductory measure for the final activity.

That always did look a bit like adding insult to injury. Kind of an anticlimax. Never have been able to understand how the two preliminary teams could play as well as they do on these occasions. The finals of the city prep championship will be used as an asbestos elevator, according to announcement.

BY ROY E. WHITE.

Tech High vs. Marist and G M. A. vs. Boys' High will be the schedule Monday afternoon in the semifinal round of the city prep basketball tournament now being played on the new court in the city auditorium. Tech High was idle in the first round, while Marist defeated Commercial 39 to 17, Boys' High eliminated Fulton by a 41 to 18 score and G. M. A. won a close battle from Decatur by a 37 to 30 score, Saturday morning.

The scrappy little Decatur five sprang the surprise of the local prep season and gave G. M. A. its worst scare of the season by holding the Cadets to an unusually low score, considering the comparative strength of the two. The G. M. A. team, with Hearn at center, was favored to beat the DeKalb county lads by a large score but Decatur's ability to break into the Cadet offense and hold Pattoin and Heran were the reasons for the upset in the dope.

Georgia and Tech will again set out ferninst one another—thank goodness! This consummation has devoutly been wished for many a moon; it's a thing the old state has long ached to see; it's a feature of Georgia's life which Georgia feels it has a RIGHT to—and there's no soul in the borders of the state who will deny its appropriateness. There's no reason why not; there's no situation which these good lads cannot surmount.

* * * * * * * * *

So let us all forget the little partialities and prejudices which have ruled us in the separated years gone by; let's admit that there's nothing we had rather see than a football game or a baseball game or a basketball game or a track meet or a parchesi game between these two valorous institutions.

Hail Georgia! Hail Tech! Hail the state of Georgia that holds them both and loves them well!

Mississippi Aggies Meet North Carolina Quintet; Competition Waxes Warm

BY PAUL WARWICK.

Just four of them are left with us friends, just four of them remain to battle, battle, battle until the smoke of their battle has cleared away and somebody is declared champion of the Southern Intercollegiate Conference, that august body which is even now pursuing its way in Atlanta in an effort to determine its basketball championship.

Georgia and Alabama, twin sisters; the Mississippi Aggies and North Carolina, of Perkins and Carmichael—these are the teams which remain in the proverbial running. Georgia and Alabama will fight it out Monday night to determine which of them shall meet the Aggies or Carolina Tuesday night, in the feature fray of the tournament, the season and the south.

How Come.

The Georgia and Alabama teams had to wait until Saturday night before they were sure of their permanence in the race; the Aggies and Carolina discovered during the afternoon hours of Saturday that there still remained scrapping for them to do. Pardon a few of Roy White's well-known statistics and we'll submit the scores:

North Carolina, 37; Vanderbilt, 20.
Mississippi Aggies, 38; Tulane 30.
Georgia, 29, Maryland, 25.
Alabama, 40; Auburn, 19.

Alabama, the state, not necessarily the college, palpitated strenously all day Saturday over the news that the University of Alabama and Auburn would meet Saturday night in the first athletic contest in which those two teams have engaged since the good year 1907.

ALABAMA BEATS AUBURN, 40 to 19.

Alabama, possessing one of the strongest cage teams the south has seen in many years, had little trouble in disposing of Auburn, although the smaller team fought frantically against the overwhelming odds which confronted them from the very start.

Carter, Stabler, McGauley and Co., were jsut too much for the polytechnic crew, just as they were too much for the University of Mississippi gang on the day before, presenting an overpowering offense and impregnable defense to bewilder the Auburn crew. The score at the end of the first half was 21 to 7, in Alabama's favor, and remained wide.

The Line-up and Summary:

ALA. (40)	Pos.	AB'N (19)
McGauley (9)	r.f.	Hahn (5)
Stabler (12)	l.f.	B. McKinney (10)
Carter (13)	c.	Harrison (3)
Hudson	r.g.	W. McKinney
McClintock (2)	l.g.	Duke (1)

Referee, Thorp; umpire, Sutton. Substitutes: Alabama—Propst (2) for McClintock; McClintock for Carter; Cohen (2) for Stabler; Salmon for Cohen; score at end of half Alabama 21, Auburn 7; field goals, Alabama 17, Auburn 7; foul goals, Alabama 6 out of 10 tries, Auburn 5 out of 12 tries.

GEORGIA GIVEN BIG SCARE BY MARYLAND.

Staging one of the greatest rallies of the tournament, the University of Maryland quintet held Georgia university to a 29 to 25 score Saturday night. The 'Bulldogs" were favored to win over the Maryland team by a large margin and the playing of Georgia in the first half indicated that all expectations were to be fulfilled, but Georgia was not expecting the scrappy little Maryland five to stage such a comeback.

Georgia started the scoring immediately after the game began and had an 11-point lead before the Maryland team even scored. The "Bulldogs" kept up the fast offensive style all during the first half and when that period ended Georgia was on the long end of a 20 to 6 score, which seemed enough to win the game.

Maryland scored first in the second half and before Georgia knew what had happened the score stood 25 to 19, only a 6-point lead. Maryland had increased its score from 6 points to 19 while Georgia was annexing only five foul goals.

With the score standing 26 to 23 Georgia picked up a bit and Nolan Richardson scored Georgia's only field goal of the second half with only two minutes left to play. It was a wonderful shot and Richardson's back was towards the goal.

The Line-up and Summary.

GA. (29)	Pos.	MD. (25)
Williams (1)	r.f.	Ensor (5)
Richardson (11)	l.f.	Feber (1)
Gurr (10)	c.	Supplee (4)
Benfett (3)	r.g.	Hall
Wiehrs (2)	l.g.	Beatty (2)

Substitutions—Georgia, Pound (2) for Williams; Maryland, Burger (2) for Beatty, Travell for Ensor, Groves (2 for Burger, Ensor for Feber, Beatty for Hall. Burger for Supplee; score at end of half, Georgia 20, Maryland 6; field goals, Georgia 8, Maryland 10; foul goals, Georgia 13 out of 19 tries, Maryland 5 out of 10 tries; referee, Sutton; umpire, Thorp.

E. Hennican, of Tulane, climbed into the lead in the scoring of the tournament Saturday with 17 points making his total 35 points to date. Martin, who scored 24 points Friday afternoon dropped to fifth place when he was held to only two points Saturday afternoon. Cobb, of North Carolina, was a close second to Hennican with 34 points to his credit and has a fair chance of being the leading scorer of the tourney, as his team is still in the running. Ed Gurr, of Georgia, continued his good scoring Saturday night and now is in third place in the point scores. Only 27 men out of the 135 entered have scored a total of 10 points or more during the tourney.

An unusually large number of field goals have been attempted during the tourney and 345 of those trys have been good for two points. There has been 148 foul goals scored out of 307 tries, and had it not been for only 4 fouls in 29 tries Thursday night the percentage would have been much larger.

SALE OF GLENN WRIGHT IS HURTING KANSAS CITY

BY CHARLES J. FOREMAN.

Baltimore, Md., February 22.—Championship teams in the majors do not as a rule break up immediately after capturing their honors, and big minor league champion teams of 1923 are, to a certain extent, following their big league brethren in that respect, but each class AA and A winner appears less formidable than last summer, making retention of their laurels uncertain

Loss of an infielder through sale to a major league club may prevent the Kansas City Blues, minor league champion, and the Baltimore Orioles from again meeting in the junior world's series in the fall of 1924. The personnel of each team is practically the same as last season, with the exception of its premier inner defense man.

Glenn Wright, peer of minor league shortstops, was sold by Kansas City to Pittsburg, where he will start the season in place of Rabbit Maranville. No player to replace the valuable shortfielder has been secured by the Blues and only two youngsters recalled from a small league are available for the vacancy.

Baltimore sent Max Bishop, six years a member of the team, to the Athletics, where he will replace Jimmy Dykes at second base more or less permanently. Bishop guarded second for the Orioles in every one of that team's five successive penant winning years. The Orioles, however, won't miss Max as much as the Blues will miss Wright, for Dick Porter, a "regular" utility man, succeeds the new Mackman.

Weak Pitching Staff.

San Francisco, two-time Pacific Coast league champion, is weak in the box, having lost by the sale route Harry Courtney and Doug McWeeney. Both become White Sox. Little has been done to replace them, but unless successors are found, the Seals may have a rough road, even though not another player was disposed of. McWeeney won 20 games last season and Courtney came through with one less.

Fort Worth, four times Texas league champion, and New Orleans Southern league winner, after the close of their Southern series last fall, in which the Texans were victorious, decided to make some changes, and oddly choose each other's players as some of the athletes wanted. The result has been a number of trades between the two.

Fort Worth won its four pennants with practically the same line-up, but in going after the five-time honors held by Baltimore, will present quite a changed team. The New Orleans aggregation likewise will be somewhat different. Neither team, despite its trades, is rated as strong as in 1923.

Hartford, Eastern league winner, which triumphed over Baltimore in a post-season series, is shy several of its champions, among them being Lou Gehrig, the first baseman on whom five clubs refused to waive a few weeks ago.

Hartford seems better equipped to duplicate its triumph in the Eastern than any other big minor winner, having all its regulars intact with the exception of Gehrig. The other players recalled were not big factors in the team's success. The place of Gehrig will be taken by Jerry Belanger, who was forced to the bench by the Yankee farmhand last summer.

The Oklahoma City team, Western league winner, has two vacancies in the box to fill, caused by the sale of Emil Yde to Pittsburg and of George Payne to Los Angeles. The team won 102 games last season and of those Yde turned in 28 and Payne, 24—more than half, so the management has a big problem to fill their places.

Besides the brace of boxmen, Ed Hock, star outfielder and lead-off man, a .300 hitter, was recalled by Cincinnati. Yde's stickwork also will be missed. He hit .309 and played 97 games.

Infield Is Weakened.

In addition to disposing of its shortstop, Kansas City wrecked its inner works further by selling Walter Hammond, one of its two second sackers, to Reading. Lena Blackburne, the other one, may go too, making the Blues' infield appear quite a rocky one.

Armstrong, the third sacker, prac-

JOE KIRKWOOD WINS FOURTH CONSECUTIVE TOURNAMENT

* * * * * * * * *

New Orleans, La., March 1.—Using his driver and putter as his most effective weapons, Joe Kirkwood, representing the Rockwood Hall Country club, New York literally clubbed 42 golfers into submission today in the final 36 holes of play in the 72-hole Mardi Gras open championship tournament at the New Orleans Country club, winning easily with a score of 294. Jack Forrester, who was topping the field at the conclusion of the initial 36 holes of play yesterday, dropped back to fifth place with a score of 304. The Australian trick-shooter was the only player who shot under the 300 mark.

By capturing the Mardi Gras tournament it marked the fourth consecutive event in which Kirkwood has been returned a winner. The Texas open championship tournament conducted at San Antonio, Texas, was the first tournament that Kirkwood annexed. He moved over to Corpus Christi where he also finished on top. The third tournament won by the trick-shooter was the Houston open.

Kirkwood registered a 74, three above par, for his morning round and came back in the afternoon and shot a 75.

He took command of the going at the end of the 54 holes of play.

Creavey Runner-up.

Bill Creavey finished in runner-up position with a score of 301.

Wallie Nelson, New Orleans Country club professional, navigated the links today exactly in the same number of strokes as he did on the opening day of the tournament with 151 and finished third with 302.

Jack Burke, who has finished fourth in the last two tournaments in which he has competed, again finished in fourth place.

Jack Forrester "cracked" in his game today and took a pair of 80s to finish in fifth place. Harold Long, Tom Boyd and Tom Kerrigan followed with scores of 305.

"Wild Bill" Mehlhorn, who was resting in third position yesterday, fell back to ninth place today by taking 79 and 78 for a total of 306. Fred Knight, West End Country club professional, and Charlie Hoffner barely got in the money with scores of 307.

Arthur DeMane, one of the top-notches in the first 36 holes of play, fell back to 17th place in the final day of play by taking a 86 and 77 for a total of 311.

Harold Long and C. S. Williamson, Jr., who tied for first place in the amateur-professional best ball team match Thursday, with Frank Godchaux and Jack Gordon with scores of 69 came back yesterday and won this event with a best ball score of 68. Godchaux and Gordon held 73.

Not to Extend Racing Season

New Orleans, March 1.—Replying to reports which have gained circulation that the Jefferson Park Fair association would extend its spring meeting to April 1, A. Rouprich, of the Jefferson Park management, announced today that the winter racing season would close on March 17, as scheduled.

"Our racing season is plenty long enough," Mr. Rouprich said. "The reports are absolutely groundless. Jefferson's racing will close March 17."

Racing at the fair grounds will close after next Tuesday when the sport will be shifted to Jefferson.

Bonnel Named Boxing Champ

Paris, March 1.—Andre Bonnel, light heavyweight champion of France, and Clement, the champion of Switzerland, have been designated by the International Boxing union to fight for the title of light heavyweight champion of Europe, taken from "Battling Siki" as the result of his escapades not long after he had won it from Georges Carpentier.

It is stipulated that Bonnel and Clement must meet publicly before April 30, failing which they must fight in private before May 15. The winner will be qualified to meet the American champion indorsed by the National Boxing association on some date before July 31 for the world's title, now vacant.

FEW WRESTLERS EVER SUCCEED IN RING—EDGREN

Berlenbach Only Matman To Show Any Promise; Other Cases Are Cited

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

It has become a ring tradition that a wrestler can't be made into a boxer. Wrestlers have tried boxing often enough, and have failed. Frank Gotch, a great wrestler, thought he could step into Jim Jeffries' shoes when Jim retired from the ring. He had a couple of bouts and was beaten so easily that he gave up all idea of becoming a boxer. Big Joe Rogers, called the "American Apollo," a huge wrestler well over six feet tall and weighing nearly 300 pounds, tried boxing. Tom O'Rourke managed him and intended to work him up as a heavyweight challenger, but Rogers flivvered after half a dozen starts and went back to wrestling.

"Strangler" Ed Lewis, heavyweight wrestling champion, thought he'd take up boxing and go after Dempsey's crown. A session with the gloves on showed Lewis that as a box-fighter he was a very good wrestler.

On the other hand, years ago Tom Sharkey tried wrestling, and in spite of his big muscles didn't make much of himself in the grappling game. Walter Miller, western middleweight wrestling champion, started as a boxer with Mike and Tom Gibbons in St. Paul, but gave up boxing for wrestling when he found that he didn't have speed enough to land on either of the Gibbons boys.

Georges Hackenschmidt, the greatest heavyweight wrestler in the world in his prime, wanted to become a boxer and fight Jeffries. George thought he was stronger than Jeff, and faster, because he could turn a back summersault on a handkerchief and move around a mat faster than any other wrestler he ever met. Hack was a physical marvel—no doubt of it—and amazingly fast for a wrestler and strong man. He boxed a few months with Gunner Moir, an English wrestler who took up boxing and became English heavyweight champion. Hack told me that he could handle Moir without much trouble and he thought Moir about in Jeffries' class. Then little Tommy Burns went to England and knocked Moir out easily, and Hack revised his opinion and stayed in his own game.

Dempsey Quit in Time.

About fifteen years ago a little Canadian wrestler and boxer named Art Edmunds did some fine fighting. But he was much more a boxer than a wrestler, although he held Canadian championships in both sports, and he might have become a world's feather-weight champion at boxing if he hadn't developed too much muscle on the mat.

Gotch, Lewis, Hackenschmidt, all seasoned, big, muscular wrestlers of that type, would look like truck horses in the ring against a good middleweight, and would be easy victims of any hard puncher.

But here's a fact that isn't generally known.

Jack Dempsey started his career as a wrestler!

Before he began boxing he traveled around through Colorado, Montana and Utah towns and camps taking on wrestling bouts with local champions. He was a pretty good wrestler, and Walter Miller, who trained a little with Dempsey in Los Angeles and saw how Jack could slip on a half Nelson instead of using a left uppercut, said Jack could make a good showing against any wrestler even now.

Dempsey was lucky enough to become interested in boxing and to start as a professional boxer when he was only nineteen. He never did any more wrestling. At that time he was slenderly built, and except for his wide shoulders and powerful arms was not near his full development. He hadn't developed a wrestler's muscle-bound torso. A couple of years later Dempsey couldn't have become a great fighter, for wrestling would have tied up the great speed that is Jack's chief fighting asset.

Berlenbach Shows Wrestling Training

Bob Fitzsimmons, the crafty and hard-hitting holder of three world's championships, middleweight, light-heavy and heavyweight, at different times, started as a fighter and wrestler combined. Down in New Zealand, when Fitz was a boy, fights were still held under London prize ring rules, bare fists, to a finish, and wrestling locks and throws allowed. Fitz, born in Helston, Cornwall, knew a lot about Cornish wrestling, in which triping and wrestling while standing up are combined, and used wrestling tricks in his early finish fights. But later, he always liked to wrestle, and usually had a wrestler in his camp when training for a fight.

He didn't, however, get on the mat and tug around by the hour and tie his muscles into hard and rigid knots. That Fritz wasn't a regular wrestler was proved one time in New York after the Horton law went out, when there were no boxing and some boxers tried wrestling. Fitz and Gus Ruhlin were matched to wrestle in Madison Square Garden. Ruhlin knew nothing about wrestling, but he threw Fitz. It was an awful blow of Bob's pride. He never wrestled again.

Paul Berlenbach, the most sensational newcomer in the American ring, who started with a string of twenty-one knockouts and who looks like a coming champion in the light-heavy and perhaps the middleweight class, was an amateur wrestler. He was a good one, too—the best in the country. He won amateur championships. But fortunately Berlenbach became interested in boxing at the New York Athletic club, where he trained, and put the gloves on with Hickey.

Dan recognized a possible genius in the boy and encouraged him to keep on boxing. Paul was soon boxing in amateur bouts, invariably knocking his man out in a couple of rounds or so. He was a bit awkward and stiff from the wrestling, but he had a wicked punch and a knack of landing it.

In Berlenbach's fights even today there is a trace of his wrestling action, but it is being rapidly eliminated. Luckily he didn't wrestle long enough to tie his muscle into knots.

Berlenbach's punch is a knockout punch, but it isn't like Dempsey's punch or Fitzsimmons' punch or any other fighter's shock punch.

He has a natural speed and strength for a shock puncher, but not the shock puncher's knack of timing so that all the force of the blow is delivered at the moment of impact. Berlenbach's punch has a follow-through, like a golfer's swing. It isn't a push punch, like Luis Firpo's, because the shock is delivered at the impact, but is is different from Dempsey's because the force of the blow is carried along farther. It is as if Berlenbach's mind, like a golfer's, is concentrated on coordinating the effort for a long drive through a big smooth swing. He uses a follow through punch.

When Berlenbach fought Carbone, who never had been knocked out before, he used a fast left jab that either knocked Carbone cleanly off his feet or drove his head back between his shoulders. There are few fighters who can deliver a knockdown with a left jab the way Berlenbach does.

Dan Rickey Watches Him.

Once Carbone hooked his right just as Berlenbach drove in a hard left. Berlenbach's gloved fist didn't reach Carbone's body, but struck him on the shoulder. The blow had such driving force that it lifted Carbone from his feet and dropped him flat on his back. Carbone got up with an incredulous look. He knew the blow hadn't reached body or head, yet it had dropped him. Dan Hickey had Berlenbach under orders to do nothing but dance around and jab in the Carbone fight. Berlenbach needs ring experience and wasn't getting enough of it by winning in a punch.

At the beginning of the sixth Hickey said to Berlenbach: "This has gone far enough—do as you please."

Berlenbach went tearing in for the knockout and landed it in a minute and forty-seven seconds.

There are several other kinds of punches that Paul doesn't know. He is totally unacquainted with the powder-puff punch so popular in light-heavyweight circles and used by champion Mike McTigue, and to some extent even by American Champion Gene Tunney. The powder-puff punch has even made one or two world's champions. Freddy Welsh took the title from Ritchie in England with it. He probably never saw the La Blanche pivot blow, the Fitzsimmons shift and solar plexus punch or the McCoy corkscrew, unless old timer Dan Hickey has illustrated these. He hasn't used the Gunboat Smith "Occipital punch" that laid out so many good heavyweights, or the Dempsey clout under the left ear that knocks them all dizzy. He hasn't run up against Harry Greb's "windmill punch." But he's likely to have one middleweight fight before he goes up among the light heavies, and that will be with Harry Greb.

Berlenbach, under Dan Hickey's instruction, is getting as far away from wrestling as possible. Hickey is extremely careful not to let him do any hard work that might redevelop the wrestling muscles that have softened down and flattened out. He is not allowed to handle dumbells, wrist machines, pulley weights, medicine ball, or any muscle building apparatus in the gymnasium. His training work consists only of running, walking, deep breathing and light, fast boxing.

Matt McGrath Disappointed.

The reason why a mature wrestler never can become a good boxer is simple. He has developed his flexor muscles—the muscles that bend the limbs to hold and pull. A boxer uses the extensor muscles almost exclusively. These are the muscles that straighten out limbs, to drive or push. The two sets of muscles are directly opposed. Overdevelopment of the flexor muscles makes it impossible to use the extensor muscles freely.

One of the most interesting cases illustrating this point was that of Matt McGrath, the Brooklyn hammer thrower. When Matt was world's record holder with hammer and 56-pound weight he suddenly became ambitious to become a fighter and go after the heavyweight championship. He was six feet two, had tremendous shoulders and arms, light legs, and weighed 285 pounds. Matt spent an entire winter punching the bag, playing handball and boxing. At the end of that time Matt told me that he found he couldn't shoot his arms out fast enough with a punch, for some reason he couldn't understand, and that as he lacked the hitting speed a fighter must have he was going to give it up.

So Matt went back to hammer throwing. Funny—he couldn't throw the hammer and it took him a year to get back to his old championship form. In that winter of boxing he had developed his extensor muscles enough to interfer with the action of the flexor muscles used in pulling the big weights around and giving the final tug or "whip" that sent them flying out to a record distance.

This team will be matched against Albany on the first day of the tournament and it is expected to be one of the most interesting events to be held, as Albany also has a fine team.

The program of the tournament is as follows:

Ouimet and Jones Met Only Once in Title Play

:-: Few Wrestlers Ever Become Ringmen :-:

V. M. I. Wrestlers Remain Undefeated for Season

Lexington, Va., March 1.—(Special.) V. M. I. wrestlers by defeating the Army, 10 to 6, last week remain undefeated for two seasons. North Carolina, V. P. I., Virginia, and the Army have fallen before the Cadets so far this season. Davidson and Western Maryland have yet to be met on the mat, and in addition the V. M. I. grapplers will compete in the sectional Olympic tryouts to be held in the V. M. I. gymnasium March 28 and 29.

Coach Quitman's matmen came out of the Army meet in good shape, with the exception of Charlie Barbour, who wrenched a knee that has been giving him trouble since the football season. In spite of the victory over the Army, the Cadets are taking the Davidson meet seriously, V. M. I. easily won the meet with the Wild Cats last year, but the Carolinians are expected to present a greatly strengthened lineup when they tackle the Cadets here Saturday.

Were Real Stars.

Zip Lowe, 135 pounds, and Captain Rup Baird, 145 pounds, were the heroes of the Army meet, as there two Cadets won their matches by falls. Lowe pinned his man in 3 minutes, 30 seconds, and Baird put his opponent's shoulders to the mat in 4 minutes. Coach Quinlan is relying on these grapplers in the Olympic try-outs, as neither man has lost a match in two seasons. Lowe has thrown his man in every meet this year, and Captain Baird has never been thrown in his four years of wrestling at V. M. I.

Baughan and Carlton wrestled their men to draws in the 125-pound and 158-pound classes, respectively. Baughan's opponent was Walter Young, who was formerly a cadet at V. M. I. White, in the 115-pound class, had a rest, as the West Pointers have no bantam wrestlers and this bout was waived by agreement.

Captain Ives, of the army, won the referee's decision over Denton, Cadet 175-pound representative. This bout was very closely contested, the time advantage being only 42 seconds. Griffith, of the Army, also won a decision over Barbour, the Cadet heavyweight, who had won all of his previous matches for the past two seasons.

FINAL PREPARATIONS ARE MADE FOR HIGH SCHOOL MEET

Lexington, Va., March 1.—(Special.)—With the opening of the All-Virginia High and Prep School Basketball tournament less than a week away, final plans for the big meet are taking shape and everything is expected to be in complete readiness when Referee Zerfoss blows the opening whistle Thursday night, sending the preparatory quints into action at the first preliminary. It is definite that the preliminaries of the preparatory schools division will open up Thursday night, with the high school quints getting into action the following afternoon.

Formal entrance blanks are pouring in with each mail, carrying the lineups of the various teams as well as the season's record. While much advance "dope" is ordinarily forthcoming from such information, it provides room for a great deal of speculation as to what certain teams will be able to do in the actual tournament play.

Many quints having imposing season records may not find the going so good at tournament time, while, on the other hand, "dark horses" are liable, during tournament progress, to jump into the limelight, and a team whose season's play has not been of championship caliber may surprise the "dopesters" by eliminating an opponent, potentially stronger. Of the preparatory schools entered, Randolph-Macon Academy of Bedford, A. M. A., Fishburne, Fork Union, Blackstone, Christchurch, Benedictine appear to have the best records. A. M. A. has been showing a continued improvement since the season got under way, and can be expected to give a good account of itself in tournament play.

Fishburne Is Strong.

Fishburne, with a veteran aggregation and a long succession of wins, looms up strong, as does also Randolph-Macon academy by its recent victory over Fork Union. The Pitt pupils, however, are anxious for another chance at the Bedford outfit, and are hoping the drawing for places will tie them up again in tournament play. Coach Compton, with his Blackstone quint is not going to be lightly considered for those acquainted with the caliber of his teams realize that it is in such emergencies and on such occasions as at a tournament, that the crafty mentor of the Blackstoners is most likely to have his crowd going "right" and fighting it out on even terms with an admittedly stronger team. Christchurch, with the resourceful Billy Gooch coaching it, has come through a good season, and may be expected to continue in the state meet, and the same may be said of Benedictine. The capital city boys have demonstrated their ability on more than one occasion this season, and must be considered seriously in doping a tournament winner.

Of the high schools, nearly a half score look good enough for tournament victors. Charlottesville, Staunton, Maury, John Marshall, Lynchburg, Roanoke, Danville, Petersburg, Martinsburg, Portsmouth, Newport News, Suffolk and several others are well up in season averages. A big surprise is sure to result in this division of the tournament however, and some hard fought contests are anticipated.

Trophies for the big events are arriving almost daily now, and will shortly be put on display at the Corner, where they will greet the seeking eye of the ambitious athlete on his arrival at Lexington. It is doubtful if any state tournament will bring together a group of as evenly-matched teams as the First Virginia tournament will. The big detracting feature of most such meets is the fact that a large inumber of admittedly weak teams are entered and many lop-sided games result. Aside from the lack of interest from the spectators' standpoint, a good team will exert almost as much energy to defeat a weak team as a strong one. It is believed, however, that the big meet here will bring together the proverbial "nick" of the passing of excitement of the secondary school teams of the Old Dominion, and Lexington, in a passion of excitement, awaits the opening of the tournament.

Reds Leave for Orlando Camp

Cincinnati, March 1.—Manager Pat Moran, Coach Jack Hendricks, Outfielder George Burns and Catcher Gus Sandberg made up the first contingent of Cincinnati National leaguers which left the home city this morning bound for the spring training camp at Orlando, Fla.

The veteran catchers, Hargrave and Wingo, are already in training, and the pitchers are on their way south by other routes. Another small squad, including Eddie Roush, is to leave next Saturday.

The majority of the main squad, however, will journey to Orlando from their respective homes.

N. GA. TEAM READY FOR PRACTICE

Dahlonega, Ga., March 1.—(Special.)—Coaches Bennett and Cobb will issue the first call for the baseball candidates for the North Georgia Agricultural college team next Tuesday afternoon, March 4.

The services of such brilliant stars as McDonald, one of the south's leading college pitchers; Hollis, Barton, Wafford, Kent and Clyatt will be lost for this season, but with the large amount of new material on hand the coaches should make a formidable aggregation of ball tossers.

Only four of last year's varsity team are back for service, these being Humber, brilliant southpaw moundsman; Nesbitt, first baseman; Holden, second baseman, and R. S. Parham, outfielder. Promising material from the scrub team of last year comes forth in the persons of Medlock and R. A. Parham, outfielders, and Stroupe, infielder.

Much is expected of McKinney, Nash, former Washington High star, and Calhoun, Rockmart High flash of a year ago. The records of these men speak well, and they should put up a game fight for a place on the varsity.

If the pitching staff pulls through, the Bluejackets should have a splendid team. Humber, the only veteran back for action, is ready for service; Bedgood, a newcomer, is expected to make good, while Wood, Parham and Carter are expected to show their stuff on the mound.

Coaches Bennett and Cobb are very enthusiastic over the promising material on hand, and work will start immediately.

LaGrange High Wins Tourney

LaGrange, Ga., March 1.—(Special.)—On the final day of the fourth congressional district basketball tournament, the LaGrange High school performed the unusual feat of playing three games in one day and winning all of them and at the same time winning the tournament. In the afternoon game LaGrange defeated Waverly Hall by the one-sided score of 53 to 11. In the semi-finals Friday night, LaGrange defeated Columbus High by the score of 31 to 8.

The curtain defense of Coach Gressette did not allow the Columbus boys to make a single field goal. In the finals, which were played immediately following this game, the LaGrange team again ran wild against Carrollton, running up a score of 48 to 31. The superb teamwork of the LaGrange aggregation outclassed the entire field of eleven teams entered and in the games Friday night was the best ever seen in LaGrange.

Burnette, of Carrollton, was the highest individual scorer of the tournament with a total of 41 points, with Reeves, of LaGrange, a close second with 39. Lester, of LaGrange, was unanimously accorded the honor of being the most valuable player in the tournament.

Mack Leaves For Montgomery

Philadelphia, March 1.—Headed by Manager Connie Mack, the local contingent of the Philadelphia American league baseball club left here last night for its spring training camp at Montgomery, Ala.

Other players will be picked up at Baltimore, Greenville, S. C., and Birmingham, Ala. The Philadelphia party is due in Montgomery Sunday morning and the entire team is expected there by Monday morning, when the first practice is scheduled.

Francis Won From Bob Then

BY INNIS BROWN.

During the past five years, in each of which Bobby Jones and Francis Ouimet have taken part in the national amateur championship, the two of them combined have engaged in no less than thirty-four matches, Jones playing eighteen and Ouimet sixteen. Jones has been a finalist once and a semi-finalist twice, while Ouimet has engaged in one final and another semi-final match over that space, and yet the two have engaged each other but once in championship combat.

That meeting took place in 1920 at the Engineers' Country club on Long Island, where the two clashed in the semi-final round. As has frequently happened where two aces came together in titular battle the result was something different from the close battle that had been anticipated.

To go back and gather up the threads of the story as it looked on the eve of their meeting, the usual divergence of opinion as to the probable outcome existed. The year before at Oakmont, in the first championship played after the war, Bobby had played brilliantly to work his way along to the final where he was upset by Davy Herron. However, there were none to doubt the brilliance of his game, nor its power. He appeared to have about everything that a champion needed, save a bit of fractiousness of temper, which as a matter of fact, had been somewhat overdone in the telling.

Jones Picked to Win.

Even as critics a decade before had begun proclaiming the coming triumph of Chick Evans in each succeeding championship, only to have to wait until 1916 to see it achieved, so then many were beginning to nominate Bobby as a future champion, and with that championship at the Engineers' these were coming to insist that Bobby's year was at hand. He began brilliantly enough, tying with Fred Wright for the low qualifying total at 154 compiled over the courses of the Engineers' and the North Shore Country club a short hop away. The luck of the draw threw Jones and Wright in the same half of the bracket and they decided to settle the medal issue on the outcome of their match, provided they survived to get together, which is just what took place. It is quite possible that the psychological side of this match had something to do with the outcome of the following tussle with Ouimet.

Meantime as to Ouimet, the hero of Brookline and Ekwanok had scored his last championship triumph six years before, in which interim his showings had not been especially brilliant. There were those who were inclined to believe that illness, which beset him during the war period, had extracted something from him which he would never be able to fully regain, and that to be a bit blunt about it, he had seen his best days as a golfer. At the hands of the brilliant durable young Atlantan, he was thought to be in for a lot of trouble.

Golf is a baffling proposition. On the preceding day against Wright, Jones had played some amazing golf, and as has been suggested above, the psychological effect or aftermath of this match may have been reflected in his struggle with Ouimet. From various sources reports had reached Jones that Wright was promising what he would do to him. Whether or not the reports were true, they had the effect of working Bobby up to a nervous tension and determination such as is rarely aroused in him. As a result he turned the first nine holes in the morning round in 35, including a 6 at the ninth. His card showed four 3s, three of that four being birdies. He eventually beat Wright by 6 and 4.

Bee Bothers Bobby.

Against Ouimet, however, the story was a different one. Hooked tee shots and unsound work on the greens took their toll, especially in view of the fact that Francis was playing a fine steady game, skidding above par in but few instances over the difficult Engineers' course. Returns on the morning round showed Ouimet leading by three holes. Bobby got one of these back at the first in the afternoon, and then they halved the next five in a row, dividing the sixth with birdie 3's. At the seventh occurred one of the many serio-comic situations that have marked championships from time to time. Bobby had this rather treacherous green in two, and faced a possibility of getting down a birdie 3 to win. Just as he was getting set to putt a humble bee buzzed around and caused some distraction. Frank Hoyt, who was helping to marshal the gallery, finally succeeded in caging the marauder in a megaphone but forgot to cover the opening at the small end and it escaped. Bobby joined in the chase then swinging his putter vigorously in his attempt to drive the disturber away. Finally he succeeded, but when he settled to his putt, he made a weak job of it, the ball stopping six feet or so short, from which distance he missed even a 4 for a half. Ouimet followed with wins at the short eighth, where Bobby was trapped, and after two ineffective attempts to get out picked up, and also the ninth, where a hooked tee shot, swung the balance against Jones.

Thus Ouimet turned for home five up. Jones had taken 42, estimating a 6 on the eighth, against the 35 that he shot at Wright on the same nine holes the preceding day. They halved the tenth and eleventh, and then Francis became dormie six, when he won the twelfth, where Bobby missed a ridiculously short putt for a half, and a pair of par 4's, yielding halves at the thirteenth gave Ouimet the match by 6 and 5.

HARRIS ATTRACTING MUCH ATTENTION AS MANAGER

Washington, March 1.—Young Bucky Harris, new Washington manager, is attracting quite a bit of attention, having the reins of a major league club at the age of 37, with more than half of his teammates older than he. Harris may attract attention not only to himself, but to his club as well when the American league season gets under way, if he guides it with the confidence and aggressiveness he has shown in his short career.

Clarke Griffith has spent coin lavishly in securing minor league stars and if some of these recruits—there's more than a score of 'em—live up to their minor records, the Washington aggregation that has shown brief flashes of form in recent seasons, may threaten New York, Detroit and Cleveland quite a bit.

Griffith has always been strong for youngsters and has garnered rafts of them in the last few seasons, but few have done well. Washington's hopes rest in the youngsters of 1924 and Griff, in naming Harris leader, in preference to a number of experienced older men, hopes that a youthful pilot may be able to get better results from his recruits than an older manager would.

George McBride, Clyde Milan and Owen Bush each took over the leadership of the Nationals' inexperienced in managing. Each had reached the end of his career as a player. Each was no more successful than had been Griffith himself.

Now with the best second sacker in the league at the helm, Griffith's team, instead of being driven or directed to a pennant or near pennant, may be led to high honors by Harris, just as Tris Speaker led Cleveland in 1920 to its first flag after Forest City teams had tried in vain for forty-one years to get to the top.

As the Washington team now stands it is inferior to those of Detroit and Cleveland, and, of course, New York. The Nationals' greatest need is a right handed hitting outfielder. In the effort to repair that weakness Griffith will let no right handed gardener get out of the American league on waivers.

Philadelphia and Boston, the two clubs harboring aplenty of such players, have been approached by Griffith, but neither seem willing to sell or trade, so it seems up to recruits Carr Smith, who led the Piedmont league at bat, and Lance Richburg, who held equal honors in the Southern in 1923.

Joe Judge and Harris care for the right side of the diamond in a way that hardly could be improved upon, and if Roger Peckinpaugh shows his 1923 form only third base will be doubtful on the inner works. Ossie Bluege and Jim Prothro, two lame-legged chaps last season, claim to be able to cover the jinxed sack now. Bluege looked great last spring. Protho is an experienced Southern leaguer.

Ed Gharrity, forced to the bench by Muddy Ruel's great playing last season, has quit the club, but Ruel, assisted by young Hargrave and Bennett Tate, from the Southern league, should leave little desired behind the bat.

Washington's pitching staff, always more or less uncertain, seems in better shape than usual with Zahniser and Marberry showing major league class. Johnson, Russell, Mogridge and Zachary form a capable big four of experienced men, and much is expected of Joe Martina, veteran, Fred Wingfield and Slim McGrew, youngsters, from the Southern league and Ray Joyce, Eastern leaguer. Then there is the possibility of one or two of the lesser-known hurlers coming through.

So while Harris has the reins of a club that hasn't scared the leaders to a great extent since 1913, he has more than an outside chance of making up for the lost time in his managerial debut.

RING MADE GREAT RECORD IN SPITE OF HANDICAPS

Philadelphia, March 1.—(Special.) Jimmy Ring won 18 and lost 16 games last year, a remarkable achievement for a pitcher on a last place club. With a weak and uncertain infield behind him and an ordinary outfield, Ring toiled in 34 games and won more than half of them, coming within one game of the much coveted 20 mark, that mark upon which outstanding pitchers of the year alone may stand. But the best thing about Ring is his disposition. He gives not only his arm but his best efforts of mind and body to his ball club. Jimmy signed his contract with the Phillies the other day without an argument and with a cheerful smile and a happy word of good will. He had had a grand year. President Baker's offer pleased him, he said; he would have another grand year, so he affirmed.

Arthur Fletcher, manager of the Phils, pays a high tribute to his pitcher's character as well as his pitching wing. Nothing finer could be said of any ball player than the word the old Giant star shortston has for Jimmy the Ring. Quoth Fletcher: "Ring showed more stuff last season than any pitcher in the league. On a team up in the race what a grand man he would be. A fellow who is always ready and willing to work; never crabs about being on a tail end team. Seems to be well satisfied. No matter how many games he wins it never goes to his head, and that is more, I know, than can be said about a lot of pitchers. Ring can well be compared to Walter Johnson, who always worked on a lowly team and yet gladly and cheerfully gave his best and won the love of fans, associates and club officials."

Ring's record of last year was truly remarkable, when the conditions under which he worked are considered. He won more complete games than any pitcher on the Giant staff. He came within one of winning as many games as did the sensational Dazzy Vance. Both of these grand pitchers had weak teams behind them, and yet both arose above their surroundings to impress the baseball world. Ring held the opposition to 3.77 earned runs per game.

But, standing out above his pitching record, was his spirit of a mighty battler of the old times who refused to be daunted just because he was on the losing side, and who elected to die on the field in every game with a ring of his slain around him. Worthy of especial mention is Jimmy the Ring, the star pitcher, willing worker and happy warrior on a losing ball team.

BUSY WEEK FACING TRACK STARS AS SEASON NEARS END

New York, March 1.—Save for one meet scheduled for March 14, the next seven days, in so far as the east is concerned, will wind up the indoor track season in a dazzling array of fleet-footed competition.

Tuesday will be the only idle day for the flying athletes, as there are five meets scheduled on as many nights. On Wednesday comes the national indoor championships, the blue ribbon track meet of the season, the importance of which dwarfs all other meets of the week in comparison.

The national championships will serve as a fitting climax for one of the most successful seasons in the history of track athletics. Competitors who have been partaking in indoor meets this season, have so timed their training that they will be in their very best form.

Athletes who have entered these championships realize that their work will be watched by members of the Olympic team selection committee, and that an exceptional performance at this time will be considered by the committee when the team is selected to represent the United States at the Olympic games in France in July.

The New York Athletic club leads the field in the number of entries with a total of 23. The Illinois Athletic club, present holders of the national title, is one short, with 22 individual entries, and two relay teams. Newark Athletic club is next in order, with 15. Boston Athletic association, Georgetown university and University of Pennsylvania have also entered about a dozen men each with the hope of lifting the crown from Illinois.

The 300-yard, 600-yard, 100-yard and two-mile runs promise to be the feature events of the card. Among the stellar performers in the 300-yard event will be included Loren Murchison, Newark Athletic club; Joe Tierney, Holy Cross; Louis Clark, Johns Hopkins, and a galaxy of other stars.

In the 600-yard feature will be found Jake Driscoll, Boston; A. Coard Taylor and Tom Campbell, New York; Ray Watson, Illinois Athletic club, and Jack Sellers, New York. Joie Ray, Ray Watson, Jimmy Connolly, Abel Viviat, William Sullivan, and George Marsters will match strides with each other for 1,000 yards.

Buffalo Will Train at Rome

Rome, Ga., March 1.—(Special.)—A contract has been made with the Buffalo baseball club of the International League for training camp here.

The visiting club will arrange to put Hamilton park in condition for their use.

A $1,000 guarantee is required and it is expected that the exhibition games played here will cover that amount.

As a result of the Buffalo team coming to Rome the city will receive wide publicity in sporting circles it is said, as several well-known sport writers have reported that they will come with the Bisons.

Awarding of College Letters Again Discussed

Walter Camp Cites the Case Of Bobby Jones Being Given "H" by Harvard Authorities

BY WALTER CAMP,
Special Correspondent of The Constitution.
(Copyright, 1924, by the Consolidated Press Association.)

New York, March 1.—The university letter again is coming in for as much discussion and argumentation as it did in that memorable year when members of the Harvard football team were reported to have been refused their letters because they failed to defeat Yale.

Dr. John Wilce, of Ohio State university, is involved in a controversy because he approved the bestowing of varsity letters upon Ohio State's girl swimmers. He is quite convinced that it is the proper thing to do.

The Harvard Athletic association recently awarded the "H" to Bobby Jones, despite the fact that the champion golfer has never played on a Harvard team.

Perhaps one may gather some idea of the impressiveness of the honor by turning the leaves of history as it affects the university letter. The first article of the college athlete's apparel which had the peculiar significance now attached to the letter, was the cap of his athletic uniform. A man treasured his cap and regarded it as a symbol. Later he wore it on the campus as a distinction. In the very early days, as Dr. Chamberlain, a graduate of the seventies, recalled at a recent Rutgers dinner, football captains exchanged caps after a match. Dr. Chamberlain exhibited a half-dozen caps which he had received in such exchanges.

Was Recognized.

After a time, the cap was embellished with the initial of the university. And by this time, the campus recognized the varsity player out of uniform, by his cap. From that, the transition to the sweater was speedy, and varsity men soon were given sweaters with the letter at the end of the season. Thus came about the material side of the reward for playing on a varsity football or baseball team in the big matches, or for rowing in the varsity boat.

In those days, men were proud of the distinction, and not averse to wearing cap or sweater. And bear it in mind that for all this long period, the letter had one meaning, and one only:

"The wearer has played or rowed on the varsity, in the big event of the season." It was a statement of fact and could not be given or taken away. If a man had so played, he was a letter man and you could not help it. If he had not so played, he was not a letter man, and no subsequent action could make him one.

Then came a time when minor athletics began to flourish, and the members of minor teams commenced to wear letters as nearly like those of the major teams as they dared. Almost at once, the varsity men abandoned the wearing of any insignia except when actually engaged in athletics. As one man expressed it for all, he was "afraid he might be taken for the champion tiddledywinks player."

This brought about the forbidding of minor organizations wearing insignia similar to those of the major teams. But even that restriction and all the laws passed since have never quite restored to its old prestige the wearing of letters. Freshmen turn their prep school sweaters inside out, with the letter concealed, when using them in play at college. Varsity players no longer care about wearing their lettered sweaters on the campus.

Rules Now Strict.

But with the great value attached to "making" a varsity team, and being an actor in the big events, there have come to be very strict and specific rules as to the letter. It is now "awarded." It is no longer an absolute statement of fact. It can be given by the proper authority to a man—as in Bobby Jones' case—who never played in the big games. Substitutes are still rushed in in the last few minutes of play to "get their letters." But in this case there is still recognition of the verities of the case, for these men do actually play, even if only for a few seconds. In other words, the college belief is still quite insistent upon the old "statement of fact."

But such pressure has grown up in the last decade for turning the letter into an award of merit, that many a petition for its granting to some unfortunate, who just missed out, is granted. The case of Bobby Jones is a shining example. Only the outside athletic laws prevented him from representing Harvard on the golf team, and undoubtedly successfully. So they gave him his letter anyhow.

The really new angle of the situation is typified by Dr. Wilce's controversy over the swimming girls' letters. With more and more women going in for sports at co-educational schools, we shall soon see a widespread demand among them for "equal rights" in the matter of the varsity letter.

SEVENTEEN ROOKIES ADDED

TO ST. LOUIS '24 ROSTER

"If Sis comes back we'll be up there; if he doesn't we won't."

Eight recruits are added to the seven pitchers of last year's staff and the hill department looks strong enough to carry any club. Urb Shocker is the leader, Elam Vangilder has arrived, Dave Danforth practically has been whitewashed by Ban Johnson, Ray Kolp is effective against certain clubs, Bill Bayne is a promising young southpaw and there is Hubert Pruett, who stirred the country in 1922 by striking out Babe Ruth repeatedly, to come back after a long rest in 1923.

Olin Voight, grabbed from the Giants through the waiver process, and George Lyons of Los Angeles are the most promising of the new pitching material. Blaeholder, Payne, Grant and Rich are youngsters who were tried a year ago in the spring and did not come up to the major league measurements. Their work with minor league clubs in 1923 is not very encouraging.

The club's scout has a hunch that he has a young wizard in Southpaw Wingard from the University of Alabama. Time alone will decide this. Another rare semipro is Wilson, who had a record of winning 22 straight games on the Kansas City corner lots.

With Hank Severeid starting his eleventh season with the Browns there is not much to worry about for catching. Hank insists upon catching at least 135 games which means about 19 for Pat Collins.

John Schulte, who was the leading hitter in the Southern league in 1922, and had a good year with San Antonio, may take Pat Collins' job away from him. John L. Simmons is the lad who was voted the best player in the amateur organization at Cleveland last summer. Regro and Tyrell are juveniles.

Two new infielders come in with a big league job in front of them. Third base is the weak spot with the Browns. When Eddie Foster, Frank Ellerbe, Eugene Roberston and Jimmy Austin fell down last summer Homer Ezzell was shoved over to the bag to finish the year. Ezzell is a light hitter and the place may be won by either Harry Rice of Tulsa or Sylvester Simon of San Antonio.

The analysis of the 1924 Browns presents two different, distinct clubs. On one side of the ledger they return as they were in 1923—a fifth placer, dragging along the path, unsetting clubs interested in the pennant chase but getting no place in particular themselves.

And then, on the other sheet, they actually resemble the 1922 edition, when they were but one full game behind the New York Yankees in deciding the tense pennant struggle.

This comes about through the mysterious, uncertain condition of George Harold Sisler.

On the tongue of every baseball fan is this burning question:

"Will Sisler play in 1924?"

That question, according to Sisler's own words before departing for the sunny climate of California, will not be definitely answered until the training season closes.

Therefore it is easy to see why the Browns are divided into two sections in preparing their 1924 standing in the American league community.

They may say that one man does not make or break a ball club, but ponder over this for a few moments:

In 1922 Sisler at first base batted 421 and set all sorts of swatting records. The Browns, as has been related, were a nose behind the pennant.

I 1923 Sisler did not step inside the uniform and the Browns came home in the second division.

There has been no unusual stir about the Browns' executive offices in moving towards improvement. Purchases were made here and there, players with string attached out for development were brought back, but the general outlook seems to gather around Sisler with this view prevailing:

There is not much room for improvement in the outfield with Kenny Williams, Bill Jacobson and Johnny Tobin back on the job. Herschel Bennett of the Willie-Keeler type and Bill Mizeur, a fence-buster from Bay City, probably will be retained for utility service.

Jacobson is not many yards away from the end of his string and if Bennett or Mizeur show anything of promise they may worm their way into that center field job.

Jimmy Austin, who celebrated his 41st birthday last December 8, has been officially removed as a player by Sisler and James will spread his pepper only as a coach.

The club returns to Mobile, Ala., for its spring training work.

These 1924 Browns are two different clubs on this date. George Sisler will decide whether they go up or down.

Sisler's debut as manager will be another feature in the American league. He succeeds Lee Fohl, who was ousted, not because he was a fizzle, but because his personality did not appeal to the owners of the club.

BALTIMORE AWARDED GAME

Annapolis, Md., March 1.—The Army-Navy football game next fall will be played at the Baltimore stadium, Saturday, November 29, it was announced today at the naval academy.

The Baltimore city park board, which controls the stadium, promised that a total of 72,000 seats would be available for the game. The two schools will be given approximately 32,000 seats each. The present seating capacity of the stadium is approximately 52,000.

Accompanying Baltimore's bid for the game was a statement from railroad companies, the United Railways, the taxicab companies, hotel managers, merchants and theater managers that current prices would be charged over the week-end the visitors would be here. Both the Baltimore and Ohio and the Pennsylvania railroad promised to provide facilities for detraining close to the stadium.

The Yankee stadium and Polo grounds, New York, and Franklin field, Philadelphia, were the other places considered by Navy, which had the choice this year.

Sigma Chi Wins In Emory Games

Emory University, Ga., March 1.—(Special.)—Playing a fast game throughout the season, the Sigma Chi quintet were declared the winners of the inter-fraternity basketball conference at Emory when the books were closed today. The Sigma Chis were hard pushed for the title by the team of the Alpha Tau Omegas, who were the runners up, and were defeated only by the close score of 24-19.

In winning the cup, the Sigma Chis played four games, defeating the teams of Delta Tau Delta, Pi Kappa Phi and Alpha Tau Omega. The A. T. O. quintet defeated the aggregation of the Pi Kappa Alphas, Chi Phis and Phi Delta Thetas, meeting defeat only at the hands of the winners.

The Sigma Chi line-up is composed of stars who have previously distinguished themselves on the court. Hatcher and Rankin played as pretty a game of pass work throughout the conference as has been exhibited on the Emory court in many moons. These boys had a manner of slipping the ball back and forth across the court until a position favorable for the ringing up of a goal was reached, which their opponents were never able to break up. Rankin and Hatcher distinguished themselves by making good many shots that seemed impossible, each ringing up an average of fifteen points in each game entered into. The team of the Sigma Chis is composed of: Forwards, Rankin, James; center, Hatcher; guards, Branch and Bell.

May Form New League at Rome

Rome, Ga., February 29.—(Special.)—Organization of a Georgia-Alabama baseball league with a Rome-Lindale club in it is now a certainty, according to M. S. Lanier, who with Hardin Herndon, represented the two towns at a second conference at Anniston, Ala. Whether the league will be a six-club or an eight-club organization depends upon developments.

It would have been possible to form a six-club league composed of Anniston, Rome-Lindale, Gadsden, Talledega, Selma and Decatur, but such a league would have required long jumps and increased the transportation cost, so either a six-club league, to be composed of towns close enough to permit automobile transportation of the teams or an eight-club league with two distinct divisions of nearby towns will be formed.

SUMMERVILLE NINE IS ORGANIZED BY GIRLS

Summerville, Ga., March 1.—(Special.)—The girls of the Summerville High school have organized a girls' baseball team for the season of 1924, with Miss Lucile Gamble, captain; Professor V. P. Folds, manager, and Miss Vera Stephenson, secretary. The following girls have joined the club: Misses Foy Bridges, Lucile Gamble, Margaret Glenn, Arietta Herndon, Margaret Hawkins, Jessie Hendrix, Annis Marks, Elendor Morton, Alzada Mallicoat, Effie Mallicoat, Eugenia Powell, Dulcie Ratliff, Bonnie Stephenson, Vera Stephenson, Margaret Thomason, Margaret Wade, Grace Willbanks and Velma Wright.

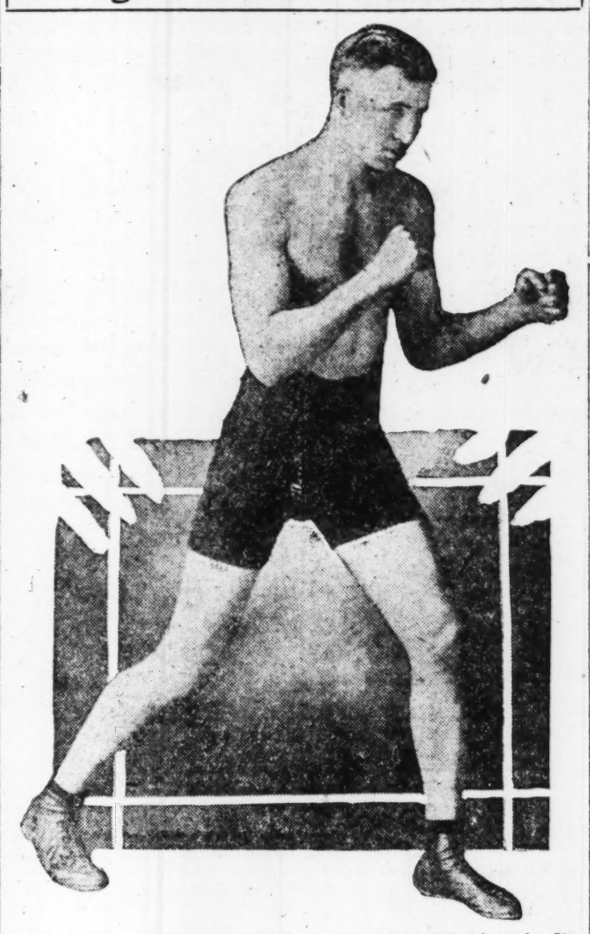

The team will play only on Friday afternoon, Saturdays and holidays, except as such dates may be interfered with because of rain.

Only regulation baseballs will be used. The team will be given practice on Monday and Wednesday afternoons. A challenge has been issued to any girls' school team in north Georgia.

INDIANAPOLIS SQUAD LEAVES FOR FLORIDA

Indianapolis, March 1.—With the new manager, Ownie Bush, in command, members of the Indianapolis American association baseball team left for the spring training camp at Plant City, Fla., today. Practice at the Florida camp will start next Monday and the first exhibition game will be played with the Cincinnati Nationals on March 13.

Perrin League Closes Wednesday

The basketball season, insofar as the Perrin league is concerned, will come to a close with the games scheduled for Wednesday, March 5. There have been some exceptionally fine games played in this league and the competition has been keen for the full nine weeks of play. While the Power club and Boethians have undoubtedly proven to be the class of the field, as shown by their present high standing, yet the fight for the other positions has kept interest at a rather high pitch.

With but one game more to be played the Power club and the Boethians are still tied for the leadership of the league, and should both of these teams win their games Wednesday night, a play-off will be necessary to decide the winner. These teams have each defeated the other once during the present season and a play-off would be in the nature of a rubber game and should be well worth seeing.

The schedule for Wednesday, March 5, includes games as follows:

Power club vs. Westinghouse, 7 o'clock.

Boethians vs. National Guards, 8 o'clock.

Southern Spring vs. Elk Troubadours, 9 o'clock.

The league standing through Wednesday, February 27:

Boethians	8	1	.888
Power club	8	1	.888
Company "E"	3	4	.429
Westinghouse	2	6	.250

HOOVER APPOINTS BODY TO ADVISE ON COTTON FIGURES

Washington, March 1.—Secretary Hoover today announced the appointment of the special committee planned at a recent conference with senators to investigate methods used and offer suggestions for improving the ways and means of compilation of cotton statistics. The committee will start work immediately.

Mr. Hoover's action resulted from a controversy originating with an alleged error in an estimate of cotton stocks made by the census bureau last August. Some senators claimed that the figures were 600,000 bales in error and that it gave a wrong impression of the cotton situation.

The names of the committee are: B. W. Kilgore, Raleigh, N. C.; Daniel C. Roper, former internal revenue commissioner; W. S. Rossiter, Concord, N. H.; Lewis I. Dublin, president of the American Statistical association, New York, and Walter F. Willcox, of Cornell university.

FOREST GUN CLUB TO ELECT OFFICERS

Savannah, Ga., March 1.—(Special.)—The annual meeting of the Forest City Gun club, one of the oldest organizations of its kind in the south, will be held March 12, when election of officers will be held and a new system for the season adopted. The season opens April 3.

Under the proposed plan the membership will be divided into four divisions and competition between the divisions for money prizes will stimulate interest. It is planned to bring to Savannah through the summer nationally known shots and teams of expert gunners from many other cities of the south.

FORMER OLYMPIC STAR WILL COACH IN CUBA

Philadelphia, March 1.—Dr. Alvin C. Kraenzlein, former University of Pennsylvania star and the only athlete who ever won four events in the history of the Olympic games, leaves today for Havana Cuba, where he will become athletic director of the Vedado Athletic club. Dr. Kraenzlein took first place in four track and field events in the Olympic games at Paris in 1900.

St. Louis, March 1.—Joe Evans, third sacker and outfielder, recently released by the Washington Senators, has been signed by the St. Louis Americans.

S. O. S. CALL FOR FUNDS ANSWERED

New York, March 1.—(United News.)—The S. O. S. call for funds issued recently by the American Olympic committee has brought forth results, and Julius H. Barnes, treasurer of the committee, has paid the first installment of $40,000 for the charter of the liner America, which will take the American athletes to France for the Olympic games in June.

A few days ago it was announced that the committee had nowhere near the amount required for the first installment.

To Miami, Fla., goes the honor of being the first city to fill its Olympic quota, the Miami quota was $5,000. The total sum asked by the committee is $350,000.

Among the larger subscribers are: Olympic committee of Michigan, $9,000.00; Olympic committees of Boston, Philadelphia and Miami, each $5,600.00; Olympic committee of Chicago, $4,000; Olympic committee of New York, $5,500; Olympic committee of Houston, Tex., $1,900; Olympic committee of Newark, N. Weeks, secretary of war, $500; Olympic committee of Reading, Pa., $500; Olympic committee of Dalton, Mass., $250 Olympic committee of Schenectady, $102; Olympic committee of San Antonio, Tex., $281.40.

Planning Action Against Fight

Providence, R. I., March 1.—Attorney General Herbert L. Carpenter stated today that if there is any possible way in which he can prevent the holding of the Dempsey-Wills heavyweight championship fight in this state next July he will stop it. A license for the fight has recently been granted by the Cumberland town council to Boston promoters.

Jeff Smith Also on Way To Atlanta for Fight Thursday, March Seventh

Joe Lohman, who will have his mettle tried in a battle here next Thursday night will arrive in the city either today or Monday to begin intensiv training for his bout with Jeff Smith, of Bayonne, N. J., now cavorting about with the well-earned title of "uncrowned king of the middleweights." Smith is expected in the city Monday night.

Both of these fighters, known in Atlanta, are also well known nationally and should offer fistic fans of the community the best entertainment they have had since the Stribling-Shade fight in January and one of the best scraps ever staged in the city.

Lohman, who is a light heavyweight, is anxious for a crack at Smith, because a victory over Smith would add materially to the prestige Joe already has attained by his successful pugilistic endeavor. Lohman has won his last fights and has indicated his confidence in the impending local conflict by announcing his willingness to fight the match winner-take-all.

Lohman has won his last eleven fights, but was known in Atlanta before he amassed his recent record, through his encounters here with Homer Smith and Captain Bob Roper. Smith spent several days here last summer training for a scheduled battle with Harry Greb, but Greb never appeared to meet him. Both fighters are of the aggressive, eager-to-fight type, and have won hundreds of friends by their boring-in tactics.

In addition to the very attractive main feature of the card, several good preliminaries have been arranged. Two slam-bang, hard-hitting battlers will meet in the semi-windup in the none less important persons of Chick Branch and Benny Cline, respectively and respectfully managed by Billy Lotz and Walk Miller.

Boots Antley, the slugging southpaw from Columbus, and Freddie Boorde, well known locally, will trade punches in the other preliminary engagement, after the opening encounter between Benny Regan and Kid Hickaby.

PENN STATE RINGMEN TO MEET

NAVY AT ANNAPOLIS SATURDAY

State College, Pa., March 1.—Ranked as the most important boxing meet of the season, Penn State ringmen face the Navy at Annapolis next Saturday in a contest that will in large measure determine the intercollegiate boxing championship for 1924. Results of next week's bouts will give ring followers a definite line on what to expect in the coming intercollegiate championship tourney, which will be staged at Penn State on March 21 and 22.

Penn State boxers, under Coach Leo Houck, have been enjoying their best season in history this winter; but in meeting the middle team next week they tackle a combination of fighters that have yet to taste defeat in the intercollegiate ring. It is likely that Coach Houck will use his strongest combination in this meet, with McClernan, 115; Washington, 125; Wert, 135; Young or O'Donnell, 145; Bordner, 160; Frank, 175, and Captain Madera, heavyweight.

While the boxers are battling at Annapolis Penn State wrestlers will engage the Cornell grapplers on the local mats. The Ithacans won the intercollegiate title from Penn State last year by a one-point margin and this meet promises to be a thriller. A feature bout should come between Captain McWilliams, of Cornell, and Cary, Penn State, in the 115-pound division. Neither man has been defeated this season, while McWilliams was last year's intercollegiate titles holder.

The Nittany cage team is coming down the home stretch of its highly successful season and will play two games next week. Allegheny College will be met here on Thursday evening, followed by Lafayette on Saturday.

Freshman sports will also flourish over the week-end. The yearling boxers will hold their first meet of the season when they accompany the varsity to Annapolis and meet the Navy Plebe team. Freshman wrestlers will also see action against the West Virginia yearlings on the home mats as a preliminary to the Cornell meet; while the cage team will go on a northern trip to meet Syracuse Freshmen on Friday and Cornell Freshmen on Saturday.

CAROLINA AND MISS. AGGIES WIN AFTERNOON GAMES

Vandy Bows Before Attack Of Carmichael and Co. While Aggies Trounce Tulane Five

The fast quintets of the University of North Carolina and of the Mississippi A. & M. school earned the right to meet in the semi-finals of the Southern Intercollegiate conference basketball tourney on Monday by respective victories over Vanderbilt and Tulane.

The smooth-working team of the Carolinians was too much for Josh Cody's crew and the Commodores bowed to the 1922 champions by a score of 37 to 20. There was just too much Carmichael and crew for the Vandy outfit.

Tulane, who was a big favorite, was unable to stand the pace set by the Aggies, victors in 1923, and fell before a 38 to 30 score. The Aggies took the lead at the start and led all the way.

If any basketball team should happen to defeat the University of North Carolina in this present tournament, then that team will have defeated the smoothest moving machine competing for title honors.

Vandy, with a well balanced five, was utterly unable to cope with the fast flying lads from Chapel Hill. In that game, which thus far is one of the premier attractions of the match play, Vandy trailed throughout, and did well to score twenty points, while the university amassed a total of thirty-seven.

The reason for Vandy's defeat was quite evident. Vanderbilt was simply outclassed. North Carolina matched to the fullest every talent which Vandy could boast of, and then there was enough merit in the balance to give the university a seventeen point margin.

No team could have fought harder than Vandy. No team could have been more resourceful in the endeavor to ward off defeat. But North Carolina just had stuff which Vandy could not reproduce, the difference between a fighter and a scientific boxer. The university has got all it takes to put out a winning team, and if they don't win the tournament, then they are going to force the team ahead to exhibit better basketball than has ever been seen before in one of these attractions.

Carmichael, forward on the North Carolina team, is a perfect example of grace and perfect co-ordination of mind and body. He plays a wonderful game of basketball with no perceptible effort, and moves about the floor with an uncanny ease. Handling the ball is his forte. Yesterday, during the whole of the game, he was never called for a jump up with the ball in his possession. Of course, his teammates were uncovering as rapidly as possible, which helped. But be that as it may, Vandy could never catch Carmichael and the ball together. If ever there was one, then this man is the complete master of a basketball.

Cobb was the high point scorer for the Chapel Hill team with a total of 17. Carmichael to Cobb to the basket was the usual route of the ball. It should be said that in spite of his exceptional abilities, Cart Carmichael does not overshadow his teammates. For example, there's Cobb, high point scorer; McDonald, the fast dribbler in the tournament; Dotterer and Devin, respectively guard and center, and as good in their positions as you would want to find.

Green, captain of the team, is not even entered in the tournament. In the Maryland game some weeks ago, he sprained his ankle. Since that day he has been unable to return to the game. Imagine, if you can, what that team would be with Captain Green in the fight.

There's just nothing else to it, the University of North Carolina has got a real basketball team. Watch their smoke.

TULANE LOSES TO MISS. A. & M.

Mississippi Aggies, champions of the college circles last season went into the semi-final of the 1924 S. I. C. C. tournament Saturday afternoon by virtue of a well earned victory over the highly touted Tulane quint. The score of the contest was 38 to 30. It was the first loss suffered by Tulane out of 23 starts this senon and the last five game of last season.

It was a great battle but the speed and long shooting of the Aggie quint were the main factors in the victory with Myers doing the majority of the shooting ably assisted by a Mr. Perkins, already known to local fandom and another gent that is called Gatchell who won all-southern guard fame last year.

The Aggie jumped off into the lead in the early stanzas of the game and never relinquished that lead during the game, although Tulane came near tying the score within the first ten minutes of play. When the first half of the game ended the 1923 champions were on the long end of a 20 to 11 score and began to take things a bit easier in the second half.

Myers a Luminary.

Myers of the winners and E. Hennican, of Tulane, were tied in the number of points scored with 16 each while Perkins and Gatchell came second with 8 each. Practically every one of the field goals made by Gatchell were from long range and the crowd began yelling for him to shoot every time that he received the ball.

Tulane tried more shots at the baskets than did the Aggies but lacked the ability to sink the attempts. Tulane attempted to score 46 times in the first half and 49 in the second while Mississippi attempted 45 in the first half and only 38 in the second period. Gatchell and Stone, of Mississippi, had the best percentage of field goals made in attempts.

E. Henican was the big star for Tulane. He scored 16 of the 30 points and was a hard man to stop when once started on a dribble. His dribbling Saturday afternoon was much better than that of Friday and if his dribbling Saturday counts for anything he is one of the best in the tournament. Martin who led the scorers of the first day was held at bay yesterday afternoon by Gatchell and Stone and his total points for the game amounted to one field goal early in the game.

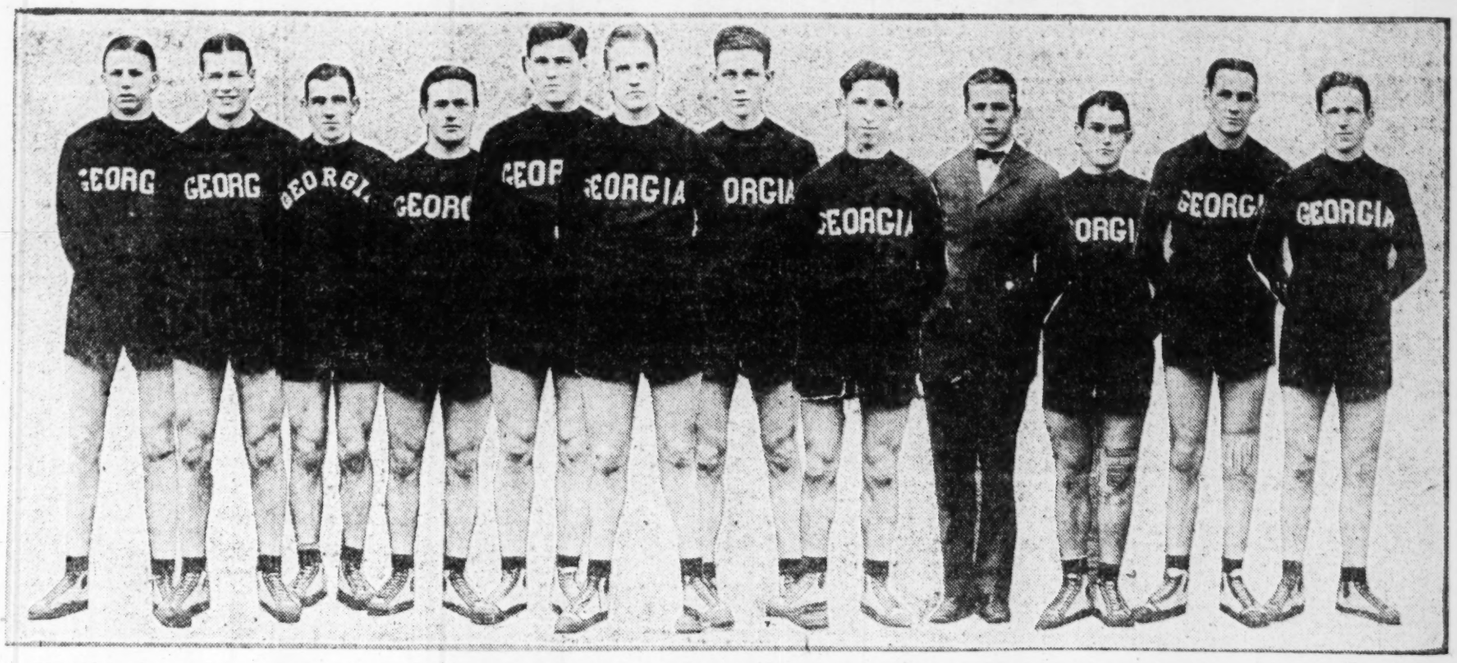

The Line-up and Summary.

Great Horses Often Come From Humble Stock

Georgia's Hope for Championship

Favorites in Conference Tourney

Few college quints in the country have equalled the record made in the last four years by the basketball team of the University of North Carolina. The Tar Heels entered the Southern Conference tournament in Atlanta with a clean slate for the season of 22 victories and have eliminated Kentucky and Vandy since the tourney started.

The Tar Heels won the southern championship in 1922, the first year of the Southern Conference games, and didn't have the services of a coach during the season. Last year, with chances apparently more favorable than the season before, they again entered the southern race but lost in the second of the elimination series when Cartwright Carmichael, star center, was taken ill of influenza. The Tar Heels offered no alibis, however, and Carmichael played with a temperature three degrees above normal. This year the best teams in the South Atlantic division have been met and defeated and Tar Heel hopes are again running high.

Norman Shepard, of Wilmington, formerly a star player himself, has coached the quint this year. He leaves next week for China, where he will be with the American Tobacco company.

Sarazen Is A Good Example

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER,
United News Staff Correspondent.

New York, March 1.—One of the greatest heroes of American sport was a caddy; another was a reform school boy; another was a hobo. Luis Angelo Firpo dreamed his first visions of opulence in the mists of steam as he boiled his hands washing bottles in a Buenos Aires drug store. Like some presidents and British prime ministers, they may come up from under.

So do race horses.

Wise Counsellor, one of the favorites in the winter books for this year's Derby, was almost a champion 2-year-old in 1923, losing only one race all season. He cost his first owner precisely nothing.

The mother of Sarazen, the champion 2-year-old of last season, was a gamble at the price of $37.50.

Major Thomas Bradley, mayor of Lexington, Ky., was presented with a mare by some of his friends who thought it a scandalous thing for the mayor of the Blue Grass town not to own at least one horse.

"We're going to make a horse-owner of you," they told him determinedly. "We're going to give you one."

"All right," said Bradley, "but nothing expensive. Just get a cheap horse so I can say I own one."

For $100 they bought a mare named Rustle, which had been bred to Mentor, and presented her to the major with ceremonies. Eventually, Wise Counsellor was born. Wise Counsellor brought Bradley $66,000 when he finally sold, and the mayor still has the mare, Rustle, whose value has risen to many times $100, thanks to the reputation of her progeny.

Miss M. E. Johnston, a doctor, friend of Miss Elizabeth Daingerfield, the famouse horse breeder of Kentucky, wanted a couple of horses. She asked Miss Daingerfield to get them for her—something very cheap. Miss Daingerfield bought her friend two mares for $75 and one of them was Rush Box. Rush Box, bred to High Time, produced Sarazen and Sarazen, unbeaten as a 2-year-old, is worth a fortune. So is his mother who once sold for $37.50.

HARRY SINCLAIR'S PONIES HAVE MADE OVER $400,000

New York, March 1.—Probably no man holds a stronger Golden Jubilee Derby hand than Harry F. Sinclair, whose 49th derby winner Zev accounted all told for the amazing sum of $262,000 last season and whose stable of 33 thoroughbreds earned in stakes and purses nearly $429,000, a world's record. Bracedale, Stanwix, Tester, Mad Play, Eaglet, Sherman, Sheridan and Hourmore, the most formidable of his newly turned 3-year-olds would constitute a stable of unusual strength considered by themselves. There is hardly an American horseman, who, owning any two of them, would not consider himself well heeled in derby material. At Rancocas farm in Jersey, the home in the last century of that world-famous sportsman, Pierre Lorillard, trainer Samuel C. Hildreth watches with complacency the galloping of the lot of them. Hildreth has not said which he likes best. But he could view, without undue alarm, the going wrong of almost any. None has done anything of that sort yet. Hildreth has not put even the most forward at work that bows tendons and develops sprints, osselets and such. He will hardly apply pressure for another five or six weeks.

That Hildreth's derby prospects are farther advanced toward actual training condition than the candidates of any rival traner may be taken for granted. Second to no contemporary horseman in sagacity and skill Hildreth has the best equipped private training place north at which to prepare horses for derby revivals and other early spring specials. The covered track at Rancocas is one mile around. Protected, the going never freezes. None of the great eastern stables will have the edge of southern conditioning on Hildreth's outfit. The practice of sending derby candidates to South Carolina, Hot Springs and New Orleans for winter galloping has fallen into disuse, notwithstanding the derby winners of 1916 and 1917, George Smith and Omar Khayyam, winter trained in Arkansas.

Possibly the reason Hildreth has not expressed a definite preference is that he is not satisfied in his own mind as to which are his best 3-year-olds. Sickness retarded the development of all of his 2-year-olds, Bracedale excepted, last spring and summer. Only half seasoned when they returned to Long Island from Saratoga at the end of August the others came to hand in erratic fashion. The brilliant late autumn performances of Mad Play and Stanwix surprised even their trainer. That the class Stanwix was to show at Pimilico in November was unsuspected even by Hildreth in August was evidenced by the participation at Saratoga of that son of Ballot and Miss Crittendon in a selling race, which he just won.

Are Very Popular.

With racing generally, Mad Play and Stanwix are the most popular of these Sinclair derby hopes. Bracedale, the most considerable money winner, discovered dazzling speed on occasions, but did not carry on over distances. Stanwix caught the fancy of eastern racing by winning one of the two divisions of the $10,000 Walden handicap of one mile; Mad Play made the west sit up by running Wise Counsellor to a neck in the $35,000 Kentucky Jockey club stakes renewal at Churchill Downs. Stanwix, own brother of Lord Brighton, a sprinter, seemed to be anything but a sprinter himself. Racing around eleven opponents in the far turn of the crampd Baltimore course, he won his division of the Walden going away. Mad Play was one of the eleven he defeated. The only reason he did not go to Louisville with Mad Play for a few days later was that he was not a Kentucky Jockey club stakes renewal eligible.

Perhaps Stanwix would not have beaten either Mad Play or Wise Counsellor if he had been at Churchill Downs, November 17. Those colts had their seven league boots on that day. Under full stake weight—122 pounds each—they covered a mile in 1:37 2-5ths, the first three quarters in 1:10 flat. Half an hour later, in their $10,000-a-side match of one mile and a quarter, Zev and In Memoriam were 1:15 2-5ths getting six furlongs and 1:41 1-5th covering a mile.

On Kentucky Jockey club stakes form Wise Counsellor and Mad Play look better than any other derby prospects; Mad Play, possibly, a little better than Wise Counsellor. Mad Play raced from a long way behind the fleet young western champion to run him to a neck. It was said at the time that Wise Counsellor was not right; that one of his feet was sore. Not much could have ailed him. Two-year-olds out of sorts don't gallop six furlongs under full weight in 1:10 flat and miles in 1:37 and a fraction. The Kentucky Jockey Club stakes, the richest of western races for 2-year-olds, always brings the best youngsters in the county to the post.

Mad Play figures to improve. A son of Fair Play (Man o' War's daddy) and Madcap, she a daughter of Rock Sand, he is of rugged stock. His own brother, Mad Hatter, the first Latonia championship winner, has been a hard campaigner these five seasons, an iron rival of that iron horse Exterminator, he winner of the derby renewal of 1918.

Tester, also, looks a comer. Son of Peter Pan and First Flight Tester is an own brother of Mrs. Payne Whitney's hardy campaigner Exodus and a half brother of the sprinter Rocket. Distinguished earlier in the season for speed, which he did not seem disposed to carry far, he became a stout colt at Bowie in November. In a dash of six furlongs and a half he defeated a field of matured campaigners that included Hidden Jewel, Champlain, Pandowdy, Cyclops, Wellfinder and Fly by Day. No 3-year-old at Rancocas has improved more in physique than this Tester. He was one of the horses Hildreth worked with Zev at Belmont Park last October when Zev was training for his meeting in the Westchester Racing association's $100,000 match of one mile and a half with the British derby winner Papyrus. Nor could Zev outrun him at three-quarters of a mile.

Has Other Good Horses.

Tester and Eaglet are two of twenty colts and families, 8 years old now, Sinclair bought as yearlings in 1922 from Harry Payne Whitney. Eaglet, son of Rickety and Dovelet is a three-parts brother of Goshawk. Goshawk, winner of a renewal of the Saratoga Special, was one of the 2-year-old starts of the season of 1922. He sold for $50,000 in August of that year. Goshawk developed only sprinting ability last season. Eaglet looks a different sort. At Bowie November 27, he took up 106 pounds and showed his shining plates to General Thatcher, Setting Sun, John Paul Jones and Fair Gain in a race of one mile and seventy yards. Hildreth does wonder with such colts as Eaglet.

Sheridan, son of Sweep and Iridescence, and Sherman, son of Trap Rock and Sans Marine, both winners, were in their best form at Aqueduct last September. Neither had a chance to show his stuff in a race of one mile, but both acted in dashes of six furlongs like colts that wanted to go on.

Hourmore, son of Hourless and Belgravia is a half brother of Black Tony, a son of Peter Pan and famous as the sire of Miss Jemima, Black Servant and Black Gold. He is still a maiden, but it is not to be forgot that the maiden Sir Barton defeated Billy Kelly and Eternal in the derby revival of 1919. Hourmore looked a dangerous maiden and formidable 3-year-old prospect in the nursery handicap renewal at Belmont Park last September. A slow beginner, but determined finisher he will like the derby mile and a quarter better than he did the five furlongs and a half and six furlongs routes over which he sprinted last summer.

The Talker.

(From Everybody's Magazine.)

Dr. Crabbe had almost succeeded in dismissing Mrs. Gassoway, when she stopped in the doorway, exclaiming, "Why, doctor, you didn't look to see if my tongue was coated?"

"I know it isn't," said the doctor wearily. "You never find grass on a racetrack."

Georgia Association Launches New Drive To Enlist Teachers

Forysth, Ga., March 1.—(Special.) The campaign of the Georgia Education association for 100 per cent membership of all teachers in the state and of others interested in Georgia educational progress is meeting with the greatest success, it was announced here today. A new effort is being made to enlist all teachers in the organization.

February 15, Secretary Alfriend issued his first honor roll of 100 per cent schools, which contained more than 100 schools in the state whose teachers had enrolled. It not only showed schools but also many school systems where all the teachers, officials and members of the board of education had sent in memberships.

Ocilla was the first city system to go 100 per cent. Every teacher in Savannah and Chatham county has joined. Large memberships have been received from other cities from 1,000 in size to 200,000 population.

March 15 has been set as the second honor roll day and 5,000 members have been fixed as the goal. Each vice president has been assigned 250 members for his congressional district and a contest is on to see which district will go over first.

WRIGHT SALE HURT KANSAS CITY TEAM

tically a newcomer, was taken on in an emergency and isn't any too certain of his berth. But Class AA infielders of pennant-winning caliber are scarce, and both he and Blackburne may be kept.

The veteran Beals Booker, Blue right fielder, wants to play in the Coast league and the Blues will swap him for a second sacker of that circuit. The rest of the outfield and the battery departments remain intact, with the exception of Nick Carter, relief pitcher. He has gone to Galveston.

Baltimore's catching staff is being rebuilt. Lena Styles was transferred to Newark and waivers have been asked on Cobb. Greenae, secured for Styles, is the only backstop certain of being kept. It is planned to use him as second string man and procure Otto Freitag from Jersey City to handle the heavy work.

No changes have been made in other departments of the Orioles as yet. Waivers were asked on ten men several days ago, but aside from Cobb all are youngsters. The pitching staff has been strengthened by the addition of Ed Tomlin from Newark and Cliff Jackson from Syracuse.

Romero Seeks Firpo Mantle

New York, March 1.—Quentin Romero, heavyweight champion of Chile, is coming on to America in the gilded footsteps of Luis Angel Firpo and Luis Vincentini.

Tex Rickard, confirming cables from Buenos Aires that Romero had signed a contract accepting his terms for three fights leading up to a world's championship bout with Jack Dempsey, said neither the dates nor Romero's opponents for these fights had yet been decided upon, but that he was still considering Floyd Johnson, Jack Renault, George Godfrey and Fred Fulton in mind as prospective opponents.

"I want to look him over first before I take any steps to get opponents for him," said Tex Saturday. "I have reason to believe that he does not need any setups, but it may be that he may be ready for a better fighter than I have in mind."

Rickard has cabled passage money for Romero, his manager and a trainer, and the trio are due to arrive here April 1.

Romero weighs 200 pounds and probably will fight at that weight. Prospects for a fight between Romero and Firpo in the near future seem to have gone a-glimmering.

Sherwood Whitney, Prominent Pastor, Dies at Augusta

Augusta, Ga., March 1.—(Special.) Rev G. Sherwood Whitney, one of the best-known Episcopal ministers in this section of the country, died suddenly here tonight. Rev. Whitney was in the best of health this afternoon and the suddenness of his death is a great shock to the community.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

MANY RACE HORSES UNDER CARE OF WILLIAM CROZIER

BY W. H. GOCHER.

William T. Crozier is now busy at Charter Oak park, getting a bunch of horses ready for a trip down the Grand circuit. Years ago he started at the foot of the ladder with a rub rag and brush and learned the rudiments of training trotters under such past masters of the art as Charles Marvin and Orrin Hickok. Later on he dropped into Hartford with Dave McLeary, who opened a public stable after Star Pointer had been retired to the stud on account of lameness.

When McLeary moved to New York, Crozier opened a stable and has kept going to date, the most of his racing being done over the half-mile tracks in New England. Since the Bay State circuit was organized in 1914, Crozier has been among the leaders each season. John R. Hal was his first top liner. He was followed with Binworth, Patrick Duluth, Almaden Onward, and Harry D. O. Last year Crozier made all of the towns in the circuit and closed with a trip to the the fairs, his most prominent performers being Sparkle, Coleman, T. B. J. and Frank Manager. The black gelding Hollywood Frisco was also added to the stable in midsummer and started in two or three races.

In his early races Sparkle found Don McGregor and Anoakia in the way while Coleman was kept busy chasing Sir Etawah and Trumpet to world's records as long as they remained in the Bay State circuit. Frank Manager was purchased near the end of the season and returned as a winner at the Windsor overcoat meeting. Peter Coley was purchased after engagements were made for him in the Orange county circuit and other points in New York and New Jersey. As Crozier was busy at other meetings on the same dates, he drove Peter Coley in but one race. It was trotted at Goshen. At that point the old warrior raced up to his record but could not get through the field.

Makes Good Show.

Hollywood Frisco is a half brother to Hollywood Bob. John L. Dodge bred him. Roy Martin started him in his first races as a three year old against aged horses. He won. Last year as a four year old Hollywood Frisco was trained over Charter Oak park. He showed a number of miles below 2:10, while he looked and acted like a first class race horse. Several offers were made for him but none landed until James P. Berry paid the price asked for the San Francisco gelding. Crozier then took him in hand and at Brockton worked him a mile over the half-mile track in 2:08.

It will not take Crozier very long to make a place for himself among the leaders. He can drive a horse well and like all two lap trainers knows what can be gained by going the short mile. Someone will have a surprise party if they try to send him and his mount on the overland route.

Of the reinsmen who graduated from the ranks and made a place for themselves as leaders, Geers is entitled to first place. He tried his hand at training before learning the rudiments but finally decided to put in a year under the eye of George Fuller. From that day he began to climb up the ladder, his first performers of note being Alice West and Mattie Hunter. Later on he came north from Tennessee with Brown Hal, Hal Pointer, and Frank Bogash, while he also raced Star Pointer and Hal Dillard for their procession, his top liners being The Abbott, Highball, Dudie Archidale, Etawah, Anvil, St Frisco, The Harvester, Baron Grattan, Goldie Todd, Robert J., Ess H. Kay, and Napoleon Direct. Today the old master is busy preparing Peter Manning and Sanardo for a series of record breaking trips.

While Geers was located at the Village Farm, he found a clever assistant in Ben White, who is now busy superintending the education of a group of youngsters at Orlando, Fla. When the Hamlin establishment was disposed of, White remained at East Aurora with the people who purchased a portion of the property. He started racing over the half-mile tracks with Lettie Lee and a few others. Later he moved over to the larger ovals where he marked Lee Axworthy, Volga, rPincess Etawah, Lee Worthy and Mr. McElwyn, all of which were in the first flight.

While Horace Brown was at the Village Farm he also had two assistants who soon made a place for themselves in turf history. They were W. J. Andrews and Alonzo McDonald. Andrews was prostrated by a sunstroke when at the top of his profession. McDonald is still active. He started in at the bottom in northern New York. After driving a few races he went to the Village Farm. In 1892 he gave Princess Royal a two-year-old record of 2:20 at Poughkeepsie for that establishment. He then started out to paddle his own canoe. The pacer, Miss Jennings, brought him back to the mile tracks in 1896 and he has remained there to date.

In the 28 years which have elapsed since he won with her at Cleveland, McDonald has gathered together his share of racing material and at the same time laid away a roll for a rainy day or a lump to lean on in his old age. His list of winners include Allen Winter, with which he won the $50,000 handicap at Boston; Bob Douglas, Emily Ellen, Star Winter, Billy Burke, Early Dreams, the Kentucky Futurity winners, Sadie Mac and Miss Adbell, Zomrect, Jeanette Rankin and The Senator.

Harry Fleming started on his career as a driver at Columbus in 1891 by taking a mount behind Bourbon Wilkes, Jr., when his owner and driver failed to put in an appearance Harry won and has kept in the king row for 30 years. His later-day triumphs were scored for Hillandale Farm with Nedda, Finvarra, Escotillo, Sakura and the other trotters bred by the late W. B. Dickerman.

Starts Training.

Aubrey Rodney is the only graduate of the Walter R. Cox training academy. Rodney joined the Cox stable while it was located at Nashua, N. H. One day he and Walter were jogging a horse to a sleigh. Rodney remarked, "Walter, I think I will start out training for myself." Walter stopped the horse and after looking him over, said: "What do you know about training horses?" Rodney replied, "About as much as you do." "Possibly you are right," said Cox, and they parted.

After a few rough bumps with all kinds of material Rodney secured Braden and took him over the mile tracks. He made him the largest money winning trotter that appeared up to 1912. Last year Rodney had a clever pair in Watts-in-Bond and Commodore Wilson. The latter proved the fastest two-year-old trotter that ever appeared on the half-mile tracks and if he does not meet with any mishaps it will take the leaders of the three-year-old world to catch him in 1924.

For years Dick McMahon has had the reputation of being able to beat the barrier or worry a starter more than any other man that ever sat in a sulky. As a lad he drifted out of Fredonia, Kan., and made for the Iowa race tracks. He learned a thing or two at Independence, when C. W. Williams was training Axtell and Allerton. Later on he landed at the head of a racing stable and started to do things with Citation, Ross K and Belle Alcantara. His most startling performance, however, was recorded at Columbus when he landed the three-year old trots with Mary Putney in 1915 and followed her showing there by winning the Kentucky Futurity. This was the year after he purchased King Couchman from Cox. He made good with him even if Cox did claim that the Atlanta King gelding was the worst acting pacer in captivity. Last year McMahon gathered in the Rainy Day Stake with Truax. He is now busy getting a big stable of horses ready for a trip over the mile tracks in 1924.

Evans and Hall Sign With Browns

Mobile, Ala., March 1.—Manager George Sisler, of the St. Louis Browns, who are training here, announced today that Joe Evans, a third-baseman and outfielder, who was with the Washington club last year, had been signed and is expected to report here next week. Sisler also announced that Roy Hall, a third-baseman who was with the Princeton, W. Va., independent club, had been signed for a try out with the Browns. Announcement was also made that Urban Shocker, who is at Hot Springs, would come in Tuesday.

Sisler again had another wonderful day in training, hitting the ball hard and playing first base in his old-time form. The regulars among the Browns training here say they feel sure that Sisler will return to the game. Sisler is yet to officially announce that he will cover first base. The Browns will be idle here Sunday.

Penn Captures Track Meeting

New York, March 1.—University of Pennsylvania tonight captured the indoor Intercollegiate Track and Field championship for the second straight year, triumphing over a brilliant field of 23 rivals in the third annual I. C. A. A. A. A. meet at the Twenty-second armory. Two intercollegiate records were shattered, a third established and another tied.

The first record to fall came in the shot-put, when Ralph Hills, Princeton giant, bettered his own indoor intercollegiate mark with a heave of 46 feet 3-4 inches to capture this event. His former record, made a year ago, was 45 feet 8 3-4 inches.

Verne Booth, John Hopkins distance star and cross-country champion, shattered the indoor intercollegiate record for the two-mile run, beating out Harry Helme, Georgetown, in a driving finish, and dethroning Elmer McLane, Pennsylvania, the 1923 champion and record holder, who finished third after leading the pack most of the way. Booth's time of 9 minutes, 36 seconds, was 3 3-10 seconds better than the former record.

AMATEUR DIVERS IN 3-DAY CONTEST

Amateur divers of Atlanta will "do their stuff" on the stage of Loew's Grand theater Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights of this week in competition for three handsome loving cups offered by The Constitution.

The contests will be under direction of Madeline Berlo, former Hippodrome headliner and premier woman diver and swimmer, who, with her five diving girls, is booked to feature the week's program at Loew's Grand.

The first of the trio of contests will be held Wednesday night to decide the best amateur male diver in the city between the ages of 14 and 25. The second will be staged Thursday night, when the best girl diver will be chosen.

Final Contest Friday.

The final contest will be held Friday night on the Grand stage, when both boys and girls will be allowed to compete for the grand prize, a big silver loving cup with appropriate engraving. Cups will be awarded winners in eagh of the two preceding contests, and prizes will be presented to second and third prize winners in all three contests. Julian Prade has agreed to present second winners in each contest with a handsome bathing suit.

Constitution readers have displayed keen interest in the series of six lessons on diving being presented by Miss Berlo through the columns of this paper, and entries received by the Grand management indicate that a record number of amateur divers will be contestants for the various prizes offered.

One of the diving lessons is published in this issue of The Constitution, and for convenience of prospective contenders, an entry coupon is attached.

In addition to supervising the contests, Miss Berlo has arranged to personally interview each and every entrant with reference to his or her qualifications as a diver. In case of request, Miss Berlo has also agreed to give practical lessons in the big tank to be erected for the week on the Grand stage and to dispense advice and instruction.

The world-famous diver is of the opinion that swimming and diving present the ideal exercise to reduce to proper weight and proportions and to keep in perfect physical and mental trim.

Diving Expert Advocates Water Sports As Health-Beauty Measure

BY MADELINE BERLO.

We have now arrived at the somersault, jackknife and combination dives. Our first is the roly-poly dive.

THE ROLY-POLY DIVE—The diver stands well back on the board and just lets herself go into a good old-fashioned somersault coming to a sitting position at the edge of the board, her legs astride of it. Without a moment's hesitation she turns right into the water, head first, straightening out so as to enter the water in a vertical, graceful position.

THE ROLY-POLY HANDSTAND—For this you must follow the same procedure as for the Roly-Poly, except that when you have landed in your sitting position, legs astride, at the end of the board, the diver turns over on her hands and raises her body into the arched back, vertical position she held for the handstand. After a moment's hold, she enters the water, head first.

Rolling on the floor to reduce is an old secret. In either of these dives you have the benefit of the rolling exercise, combined with grace and ease. In holding one's position of foot and limb one is put through calisthenics similar to those of a dancer, except that the position is held, toe is pointed upwards instead of downward. This also brings into play the muscles of the thighs. If the head is in its proper position the chin is held lifted.

THE FRONT JACKKNIFE—The diver runs full length of the board and then casts off, up into the air, throwing the head forward and down, grasping toes and bringing head to touch knees, closing up like a jackknife; she then opens up, throwing limbs back into the air and strikes the water head first in a vertical, diving position.

BACK JACKKNIFE—The diver stands with her back to the water and the edge of the board, and casts the body back and up into the air, bringing the head forward and down. She grasps the toes and touches the knees with her head, then throws the limbs back into the air and enters the water vertically, head first. This is extremely difficult, for after casting off and upwards from a backward position the diver brings her head forward and down and skill must be shown in order to be far enough out to keep from striking the head on the board when making the jack close up.

This dive brings into play our old school exercise of bending at the waist and touching the toes without bending the knees. A marvelous waist reducer and a calisthenic that brings into play all the muscles of the back, stomach and chest.

THE DOLPHIN OR CORKSCREW—Run the length of the board, cast off into the air, twist the body once around and strike the water in a vertical head entrance.

CARTWHEEL DIVE—Run on the board, execute a cartwheel and cast off into the water, feet first.

The cartwheel, that pride of the acrobat and circus performer, is merely standing on one's hands sidewards, quite the same as is done in the handstand dive. It will take practice to swing oneself off the board sidewards, but anyone who has mastered the handstand, the back handspring, the handstand walk or the handspring will find herself an apt pupil.

Many Amateurs Enlist for Contest

A notable list of entrants has been filed for the forthcoming amateur diving contests to be conducted by The Atlanta Constitution next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, at Loew's Grand theater under the personal supervision of Miss Madeline Berlo, featured member of the Berlo Diving Girls at that theater next week. But there is still room for more and if you are a diver now is your opportunity!

Fill out the coupon below and mail at once. It will insure you a place in one of the contests and a chance to win one or perhaps more of the valuable prizes offered. The first prize each night will be a beautiful silver trophy cup awarded by this paper, the second and third prizes will range from bathing suits to belts, caps and bathing shoes.

Miss Berlo and her mermaids will be on hand and demonstrate the dives each contestant is to do. A good opportunity to get some pointers on diving as Miss Berlo is the recognized professional champion diver of the whole world and has a repertoire of over 200 different types of dives.

SPARE YOUR EGGS IS BOARD'S PLEA IN KISS DECREE

Kansas City, Mo., March 1.—The eggs with which high school students here pelted Plincipal Clarence T. Rice Friday were the rankest hen-fruit, but they sang a swan song for Rice.

The Kansas City board of education announces that Rice won't be re-engaged next year, but asks that the students refrain from egging him any more in the meantime.

The egg barrage descended upon Rice as the result of the resignation of E. E. Damon, printing instructor, which Rice demanded. Damon had kissed a girl student on a dare and nearly all the student body and part of the board of education, when they heard the circumstances, agreed that it wasn't a wicked kiss at all—at least, not wicked enough to cost Damon his job.

HUBBY'S RELATIVES MUST PAY WIFE FOR LOSS OF LOVE

Birmingham, Ala., March 1.—Mrs. Lula Gladys Gottlieb was awarded a verdict of $40,000 against Morris Gottlieb, Rachael Gottlieb and A. Gottlieb in circuit court today in a suit for alleged alienation of the accestons of her husband, Marvin Gottlieb, whom she married on December 28 last.

The defendants are father, mother and elder brother of Marvin Gottlieb.

The plaintiff alleged that her husband had been away for some time and that the defendants refused to tell of his whereabouts. Differences over religion are said to have caused the trouble.

A suit for $50,000 by the plaintiff also is pending against the defendants, in which she alleged malicious prosecution growing out of her arrest on charge of disorderly conduct.

Public slaughter-houses established in Paris by Napoleon in 1818 were given the name of abattoirs.

Three Accidents Blamed on Faulty Brakes by Driver

Reports of injuries to several Atlantans as the result of auto accidents were made to police Saturday night.

Fred Sullivan, who gave his address as the Oxford hotel, was arrested on charges of reckless driving following three accidents in which he figured, and will be tried Monday morning by Recorder Johnson.

His first mishap occurred on West Mitchell street when his car crashed into a jitney bus owned by J. H. Huggins, and driven by J. A. Massey. Neither machine was badly damaged, and when Sullivan made arrangements to settle, Massey asked police not to make charges against him.

Hits Automobile.

However, Sullivan had proceeded only a block on West Mitchell when he hit the automobile owned by H. Mendle, of 8 West Mitchell street. Sullivan was taken to police station, only to be released when Mendle later appeared, stating that his car was not damaged and asking that Sullivan be freed.

Nearing the intersection of Decatur street and Piedmont avenue, Sullivan next crashed into a car owned by Peter A. Dare, of 32 Gordon place, both machines being badly damaged. When arrested for the second time, Sullivan told police that the brakes on his car failed to hold, and blamed all accidents to that cause.

C. R. Jordan, of 5 Sawtell avenue, was slightly injured Saturday night when a laundry truck in front of which he was standing on South Pryor street was knocked against him when struck by a machine driven by J. A. Mabry, of Dunwoody. Mabry said that he was trying to pass a street car, but misjudged the distance and struck Jordan's truck.

Boy of Seven Hurt.

Keith Dutton, aged 7, of Adamsville, was taken to Grady hospital early Saturday night suffering from a badly bruised head and a broken leg, said to have been the result of an auto accident. He was later taken to his home, and no details of the crash could be learned.

Alfred F. Leheup, Jr., of 85 East Georgia avenue, aged 3, was slightly injured when knocked down by a speeding truck at Georgia avenue and Fraser street. He was taken to Grady hospital for treatment. Witnesses stated that the truck sped away following the accident, and the license number was not obtained.

Percy Spearman, negro, and two negroes whose names could not be learned, were slightly injured Saturday night when the coal wagon on which they were riding was struck by a truck which failed to stop. The horse, hauling the coal wagon, was hurt so badly that it was later killed.

Flitting Skaters Ordered To Keep Off City Streets

Nashville, Tenn., March 1.—The craze for roller skating among students at the various colleges, preparatory schools and grammar school institutions in Nashville, which has brought a strong edict from Mayor Howse against skating upon the streets, resulted in the arrest of eight students of Vanderbilt and Montgomery Bell academy, and the determination to end skating of all kinds on the streets of the city has spread to the county schools and along with the resultant edicts against skating in the city, the girl students are feeling the heavy hand of the school authorities and shiny noses and pale femine cheeks are now in vogue.

The latest edict came today when James McKee, principal of Clemsons school, a Davidson county institution, placed the ban on rouge boxes and vanities for his girl students and roller skates for all students. As the boys of this school had been the principal offenders on skates, students see in the latest ban issued, a plan to make both girls and boys suffer equally.

INSURANCE SUIT WON BY GEORGIA

According to a statement made Saturday by Comptroller General William A. Wright, a decision of the Georgia court of appeals handed down Saturday will add about $30,000 a year to the state's revenue.

The court held that life insurance companies must pay taxes on dividends applied by policyholders to payment of premiums. The case was that of the New York Life Insurance company vs. Wright, comptroller general, and, while this particular case involved only $4,731.11, it is understood that other insurance companies had agreed to accept it as a test.

The suit arose originally in 1920, when the New York Life Insurance company deducted from its gross receipts in this state the sum of $157,309.88, representing that this was not cash premiums paid by policyholders, but was paid from dividends due policyholders by the company.

General Wright notified the company that he would issue an execution for the tax on this sum, amounting to $4,731.11 whereupon the company sought an injunction in Fulton superior court. The case was dismissed on demurrer and the company appealed to the appellate court, where the decision was sustained.

SKIRTS BETRAY LAD WHO DONNED THEM FOR SAFETY

New York, March 1.—Raymond Stanley, of Nanayunk, Pa., has been having difficulty eluding probation officers, and thought he might dodge them by wearing skirts.

Clad in feminine garb, he was arrested in a down-town department store, wearing two dresses which detectives say were stolen. Stanley was arraigned in magistrate's court Saturday, and pleaded guilty to petty larceny.

"I couldn't get work as a man so I had to put on skirts," Stanley told the magistrate.

BEHRMAN HEADS DEMOCRAT BODY FOR LOUISIANA

New Orleans, March 1.—The Louisiana democratic state central committee elected at the primary February 19 met here today, reorganized and named Martin Behrman, for many years mayor of New Orleans, chairman. The committee selected March 25 as the date for the primary in the second congressional district to nominate candidates for the unexpired term of the late Representative H. Garland Dupre and gave aspirants until noon of March 7 to qualify. The election will be held April 22.

BETTY ANN DOLLS

During the great "Betty Ann" doll offer, made by The Constitution, prior to the Christmas holidays, in which many hundred dolls were distributed to successful contestants in Atlanta and throughout Georgia, The Constitution ordered very liberally in order that none of the contestants who earned the dolls prior to Christmas would be disappointed.

The doll offer is now over, and we find that we have a small number left on hand. Betty Ann was a specially high-grade doll, specially manufactured for The Atlanta Constitution, and was equal in value to any doll that could be purchased before or during the Christmas holidays at $10.00 retail.

Any of The Constitution subscribers who wish these dolls can have them at the manufacturer's cost, which is $4.00 each for those who will call at The Constitution office, or sent by parcel post prepaid $4.25.

There are only a small number of these dolls remaining on hand, and in order to dispose of them at once we make the above remarkably low offer.—(adv.)

State W. C. T. U. News

BY MRS. AUGUST BURGHARD, Macon.

The time for the second observance of Temperance Day in Georgia public schools is approaching and teachers are inquiring about plans for the day.

A well-arranged program for Temperance Day, with material for carrying it out, may be obtained for 10 cents from the National W. C. T. U. Publishing house, Evanston, Ill.

New programs are prepared each year by the scientific temperance instruction and scientific temperance investigation departments of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union and are used by thousands of teachers in class rooms and school auditoriums.

Twenty states have laws requiring the observance of Temperance Day in public schools, enacted in the following order: Alabama, Tennessee, Kansas, New Mexico, Kentucky, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, Maine, Mississippi, Oregon, North Dakota, Missouri, South Dakota, South Carolina, Nevada, Nebraska, Ohio, North Carolina, Georgia, Minnesota.

Georgia's law enacted August 19, 1922, is:

"The fourth Friday in March of each year, being the nearest Friday to March 28, the date upon which prohibition went into effect, shall be designated and known as Temperance Day in the public schools of this state.

"On Temperance Day at least two hours shall be devoted by the public schools of this state to a program, which shall be educational in nature, teaching the good of temperance and prohibition and the evils of intemperance, and obedience to law."

Miss Fraser in Columbus.

Miss Charlotte Fraser, New York, field worker in the National W. C. T. U. Americanization department, addressed a number of gatherings on her recent visit to Columbus, under the auspices of the Theresa Griffin W. C. T. U., among them a splendid gathering of Jewish women at the synagogue, which Rabbi Rosenthal assisted in arranging; a large Catholic audience at St. Joseph's Academy, the priest cooperating in plans for the service; at Fort Benning, the largest School of Arms in the United States.

Here Miss Fraser spoke to 300 recruits one afternoon and so pleased the officers in her audience, that she was urged to return for three addresses Sunday, as the guest of the army officials, who issued 700 invitations to the morning service with printed programs.

Miss Fraser stirred hearts with her patriotic message everywhere she spoke in Georgia.

In Macon, she addressed a mass meeting of women at the First Baptist church, the W. C. T. U. and visitors at Mulberry Street Methodist church, Wesleyan college and Lanier High school students and the classes of foreigners taught by Mrs. J. W. Payne, the Macon W. C. T. U. superintendent of Americanization, which Miss Fraser pronounced the best Americanization work she had found in Georgia. Because of additional dates in Columbus, she was unable to address a public meeting of the D. A. R. and two men's civic clubs in Macon.

She spoke 18 times during a few days' stay at LaGrange, and some who heard her first lecture made it a point to hear the entire 18. In Atlanta, Augusta and everywhere Miss Fraser spoke, she was received with like enthusiasm.

Eastman W. C. T. U. Entertains Faculty.

The Marc Harris Armor W. C. T. U. of Eastman entertained the teachers of the Eastman public schools, 18 in number, at a delightful reception at the home of Mrs. J. B. Holmes.

The hostess was assisted in receiving by Mrs. D. D. Smith, W. C. T. U. president, and other officers.

A large number of white ribboners were present to show their appreciation of the honor guests in their work for education and temperance.

Mrs. Guy H. Wells, wife of the superintendent of the schools, herself a member of the faculty and local W. C. T. U. superintendent of scientific temperance instruction department, made a fine talk on the importance of scientific temperance instruction, she linked the teacher and the W. C. T. U. worker in efforts for child welfare.

As a result of her enthusiastic efforts a successful temperance essay was held in the school last year and another is planned for this year.

During the afternoon vocal and instrumental music added to the enjoyment of those present. The floral decorations were beautiful. Delightful refreshments were served.

MRS. O. A. GENTRY,
Publicity Superintendent.

W. C. T. U. Speakers in Athens.

The paid membership of the large Athens W. C. T. U. was doubled as the result of an address by Dr. Mary Harris Armor on Sunday morning.

Prohibition law observance was given a mighty impetus when she addressed another large audience in the afternoon. At the insistent request of the students at the State Normal college she made a short talk to them in the evening.

Miss Grace Leigh Scott, of Indiana, field worker in the National W. C. T. U. department of social morality, who has made such a favorable impression with her presentation of this important subject in Georgia schools and colleges, spoke at the State Normal college twice, at Luer Cobb college and at the Athens High school. "Everybody was charmed with her."

Miss Millie Rutherford was the interesting speaker on the "Life of Frances Willard," at the regular W. C. T. U. meeting. Music, readings, souvenirs of Miss Willard and a collection for the Willard Memorial Organizing Fund completed the program.

The Athens W. C. T. U., of which Mrs. H. E. Martin is president, is doing much practical, worth-while W. C. T. U. work as well as holding inspirational meetings.

The union will furnish programs for all schools there for the observance of Temperance Day.

New Sibley W. C. T. U. in Gainesville.

After Dr. Mary Harris Armor spoke in Gainesville on "The New Crusade," which is a crusade for the law observance and law enforcement, she organized a W. C. T. U. of 51 members, 12 others joining within a few days.

The officers are: Mrs. W. A. Mitchell, president; Mrs. E. C. Palmour, vice president; Mrs. W. B. Green, corresponding secretary; Miss Nannie Hawkins, recording secretary; Mrs. E. M. Montgomery, treasurer; Mrs. Bryan Mitchell, vice president at Baptist church; Mrs. C. B. Allen, vice president First Methodist church; Mrs. Guy Clonton, vice president Presbyterian church; Mrs. George Barrett, vice president at St. Paul church.

In the course of his indorsement of the W. C. T. U., Dr. J. S. Sibley, pastor of the Presbyterian church, stated that it was the eighty-sixth birthday of his mother. He is the son of Mrs. William C. Sibley, the first president of the Georgia W. C. T. U., serving from 1883 to 1900.

At Mrs. Armor's suggestion, the union was named for Mrs. Sibley. "As a birthday present she will properly value." Augusta was Mrs. Sibley's Georgia home and the flourishing W. C. T. U. there bears her name also.

Dr. Armor was given an ovation when she spoke at Brenau college.

Big Citizenship Objectives.

The National W. C. T. U. has well under way a nationally authorized jubilee year program, strongly stressing through its national and state jubilee meetings and membership campaigns:

1. An aroused citizenship.
2. Election of dry delegates to party conventions who will work and vote for planks for strict enforcement of law.

Cod Liver Oil Now In Tasteless Tablets

Greatest Flesh Builder

No more will weak, thin, unfortunate children cry in protest when the nasty, fishy-tasting, horrible-smelling cod liver oil is brought out.

Medical science progresses rapidly, and now you can get at your druggist's real, genuine cod liver oil in sugar-coated tablets that young and old can take with ease and pleasure.

Even the run-down and skinny grown-ups, who ought to take cod liver oil, because it really is the greatest vitamine food and builder of healthy flesh in the world, will feel extremely joyful when they read this welcome news.

Of course, doctors have been prescribing cod liver oil in tablets under another name for several years, but it is only of late that one can walk into a drug store and get a box of these flesh-producing tablets just as easy as a bottle of magnesia.

Thin, run-down, anaemic men, women and children who need to grow strong and take on flesh are advised to get a box of McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets, and if you don't gain 5 pounds in 30 days just get your money back.

One woman gained fifteen pounds in five weeks, according to her own doctor—another ten pounds in three weeks. A very sickly child, aged nine, twelve pounds in seven months, and now plays with other children and has a good appetite.

Just ask for McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets. Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., E. H. Cone, Inc., or any good druggist will tell you that they are wonderful flesh and health builders. Only sixty cents for 60 tablets.—(adv.)

CLAUDE L. ASHLEY, For County Commissioner.

MR. VOTER: I will ask you this question: If you were selecting a board of directors for your company, said company expending millions of dollars yearly in the construction of roads, bridges and buildings, and there was an engineer available who thoroughly understood the cost and quality of materials and who would be delighted to serve giving of his time and professional knowledge to the company without cost, would you hesitate in placing him upon the board? Such a man is Claude L. Ashley, who is asking you to vote for him for one of the places on the board. Assuring you that he will give his time and skill to the county as he has to the city in the ten years he served in the general council. With the deepest gratitude to all that will place their trust in me, and assuring them that I will never cause them to regret it,

I am, Yours very truly,

CLAUDE L. ASHLEY.

WAGE ARGUMENTS SET FOR MARCH 5

Evidence in the wage controversy between employees of the street railway department of the Georgia Railway and Power company and officials of the corporation will be heard at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, March 5, by the arbitration board in the county commissioners' audience chamber, it was announced Saturday by the arbitration board.

Under an agreement of several years' standing, both the company and employees agreed to submit their claims to an arbitration board, and the company named C. Murphy Candler as its representative, while Luther Still will represent the employees. Edwin F. Johnson, chairman of the Fulton county commission of roads and revenues and president of the Gholstin Spring and Mattress company, was agreed on by Mr. Candler and Mr. Still as the third member of the board.

It is stated that negotiations have to date been carried on without bad feelings, and that the submitting of difficulties to the board was mutually satisfatcory. In fact, all terms of a contract except the wage scale have already been agreed upon.

All hearings before the board will be open to the public, according to the following statement of the arbitrators:

"The arbitrators are aware of the fact that the public is a party deeply interested in a fair and impartial settlement of the wage differences between the company and its employees, hence their purpose to hold hearings in the open, so that such of the public as desire can attend the sessions and form their own conclusions."

10 MEMBERS OF HOUSE JOIN COMMITTEE OF 40

Washington, March 1.—Ten members of the house have joined the "committee of 40" formed to obtain modification of the Volstead act to permit 2.75 per cent beverages, it was announced by Representative Hill, republican, Maryland, a leader in the movement.

The additional members, Mr. Hill said, are Representatives Black, Bloom, Carew, Cleary, Cullen, Griffin, Lindsay, O'Connell and Quayle, democrat, of the New York delegation, and Eagan, democrat, New Jersey.

"At least fifty members of the house of representatives will file the committee bill next Tuesday," Mr. Hill predicted, "and it is hoped all members favoring this modification will join the movement."

School Girl Psychic Solves Big Murder Which Didn't Happen

New York, March 1.—Miss Eugene Dennis, school girl physic and clairvoyante of Atchison, Kan., has solved one of New York's most baffling mysteries—the murder in a lonely shack in Staten Island in 1920 of Carl Hostetter and Natalie Willis, but, unfortunately, the crime has never been reported to the police, and so far as is known, exists only in the imagination of the person who asked the 18-year-old girl to describe it.

The girl, who several days ago at police headquarters demonstrated her powers to high police officials, describing secret police documents and contributing clues in unsolved criminal cases with an accuracy which was said to have astounded her interrogators, yesterday attempted to throw light for the benefit of a reporter on various recent sensational crimes.

Asked about the Hostetter-Willis case, Miss Dennis was able to describe the principals, found jealousy the motive, disagreed moderately with the version advanced by her questioner, and then gave the approximate name and description of the murderer.

She was not told that her clairvoyance had added to police records a brand-new unsolved mystery while the police themselves showed no signs of an intended inquiry.

FARM ASSOCIATION INDORSED IN TURNER

Ashburn, Ga., March 1.—(Special.) Praise of the Georgia association and of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce was expressed in resolutions passed at a meeting of Turner farmers and business men held here Wednesday.

Thanks for cooperation were voiced as members of the local club renewed membership in the Georgia association. Appreciation was also shown for the programs of diversification furnished and the assistance given in the battle against the boll weevil.

SEES URGENT NEED FOR FARM MEASURE

Washington, March 1.—The gravity of the agricultural situation necessitates immediate steps toward relief for the farmers, Senator McNary, republican, Oregon, declared today in reporting to the senate the McNary-Haugen bill proposing the creation of a corporation to export surplus from crops.

"Testimony of witnesses before the senate agricultural committee," he said, "leaves no doubt as to the present severe depression. Whatever differences of opinion were voiced related only the degree and not to the character of the danger to agriculture."

The committee reduced the life of the corporation to five years instead of ten as proposed. Wheat, flour, raw cotton, wool, cattle, sheep, swine and any food produce or live stock are listed as commodities which come under operation of the proposed law.

An export commission would be set up with the secretary of agriculture as chairman and secretary of commerce as vice chairman and three other members to be appointed by the president. Whenever the ratio price of a commodity falls below the prevailing domestic price, the commission is required to report the fact to the president, who is empowered to declare a special emergency exists in that commodity.

NICKEL SUBSCRIBED TO COOLIDGE FUND

Washington, March 1.—The Coolidge campaign fund was augmented today by one nickel. The sum, in hard cash, was received at the white house accompanied by this letter in a boyish scrawl from Central Falls, R. I.:

"Dear President Coolidge: In honor of you some boys of Central Falls have formed a club. It is called the Coolidge club. As a beginning the club consists of five members. The ages range from 11 to 13.

"Later we expect to have eight members. On the 19th day of February we held our first meeting.

"Enclosed you will find as a token of respect the first nickel we received. Members of the club wish you luck in your presidential campaign.

"The names of the members are: "President-treasurer, Lenoard Grove; vice president, David Chernack; secretary, Robert McElroy; assistant secretary, George Andrews; member, Leon Sonkin."

There are more than 65,000 former service men and women, all of whom were disabled in the world war, in vocational training throughout the United States who will be ready in a year or so for technical or professional positions.

Cod Liver Oil Now In Tasteless Tablets

Greatest Flesh Builder

No more will weak, thin, unfortunate children cry in protest when the nasty, fishy-tasting, horrible-smelling cod liver oil is brought out.

Medical science progresses rapidly, and now you can get at your druggist's real, genuine cod liver oil in sugar-coated tablets that young and old can take with ease and pleasure.

Even the run-down and skinny grown-ups, who ought to take cod liver oil, because it really is the greatest vitamine food and builder of healthy flesh in the world, will feel extremely joyful when they read this welcome news.

Of course, doctors have been prescribing cod liver oil in tablets under another name for several years, but it is only of late that one can walk into a drug store and get a box of these flesh-producing tablets just as easy as a bottle of magnesia.

Thin, run-down, anaemic men, women and children who need to grow strong and take on flesh are advised to get a box of McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets, and if you don't gain 5 pounds in 30 days just get your money back.

One woman gained fifteen pounds in five weeks, according to her own doctor—another ten pounds in three weeks. A very sickly child, aged nine, twelve pounds in seven months, and now plays with other children and has a good appetite.

Just ask for McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets. Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., E. H. Cone, Inc., or any good druggist will tell you that they are wonderful flesh and health builders. Only sixty cents for 60 tablets.—(adv.)

CLAUDE L. ASHLEY, For County Commissioner.

MR. VOTER: I will ask you this question: If you were selecting a board of directors for your company, said company expending millions of dollars yearly in the construction of roads, bridges and buildings, and there was an engineer available who thoroughly understood the cost and quality of materials and who would be delighted to serve giving of his time and professional knowledge to the company without cost, would you hesitate in placing him upon the board? Such a man is Claude L. Ashley, who is asking you to vote for him for one of the places on the board. Assuring you that he will give his time and skill to the county as he has to the city in the ten years he served in the general council. With the deepest gratitude to all that will place their trust in me, and assuring them that I will never cause them to regret it,

I am, Yours very truly,

CLAUDE L. ASHLEY.

WAGE ARGUMENTS SET FOR MARCH 5

Evidence in the wage controversy between employees of the street railway department of the Georgia Railway and Power company and officials of the corporation will be heard at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, March 5, by the arbitration board in the county commissioners' audience chamber, it was announced Saturday by the arbitration board.

Under an agreement of several years' standing, both the company and employees agreed to submit their claims to an arbitration board, and the company named C. Murphy Candler as its representative, while Luther Still will represent the employees. Edwin F. Johnson, chairman of the Fulton county commission of roads and revenues and president of the Gholstin Spring and Mattress company, was agreed on by Mr. Candler and Mr. Still as the third member of the board.

It is stated that negotiations have to date been carried on without bad feelings, and that the submitting of difficulties to the board was mutually satisfatcory. In fact, all terms of a contract except the wage scale have already been agreed upon.

All hearings before the board will be open to the public, according to the following statement of the arbitrators:

"The arbitrators are aware of the fact that the public is a party deeply interested in a fair and impartial settlement of the wage differences between the company and its employees, hence their purpose to hold bearings in the open, so that such of the public as desire can attend the sessions and form their own conclusions."

10 MEMBERS OF HOUSE JOIN COMMITTEE OF 40

Washington, March 1.—Ten members of the house have joined the "committee of 40" formed to obtain modification of the Volstead act to permit 2.75 per cent beverages, it was announced by Representative Hill, republican, Maryland, a leader in the movement.

The additional members, Mr. Hill said, are Representatives Black, Bloom, Carew, Cleary, Cullen, Griffin, Lindsay, O'Connell and Quayle, democrat, of the New York delegation, and Eagan, democrat, New Jersey.

"At least fifty members of the house of representatives will file the committee bill next Tuesday," Mr. Hill predicted, "and it is hoped all members favoring this modification will join the movement."

School Girl Psychic Solves Big Murder Which Didn't Happen

New York, March 1.—Miss Eugene Dennis, school girl physic and clairvoyante of Atchison, Kan., has solved one of New York's most baffling mysteries—the murder in a lonely shack in Staten Island in 1920 of Carl Hostetter and Natalie Willis, but, unfortunately, the crime has never been reported to the police, and so far as is known, exists only in the imagination of the person who asked the 18-year-old girl to describe it.

The girl, who several days ago at police headquarters demonstrated her powers to high police officials, describing secret police documents and contributing clues in unsolved criminal cases with an accuracy which was said to have astounded her interrogators, yesterday attempted to throw light for the benefit of a reporter on various recent sensational crimes.

Asked about the Hostetter-Willis case, Miss Dennis was able to describe the principals, found jealousy the motive, disagreed moderately with the version advanced by her questioner, and then gave the approximate name and description of the murderer.

She was not told that her clairvoyance had added to police records a brand-new unsolved mystery while the police themselves showed no signs of an intended inquiry.

SEES URGENT NEED FOR FARM MEASURE

Washington, March 1.—The gravity of the agricultural situation necessitates immediate steps toward relief for the farmers, Senator McNary, republican, Oregon, declared today in reporting to the senate the McNary-Haugen bill proposing the creation of a corporation to export surplus from crops.

"Testimony of witnesses before the senate agricultural committee," he said, "leaves no doubt as to the present severe depression. Whatever differences of opinion were voiced related only the degree and not to the character of the danger to agriculture."

The committee reduced the life of the corporation to five years instead of ten as proposed. Wheat, flour, raw cotton, wool, cattle, sheep, swine and any food produce or live stock are listed as commodities which come under operation of the proposed law.

An export commission would be set up with the secretary of agriculture as chairman and secretary of commerce as vice chairman and three other members to be appointed by the president. Whenever the ratio price of a commodity falls below the prevailing domestic price, the commission is required to report the fact to the president, who is empowered to declare a special emergency exists in that commodity.

NICKEL SUBSCRIBED TO COOLIDGE FUND

Washington, March 1.—The Coolidge campaign fund was augmented today by one nickel. The sum, in hard cash, was received at the white house accompanied by this letter in a boyish scrawl from Central Falls, R. I.:

"Dear President Coolidge: In honor of you some boys of Central Falls have formed a club. It is called the Coolidge club. As a beginning the club consists of five members. The ages range from 11 to 13.

"Later we expect to have eight members. On the 19th day of February we held our first meeting.

"Enclosed you will find as a token of respect the first nickel we received. Members of the club wish you luck in your presidential campaign.

"The names of the members are:

"President-treasurer, Lenoard Grove; vice president, David Chernack; secretary, Robert McElroy; assistant secretary, George Andrews; member, Leon Sonkin."

There are more than 65,000 former service men and women, all of whom were disabled in the world war, in vocational training throughout the United States who will be ready in a year or so for technical or professional positions.

New York, March 1.—A continuation of yesterday's selling movement in the cotton market today caused a further severe decline which carried prices fully 2c a pound below the high levels of Thursday and into new low ground for the movement. May contracts sold off to 28.20, or 30 points below yesterday's closing quotation, and the close was at the lowest, with the market weak. Old crop months showed net losses of 93 to 100 points, and the new crop was 45 to 55 points net lower.

The market opened easy at a decline of 13 to 40 points under overnight selling orders and heavy liquidation promoted by weak Liverpool cables and reports of good weather in the south. After showing net losses of about 35 to 85 points the market rallied 20 or 25 points from the lowest on covering and trade buying to fix prices, but the demand was readily absorbed and prices weakened again later in the morning. Numerous stop orders were uncovered during the progress of the decline, and local brokers attributed much of the selling to liquidation by people who had bought earlier in the week on expectations that the reported improvement in the demand for cotton would aid the buying movement of raw cotton. the break to 28.75 for March and 27.50 for July carried the market 93 to 98 points net lower on the old crop months and well under the lowest prices touched on the decline of last Tuesday. New crop months were relatively quiet, but October sold off to 25.20, or 35 points net lower, while December broke to 24.90, making a net decline of 55 points. Private cables said the decline in Liverpool was due to liquidation because of yesterday's break in New York and complained of a poor demand. Sales of print cloths in the Fall River market for the week ended yesterday were estimated at 100,000 pieces or about double the recent average week's business. It is reported that ocean freight room for 1,000 bales of cotton has been booked for shipment out of New York for Bremen and that additional room is under negotiation. Cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 105,000 bales against 88,000 last year.

SHARP BREAK AT NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, March 1.—Cotton experienced an active short session today and closed the week with a sharp break in prices which carried all active trading months down to new low levels for the present decline. Opening 38 to 49 points down from yesterday's close, the market continued on the down grade throughout except for occasional trifling rallies. The close was at the lowest with May at 28.07 and July at 27.20. Net losses for the day were 92 to 94 points on old crop months and 74 to 76 on new crop positions.

At the start Liverpool was sixty penny points down or about 25 to 30 points lower than due, based on this market of Friday. The only explanation of the slump abroad, according to cables, was the weakness on this side of the Atlantic. Private cables claimed that the prospect of avoiding the lockout in Lancashire was good. In sympathy with the course of Liverpool the local market opened 38 to 49 points down, compared with the previous close. Prices gave way rapidly during the first half hour of trading on old crop months although the new crop positions were comparatively steady.

The market then became quieter for a period but values rallied little, notwithstanding that advices from the interior claimed a good demand for spots. New York also reported quite active trading in Worth Street and Fall River news was more encouraging. The weather map was generally fair and the forecast for over Sunday was for continued fair and warmer.

The market had another exceedingly weak spell in the final half hour of trading due partly to rather liberal speculative short selling and partly to advices from Augusta to the effect that southern mills were selling hedges freely against stocks of goods. As a result of the selling new lows for the day were made on all active trading months and the market closed at the very lowest levels of the day on the execution of numerous small stop loss orders. Exports for the day were large, 44,490 bales, including 34,334 from Galveston.

News, Views And Reviews

Stock Letter.

FENNER & BEANE.

New York, March 1.—We believe the rally in evidence at the end of the week will be continued until an average advance of about $3 has been made from the low prices of February 27. Thereafter, the course of the market may be uncertain for a while. Later on we expect the spring rise to go further. Regardless of temporary fluctuations we favor the sugars and oils for the long pull. Among the special issues we continue to think well of Associated Dry Goods, Columbia Gas and Timken Roller Bearing.

Cotton Letters.

POST & FLAGG.

New York, March 1.—No fresh information has reached here regarding the labor situation in Lancashire. So far as known here there has been no settlement of the dispute and the lockout is still threatened for next week. Possibly the uncertainty in this respect has contributed to the easier ruling of the markets. Eastern belt forecast fair tonight and tomorrow. Western belt forecast partly cloudy tomorrow in Arkansas and east Texas. Any Friday was reported on the rally as well as on the earlier decline.

LIVINGSTON & CO.

New York, March 1.—New crops were relatively quiet and steady and perhaps as a favorable feature was the situation from a long range standpoint is the shrinkage of the difference between old and new crop months. As this difference disappears, we shall doubtless find reviving confidence in the goods' trade and in the meantime the market is certainly entitled to sharp rallies after the break of yesterday and today.

HUBBARD BROS. & CO.

New York, March 1.—It cannot be denied that sentiment is extremely bearish, but in our estimation the market must be in a very healthy position insofar as great quantities of goods have been hedged by future contracts as well as an enormous amount of spot cotton that had remained unhedged during the early winter. The slightest change in sentiment from the dry goods quarter will undoubtedly cause a further sharp return. In the meantime, the market will remain rather unsettled, but we certainly do not wish to follow this decline. Liverpool futures are due Monday March 16.34, May 16.24.

J. D. HAYWOOD & SONS.

New Orleans, March 1.—Present decline discounts all bearish features. The market is susceptible at any moment to a material advance, and this decline is unwarranted.

E. B. NORMAN & CO.

New Orleans, March 1.—Large interests have been heavy sellers during the last couple of sessions and have been successful thus far with their operations, but to enjoy continued success they must keep on selling which we doubt they will be willing to do, if dry goods' conditions continue to improve.

ORVIS BROS. & CO.

New York, March 1.—While the Liverpool market today was weak, recently Manchester has been sending favorable reports on their cloth and yarn demand. Liverpool is due down Monday to 16.24 for May and it will be well to watch closely further developments in that market.

H. AND B. BEER.

New Orleans, March 1.—If there is anything to the contention that jobbers refused to buy goods in quantity from the mills during the past three months because of the high prices and the recent big discount in new crop months these features have been removed to a large extent. It is possible therefore that the removal of the recent abnormal discount for new crops and the much lower prices for goods and raw cotton may make jobbers more disposed to buy in the future as well as experts of raw cotton to Europe continue free, from Houston and Galveston alone today 44,000 vs. only 5,000 from all ports this date last year.

CAROLINA CO-OPS PLAN TO OFFSET COTTON DECLINE

Columbia, S. C., March 1.—South Carolina farmers, aroused by the bear raid on the cotton market, are planning to strike back vigorously. Meetings have been held in quite a number of counties during the last ten days and are being planned in other counties next week.

At all of the meetings held this week, it has been agreed that the first and most important step to take in the fight is to get every cotton grower in the state in the South Carolina Cotton Growers' Co-operative association and plans for a vigorous campaign to this end are being worked out. It is expected to enroll at least double the percentage of the crop controlled by the co-operative association in this state.

Further plans call for a quiet but vigorous campaign to prevent an over-production of cotton in the state this year, and it is known that the heavy decline in the market has already caused many to curtail the size of the crop they had planned to plant this season.

Cottonseed Oil.

New York, March 1.—Cottonseed oil was quiet with the price trend lower under scattered liquidation, induced by the pronounced weakness in cotton, lower lard and slow cash demand. Prime crude 8.75 nominal; prime summer yellow 9.00@10.25; March closed 9.00; May 10.39; July 10.70, all bid.

New York, March 1.—Conflicting influences brought about considerable irregularity in today's brief bond market. Prices generally tended higher in response to the tax revision outlook, although 6 points drop in Virginia-Carolina 7 1-2s with warrant and Wickwire Spencer Steel 7s had an unsettling effect on the industrial list.

Resumption of conferences on the Virginia-Carolina situation caused further liquidation of the company's bonds. The 7 1-2s with warrants fell back to 41 within fractional range of the record low level, and the 7s lost a point. No explanation was forthcoming for the break in Wickwire Spencer bonds which sold at 64, representing a loss of almost 15 points in the last two weeks and a new low price for the year. Norfolk and Western convertible 6s, which had been subjected to profit-taking after their recent burst of strength, resumed their advance with a gain of 1 1-4 points. Other high grade railroad issues were strong. Conspicuous strong spots in the speculative rail list were Seaboard Air Line and Missouri Pacific mortgages, although the group as a whole lost ground.

New York and Boston bankers today offered 10,000 shares of Nebraska Power company 7 per cent preferred stock at 98 a share to yield 7.14 per cent. The company supplies commercial and municipal power and light to Omaha and through a subsidiary to Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Program Features Peeples St. P.-T. On Tuesday

The cold wind and rain of Tuesday failed to check the interest and enthusiasm of the members of the Peeples Street P.-T. A. and a large number met at the school for a most delightful program.

A short business session was held, Mrs. Brandon presiding. Reports from the chairmen of various committees showed activity in all departments. Slides and swings have been ordered. A piano secured for the kindergarten. Mrs. J. C. Landers has been appointed chairman of a relief committee, and a box for clothing to be disbursed by this committee, is to be kept at the school. Mrs. A. J. Merrill gave a very comprehensive report of Dr. O'Shea's lectures.

The association voted to assist the Teachers' association in selling tickets to Dr. McGovern's lecture on "Thibet."

The Peeples Street P.-T. A. expressed its unanimous approval of the board of education elected by the people, and of the splendid superintendent of schools. This association believes that Atlanta should rally to an enlarged school program that will be a credit to its citizens and adequate to the needs of the children.

An attractive dance was given by little Miss Caroline McCarley.

Fifteen children of the kindergarten constituted a band that rendered two selections. The audience was captivated by the miniature performers. Master Tollie Moore was the director and his dignity and poise would have done credit to a veteran performer.

Miss Maggie Solomon, in her own delightful manner, gave a most interesting talk on the pre-adolescent age. With her experience as a teacher and now as supervisor of the elementary grades, the speaker has a most convincing way of imparting to her hearers her knowledge of the requirements of the children in the fourth, fifth and sixth grades.

The count of mothers present gave the attendance prize to the kindergarten.

A social half hour closed the meeting.

Dr. McGovern Will Lecture on Interior of Tibet

On Friday vening, March 7, at the Wesley Memorial hall, the Atlanta Public School Teachers' association will present Dr. William Montgomery McGovern in his decture, "To Lhasa in Disguise."

Dr. McGovern is the son of Chauncey McGovern and Janet Blair Montgovery, of Augusta, Ga. Dr. McGovern's mother is a member of an old southern family, and is related to ex-Presidents Woodrow Wilson and Theodore Roosevelt.

As a boy Dr. McGovern spent a number of years in America and was partially educated here. His college education was gained in Christ church, the largest college in Oxford, England.

In casting around to find a man whom the teachers would like to present to the people of Atlanta, Dr. McGovern impressed them as being the most interesting and instructive. His lecture, "To Lhasa in Disguise," is an account of his marvelous expedition into the interior of the country of Tibet, about which very little is known. It was necessary for him to disguise himself as a native by painting his body with iodine and walnut juices in order to reach the sacred and "forbidden" city of Lhasa, which is jealously guarded by the "Red" monks. On many occasions it seemed that he would perish in spite of this disguise.

The lecture will be illustrated throughout with 1,500 feet of moving pictures and numerous lantern slides. It will be particularly interesting to school children who are studying geography and history.

Members of the Parent-Teacher associations can secure tickets from the Teachers' association director in the schools. Tickets are also on sale at the Cable Piano company, and will be on sale at the door of the evening of the lecture.

Mammoth Entertainment Planned by Bass, Jr., High

The mothers of the 1,100 children in the Bass Junior High school will begin a thorough equipment of the school building and grounds and the first move on their program is a mammoth "bridge" to be given on the Ansley hotel roof the afternoon of Tuesday, March 4. The entertainment is in charge of Mrs. Spurgeon King, as general chairman, ably assisted by a large committee. With the Bass Junior High made up from ten contributing grammar schools, the patronage is expected to be very large and is a foregone conclusion that the entertainment will be most successful.

According to Mrs. King, a wonderful array of prizes, contributed by leading merchants of the city and other enthusiastic friends, of the school will be distributed at the party. In addition to these there will be worth-while prizes for each table and souvenirs will be given all who attend.

Besides the Bass Junior High P.-T. A., the freshman and junior associations, recently formed, are cooperating to make the party a huge success. Playing will not be restricted to bridge, and those who prefer "Mah Jongg," "Heart Dice," "500," or other games, are invited to make up tables and compete for the handsome prizes offered. It will also give opportunity for small clubs and other groups who are friends of Bass Junior High to help in the movement for the equipment of the Mass school.

Atlanta's National Guard Is Named 200th Infantry

Atlanta's new regiment of national guard infantry, now recruited almost to full strength, will be known as the "200th Infantry Regiment, National Guard," according to decision reached by officers Saturday.

Although the regiment is almost ready to be mustered in, the recruiting station at Grady Monument will remain open all day Monday so young men of acceptable type may apply for the few vacancies still existing in one line company, service company and howitzer company.

Monday night, when the old battalion of national guard troops meets for its regular weekly drill at the auditorium armory, all men who have applied for places in the new regiment are asked to be present. Companies will be organized for the official mustering in, which probably will take place next week. Officers of the regular army will inspect the newly formed units, swear in the personnel and give instructions as to the conduct of national guard troops and regulations.

Adjutant General Cox, who will be colonel in command, will name a committee early next week to select sponsors for various units of the regiment from Atlanta's most charming women. It is expected that intra-regimental competition for the best service records will be spurred to keener effort by the encouragement of these young women.

Men who enlist in the regiment not later than Monday night will have the distinction of being charter members.

One battalion of the regiment is to be stationed by companies in nearby cities and towns of north Georgia. Selection will be made in a few days. The battalion of 122nd Infantry, N. G., which have been stationed here, and which have been used as a basis for expansion into this new regiment, will be reassigned to south Georgia points, nearer Macon, which is regimental headquarters.

A. L. Henson, former state commander of the American Legion, and Dr. Johnson, of Calhoun, were in Atlanta Saturday, seeking one of the companies of the 200th Infantry. As a result of their visit it is probable Company L, the first company following the Atlanta units, will be allocated to that town, officials stated.

Members of the new regiment will receive regular army pay, according to their rank, for all time spent on active service, including drill periods at night. One drill period of not less than an hour and a half counts for a full day. Pay ranges from $1 to $12 a day.

Asks Courts To Bar Land Condemnation By Pratt Interests

Plans of N. P. Pratt, Atlanta engineer, for construction of a hydro-electric power plant in North Georga, recently announced resulted in filing of a suit with Judge D. W. Blair, of the Blue Ridge circuit, to enjoin condemnation of lands owned by the Washington Land company, in Gilmer county, it became known Saturday. The suit was filed against Mrs. Francis B. Pratt, named as defendant.

Hearing on this petition will be held at 10 o'clock next Saturday in Marietta and, in the meantime, Mrs. Pratt and her agents are enjoined from proceeding with condemnaton proceedings. Three tracts, one of 120, one of 136 and one of 200 acres, are involved, according to the petition.

The suit was filed by H. H. Dean, attorney, of Gainesville, for the land company. Mr. Pratt, through his attorney, Edgar Watkins, stated Saturday that he and his associates are going ahead with their development plans unless courts prevent.

The tracts involved, it was shown, were purchased by the land company from various parties, against whom condemnation proceedings also have been started, and the petition asks that these proceedings be included in the suit.

It also is shown that $3,000 had been offered the owners for certain easements on the tracts, before condemnation proceedings were started.

B. T. Simpson, of Atlanta, is said to be president of the Washington Land company. Mr. Simpson is also secretary to H. M. Atkinson, chairman of the board of directors of the Georga Railway & Power company.

You'll Get Rid of Blackheads Sure

There is one simple, safe and sure way that never fails to get rid of blackheads, that is to dissolve them.

To do this get two ounces of calonite powder from any drug store—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub over the blackheads briskly—wash the parts and you will be surprised how the blackheads have disappeared. Big blackheads, little blackheads, no matter where they are, simply dissolve and disappear. Blackheads are a mixture of dust and dirt and secretions that form in the pores of the skin. The calonite powder and the water dissolve the blackheads so they wash right out, leaving the pores free and clean and in their natural condition.—(adv.)

How many times has your washwoman inconvenienced you? How many times has she disappointed you altogether? How many times has she brought back your clothes scarcely fit to wear?

A great many times, surely, if your experience is an average one.

Do you want to be rid for all times of the worry and trouble of wash day? Of the dreaded thoughts of where your clothes go when the washwoman takes them home? Of the danger of contamination from contagious disease? If you do:

Here's What I Said To Him

The following letter (with name of writer omitted for obvious reasons) received by the undersigned, explains itself:

Atlanta, Ga., February 23, 1924.

Mr. Charles W. Wilkins,
City.

My Dear Sir: I note you are a candidate for one of the two places to be filled March 19 on the Board of County Commissioners. I do not know you personally, but have heard you spoken of as a successful young business man. It is generally supposed that only politicians aspire to, and usually fill, such public positions. Why do you, as a young business man, aspire to that office, and what will you do with it if elected? Aside from "political expediency" what is your idea of public office as a business proposition, and do you feel that you can—and will—apply business methods and business policies ONLY in the exercise of your duty as County Commissioner? Or will it be for you just a "political job," with the usual "dickerings and trades" anad "sop" and "prestige" that generally make up the "most important" functions of many office-holders?

I'd like to get your viewpoint—and if satisfactory, I'll vote for you.

Respectfully,

CHAS. W. WILKINS
Candidate for County Commissioner

My Answer

My Dear Sir: I certainly appreciate the candor of your letter, and shall try to reply just as candidly. Perhaps many voters share your opinion as to part of your letter, and like you, too, would like to know why I am a candidate, and how much and what kind of business consideration I can and will give to the office, if elected as a County Commissioner.

Let me say first, modestly, that I have been actively engaged in business for about fifteen years. I have made at least a fair and reasonable success. Many people declare that "BUSINESS AND POLITICS" DO NOT MIX. BUT THEY MUST MIX. Business men should not hesitate to serve public interests, even though at a sacrifice sometimes.

However, I don't think a man should make a business of politics. It may be that too many office-holders have accepted this as the correct theory. I do believe, however, politics should be BUSINESS with a business man entrusted to office.

I believe I know enough and have had enough business experience to apply this rule if elected. I have my business so systematized and regulated that I can and will give whatever of time is necessary to the duties of the office, if elected.

I look upon the administration of county affairs as purely a business matter. Petty politics, factionalism, "pets," "trades," and the like, should not be countenanced. The Board of County Commissioners are nothing more nor less than a board of directors, seeing to the collection of, and expending annually something like three millions of dollars for the people of this county. It should be wisely and economically done. Waste and extravagance of the people's money should be as effectively guarded against by the board members as if every dollar of it were their own private money. I shall so guard it, if elected.

I CONSIDER THE BOARD OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS AS SERVANTS OF THE PEOPLE—their directors—to conduct the business of the county in a business-like manner, with courtesy and promptness—impartially, honestly, fairly.

I believe that every county employee coming within the jurisdiction of, elected or appointed by the board, should receive fair and just wages for services rendered, but they should be required to render fair and faithful services, earning every penny paid to them—and selected or elected because of their fitness for their particular work, regardless of political line-ups or factionalism.

I have no great rig-a-ma-role of promises, looking to wonderful reforms, to make. I have no friends to reward, no enemies to punish, no clique or faction to serve, if elected.

I believe, however, there should be a consolidation of the city and county school systems—COMBINED INTO ONE STRONG AND POWERFUL SYSTEM.

I believe that the city of Atlanta is entitled to a full and just proportion of the county income expended within her limits, as she pays a great proportion of Fulton county taxes.

I believe taxes should be held to a minimum, commensurate, of course, with all necessary needs for progress for our great section.

Finally, I believe I have enough common-sense, business experience, fairness and honesty to serve intelligently as a County Commissioner, and with a young and vigorous body, an active and alert mind—somewhat initiative and creative—that if elected, those whose suffrage I receive will never have cause to regret having given it to me.

I hope, my dear sir, you can and will be one of those. March 19th is the day. Shall I count upon you?

Respectfully yours,

CHAS. W. WILKINS,
Candidate for County Commissioner.

—And upon receipt of my letter, the man "who wanted to know" phoned me that I could count on his vote. How about yours, Mister? I will appreciate it.

CONFERENCE PLANNED BY SOCIAL WORKERS

The first state conference on social work, to be held in Atlanta March 18 to 20, will draw scores of civic, church and social workers from all sections of the state, according to statement Saturday by Burr Blackburn, prominent in social work in the south. Representatives from 36 state agencies will be in attendance he said, and the conference has been called by the State Council of Social Agencies.

For several weeks past a special program committee, supported by 10 sub-committees engaged in working out details of various subjects, has been laying definite plans for the first annual conference.

Problems of education, health, child welfare, race relations, recreations, mental hygiene, family work, delinquency and other similar subjects will receive consideration during the three days' conference, it is stated.

The annual dinner of social workers will be held on the second day of the conference, when "Rural Education" will be the principal topic for discussion.

The following committee is handling arrangements for the conference here: Robert H. Jones, Jr., chairman; Miss Rhoda Gaufman, secretary; public health (health council), Dr. Theodore Toepel; family service (family welfare association), Miss Ada Woolfolk; child welfare (state welfare department), Miss Mary McLeod; recreation (American playground and recreation association), J. B. Williams; negro work (state committee on race relations), T. J. Woofter, Jr.; adult delinquency (state commission on criminology), Marvin Underwood; mental hygiene (education committee of mental hygiene association), Goodrich White; education (state department of education), Dr. N. H. Ballard; publicity (publicity committee of state council), Mrs. T. C. Hudson; associated organizations, J. P. Faulkner; details, Burr Blackburn.

MANUFACTURERS PLAN BIG EXPOSITION HERE

The Atlanta Manufacturers' exposition will be the next big show in the city auditorium, it is announced Saturday by Virgil W. Shepard, general manager, who is now engaged in booking space for the exhibits. It will open on Monday, April 7, and continue for one week, with music and other entertainment features.

"Already more than a dozen exhibits have been contracted for, and we feel certain that every available foot of space in the auditorium will be filled," Mr. Shepard said.

"The first 'Made-in-Atlanta Show' was held there two years ago, and the Atlanta manufacturers were so pleased that a second exhibit was planned last year, but abandoned because the auditorium was never available at a desirable date. This year, however, we have secured a week when the city will be filled with buyers for out-of-town houses, and we believe a visit to the exposition will give them a new idea of the varied and numerous lines of goods manufactured in Atlanta.

"More than a hundred different exhibits are in sight for the show, and most of them will contain machinery in operation, miniature manufacturing plants, turning out finished goods before the eyes of the visitors. Thousands of souvenirs will be distributed by the manufacturers.

"Associated in the management of the Atlanta Manufacturers' exposition are several prominent manufacturers, including J. R. Bachman, Atlanta Milling company; Alfred Fox, Southern Upholstering company, and R. A. Burnett, of the Burnett-Klapper Furniture company, all of whom will have large exhibits," Mr. Shepard asserted.

FLORISTS TO CONSIDER FLOWER SHOW PLANS

The Atlanta Florists and Horticulturists' club, made up of 125 Atlanta florists and employees, will hold its regular monthly membership meeting Monday night at 8 o'clock at the chamber of commerce. The entertainment committee, of which Mrs. J. L. Harper is chairman, has prepared a special musical program and one of Atlanta's prominent civic leaders will make a short address.

The club has arranged to send C. V. Hohenstein, secretary of the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association, to Cleveland, Ohio, on March 29 to visit the national flower show, for the purpose of securing data to be considered by the florists' club as to advisability of staging a flower show in Atlanta each year.

Officers of the association for 1924 are: E. A. Wachendorff, president; R. G. Lyon, vice president; H. S. Gibson, secretary; Mrs. J. S. Garfield, treasurer.

Mah Jongg Rules Given Away Free By Oriental Line

"How to Play Mah-Jongg, or Ma-Chiong," is the title of a handsome booklet which is now available for Atlanta lovers of the popular Chinese game, at the offices of John M. Born, local agent for the Admiral Oriental Steamship line, 1108 Candler building.

The booklet not only simplifies the playing rules, but contains interesting history of the game which ancient Chinese enjoyed and which has gained thousands of American admirers during the past few months.

During the past two years—just after the game was introduced with great success by the Admiral Oriental Line, which operates a fleet of five passenger liners between Seattle and the Orient—a great many authorities have written lengthy treatises on the game.

Ma Chiong means "sparrows." Its rules are simple, requiring attention and concentration while playing a hand. In some respects it is similar to the American game of "rummy," as one completes a winning hand with sequences or three or more of one kind of tile, but numerous portions of other games are very evident as play progresses, mah-jongg lovers point out.

It is played with 136 cards, there being four tiles of each wind—north, south, east and west. Three dragons—green, white and red—figure in the game, and there are four tiles of each dragon. There are also four tiles each of dots, or circles; bamboos and characters, running from one to nine.

It was with the view of helping the beginner that the Admiral Oriental line issued its first book of rules.

If the beginner follows the rules carefully little trouble will be experienced in mastering the game, it is said. If in doubt on any point, Mr. Borno, local agent of the line, will answer any questions.

Junior Red Cross Plans Health Trail For Negro Children

One of the activities of the Junior Red Cross, under direction of Mrs. Louis J. Elsas, volunteer chairman, is undertaking for the colored children of this organization, is a "Health Trail," in the form of a contest, the object of which is to promote better health habits among negro school children. Recently 21 doctors assisted by nine nurses examined 723 participants. Nineteen school teachers took charge of the clerical work involved.

After the examination each child was given individual record sheets and a slip was sent to the parents of each, advising them of physical defects when physical defects were of an outstanding nature. Statistical reports have been compiled for each school.

The child gaining the most points at the end of the two months contest, and not the one who is the most physically perfect, will be awarded a prize. The second examination will be held eight weeks from the first and will be conducted in the same manner.

The "Trail" will terminate in a big carnival, health stunts, plays, awarding of prizes and many other interesting features have been planned.

Meeting Dates.

The three council meetings of the organization, for the month of March will be held at 249 Ivy street, as follows: Colored Council, Monday, March 3; grammar schools (for white children), Wednesday, March 5; high schools and private schools, Thursday, March 6. All meetings begin at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

ARTHUR A. POISSANT TO LECTURE SUNDAY

The regular meeting of the School of Health will be held Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in assembly room No. 2, Atlanta Chamber of Commerce.

At the lecture period the school will again present Arthur Alfred Poissant, whose subject will be "The Majesty of Calmness."

Robert Bryan Harrison, director of the school, will preside.

In 48 hours Whitmarsh Elixir will bring such relief and so reduce the distress as to make it unquestioned that this remarkable remedy is a specific for vegetable poison.

If you were ever poisoned with ivy, oak or sumach, and are among that vast throng of sufferers in which there is redness of the skin, itching, infiltration, tendency to moisture, crusting or scaling, cracking of the skin, you have eczema, due primarily to such poisoning—

Whitmarsh Elixir will bring you relief in 48 hours and in 3 to 6 weeks will eradicate the trouble from your system.

If you are troubled with acne, psoriasis, rash, boils and skin humours characterized by inflammatory redness and cannot trace these exudations to any definite cause it is more than likely they are due to a form of eczema or a recurrent vegetable poison—

In either case the use of Whitmarsh Elixir will bring such wonderful relief in a few hours and such startling improvement in appearance in 48 hours as to leave no doubt as to the specific nature of this remarkable remedy.

B. L. Shaw, Michigan's Veteran Druggist, Now Past Eighty, Who Has Sold This Wonderful Elixir for Half a Century and Has Witnessed Hundreds of Remarkable Recoveries in Old Eczemas.

Anyone who has even a touch of skin rash, pimples, acne, itching, scaly spots or the more fiery, burning variety of eczema, should send at once for a free trial of Whitmarsh Elixir. And if the skin breaks out into the more violent form of ivy poison or from any of the numerous vines, shrubs or plants known to poison the skin, don't fail to send for the free trial.

Whitmarsh Elixir is the discovery of a real woodsman, a man who lived in the timbered country, an old school-doctor who knew plant life, who understood the nature of poison plants and their action on the skin. And with his Elixir, prepared from antagonistic properties and antidotal vegetable alkaloids, he stopped the various rashes so completely and gave relief so quickly in the most violent outbreaks of the poison that he became a wizard to the lumberjacks as he has become a blessing to thousands of sufferers in the more settled regions.

So send for the free trial of this wonderful remedy, the most remarkable antidote known for any skin trouble due to blood humours or vegetable poisons.

It is not a salve, ointment, lotion or dressing. You can not get rid of blood humours or skin eruptions that way. Whitmarsh Elixir reaches the cause of the trouble, stops it, prevents its further inroads, and the blood thus cleared begins the repair of the skin. In 48 hours you see the result.

Don't fail to send for this free trial. Do it now.

Cattle Dipping 'War' And Dynamiting Vats Laid to Defendants

Valdosta, Ga., March 1.—Eighty cattle dipping vats were dynamited in Lowndes and Echols counties during the period from 1917 to 1921, according to testimony of Dr. W. M. Moore, witness for the government in the trial of charges of conspiracy to violate the federal dipping law being heard in United States district court here against 21 Echols county citizens.

Dr. Moore, relating incidents of his connection with the cattle dipping work, said that all of the vats in Echols county were blown up and most of those in the southern part of Lowndes county were similarly disposed of.

R. S. English, a federal employee, testified today concerning an alleged "war" in Echols county when shots were fired into the McKinnon camp of federal range riders. He said the range men returned the fire with machine guns. He admitted firing about forty shots at an automobile and stated that other men in the camp did some shooting.

Upon cross examination, English stated the camp was equipped with two machine guns, two sawed-off shotguns and that each range rider was equipped with a rifle and side arms. He stated that on one occasion he attended court in the county where many of the 250 persons present were armed. He could not identify any of them.

Dan Bohannon, an 18-year-old boy, was the next witness. He gave his version of the "war" on the McKinnon camp. An automobile passed the camp and fired two shots, he said, returning later and firing five additional times. It was then the range men returned the fire, he said.

Bohannon said he recognized the men, who were going toward Statesville, as Oscar, Shaby and Inman Thornton, Tinker Carroll, Wesley McDonald and Waverly McDonald, all of whom are now under indictment. He admitted he did not see these men but "recognized them by the hollowing and noise they made."

When cross-examined, Bohannon stated it was not unusual for persons driving along the road to fire off their pistols.

Testimony today tended to show the feeling existing in the county against cattle dipping. However, Bohannon was the only witness to directly connect any of the indicted men with incidents attributed to those conditions.

Defense attorneys, attempting to discredit Bohannon's testimony by showing that secret service men had "drilled him," were unable to shake the witness in his statements.

TWO ARE DROWNED AS FERRY BREAKS FROM ITS CABLE

Florence, Ala., March 1.—Rush King and Edward Jones, negroes, employed by the government at Wilson dam, were drowned this morning when the overhead cable of a ferry broke and one end of a barge on which they were riding across from the north short to Patton Island dipped, throwing them into the swift current in the main channel of the swollen river.

The only other passengers on the barge were Major Malcolm Elliott, in charge of construction division, No. 1, at Wilson dam and his little daughter, Margaret. The barge, freed by the broken cable and unmanageable, was carried at high speed by the swift current for more than a mile before it was caught by pursuing skiffs and Major Elliott and his daughter rescued.

Neitehr of them suffered any injury.

Neither of the bodies of the negroes have been recovered.

LODGE OF PYTHIANS WILL CONFER RANK OF KNIGHT MONDAY

Atlanta Nodge, No. 20, Knights of Pythias, will confer the rank of knight on a number of candidates in amplified form at 8 o'clock Monday night. This lodge was instituted on October 6, 1877, being the oldest K. P. lodge in Atlanta. Among the charter members are some of the most prominent business and professional men and bankers of Atlanta. Members of lodges in Atlanta, Decatur and East Point will be present.

CHIEF RABBI KOOK LEAVES FOR AMERICA

For the first time in the history of modern Jewry, Rabbi A. I. Kook, chief rabbi of Palestine, widely known scholar and leader of eastern Jewry, expects to visit America within the next few days, according to announcement made here Saturday.

Rabbi Kook is regarded as one of the foremost leaders in Jewry of the present period, is possessed of a magnetic personality, and is highly regarded by leaders of all creeds and classes. He is the acknowledged leading personality possessed by Jewry at the present time.

The great esteem in which Rabbi Kook is held, not only privately and as a religious teacher and leader in Jewry, but also officially and secularly, is attested by the fact that he is the possessor of the D. S. medal presented by the British government, an honor which very few ecclessiastic leaders of any denomination in Palestine ever received.

Rabbi Kook's projected mission to America is one of importance to American Jewry, leaders point out, bringing a message to Jews of America; a message of such moment that the Rabbi has found it necessary to undertake the hazards of a long journey.

Rabbi Kook left Palestine February 28 and will arrive in America in the early part of March.

Executive Committee Declares Bibb Races Legal; Deny Petition

Macon, Ga., March 1.—The Bibb county executive committee in session here today voted to deny petitions filed by I. O. Allen and Ross L. Hatcher, defeated candidates in the county primary held February 14, asking that the primary results be set aside because of alleged irregularities cited in their petitions. Allen was a candidate for county commissioner and Hatcher for tax collector. Both asked that a new primary be held.

Both claimed that certain candidates failed to qualify 30 days before the election as required by law. They also alleged that it was improper to move ballot boxes from polling places before the votes had been counted.

Concern of Moultrie Plans To Begin Work On Thomasville High

Thomasville, Ga., March 1.—Work on the new high school building to be erected here will be begun very shortly, the contract having been awarded to the Norman Construction company, of Moultrie.

The base figure on which the building of the school will be let is $106,300. A. Ten Eyck Brown, of Atlanta, is the architect who prepared the plans for this building, which will be a very handsome, up-to-date one and together with the other school buildings here will give adequate facilities for caring for the large number of pupils attending the schools.

It is lpanned by the contractors to begin the work in time to have the building completed by the opening of the term in September.

BUTTS BREEDERS NAME PACE HEAD OF CATTLE CLUB

Jackson, Ga., March 1.—(Special.) The organization of the Butts County Jersey Cattle association here Friday marked a distinct step toward better dairying and breeding conditions in this county. A. M. Pace, expert authority on fine stock, was elected to the presidency of the newly-created organization, while George F. Etheridge was named vice president, and Gorden W. Thompson, secretary and treasurer. W. C. Randolph, eastern field representative of the American Jersey Cattle club, and Henry Branham, state dairy inspector, were present at the meeting.

Steps will be taken to broaden the scope of the association, and banks of the county have pledged their cooperation in the work. Mr. Randolph stated at the meeting that the association would give $50 to the Butts' County Golf club on a basis of 12 members and $75 for 20 members. Members of the club will be provided with pure-bred Jersey calves, it was announced.

EAKES NAMED SPEAKER ON JACKSON PROGRAM

Jackson, Ga., March 1.—(Special.) Laying of the cornerstone of the new Methodist church, scheduled for Wednesday afternoon, was postponed until later, owing to the unfavorable weather. The date will be announced later by Rev. Henry H. Jones, pastor of the church. Dr. J. H. Eakes, presiding elder of the Griffin district, has accepted the invitation to deliver the address when the exercises are held.

She avoided the operation and now feels better than she ever did. Likewise Mrs. William Appleton of Eddington, Pa., who was badly constipated and now looks her best again after using Syrup Pepsin.

UP TO THE SENATE!

The House of Representatives is to be congratulated for finally laying aside strictly party antagonisms on the tax-reduction bill, striking a compromise, and pushing the measure on to the senate in good time for it to become a law before March 15th, thereby giving the federal taxpayers the benefit also of a 25 per cent reduction in their assessments covering the 1923 incomes.

The high-points of the bill as it finally passed the house follow:

A normal tax reduction to two per cent on incomes below $4,000, to five per cent on incomes between $4,000 and $8,000 and to six per cent above $8,000.

A cut by one-fourth in the present surtax rates, making the maximum 37 1-2 per cent on incomes exceeding $200,000.

No increase in existing personal tax exemptions.

A flat reduction of 25 per cent on all personal income taxes payable this year.

Specific rate changes carried in the bill will not become effective until tax payments are made next year on income and profits of 1924, except those made in the excise levies which would go into effect thirty days after enactment of the law.

That the democrats fully supported this compromise, which was offered by Representative Longworth, the republican floor leader, without bickering or further delay, was most commendable. It was a democrat, indeed, who offered the amendment providing a flat 25 per cent reduction in the 1923 assessments—Crisp, of Georgia.

The bill is now up to the senate, and the time is short. That body prides itself upon its deliberateness. It is also one of the most outstanding gabfest institutions on earth. If the senators will not "talk" the bill to death, or delay action until it will be too late to get the benefit of the 1923 provision, all will be well. There is no doubt the president will sign the bill as passed by the house.

The responsibility, therefore, now rests with the upper branch of congress.

And millions of American people are waiting and watching!

IS DAYLIGHT DAWNING?

Two or three weeks ago hundreds of citizens of Georgia, most of them from rural communities, all of them Protestants, and most of them formerly earnest Watson followers, signed a petition calling upon Senator Walsh, of Montana, who has made such a remarkable record in disclosing the scandal features in the leasing of government oil reserves to private interests, to enter the Georgia preferential primary as a candidate for this state's vote for president in the national democratic convention. Senator Walsh is a Catholic.

As the Montana senator is not a candidate for the presidential nomination, but is actively supporting one of the present outstanding candidates, he would not enter the contest, but warmly thanked his friends for their support and confidence.

The other day in Louisiana a Hebrew—a good, upstanding citizen—was made sheriff in a county that is admittedly controlled politically by the Ku Klux Klan. Indeed the klan is reported to be stronger perhaps in the county in question than in any other county in the state, but the people had confidence in the man regardless of his religious faith.

Are not these instances evidence of a growing tendency toward more tolerance among the citizens of this country, and a passing of an unfortunate wave of intolerance that has most deplorably gripped sections of this country for the past few years?

Is not the brotherhood of man, taught by the Bible, becoming more firmly fixed in the consciences of the men and women of this country? And is not the guarantee of the constitution that gives to every citizen the right to serve God as he or she may choose becoming more deeply respected by all the people?

Is not the sacredness of constituted authority, upon which alone the structure of government stands, getting a stronger grip upon the people as a whole?

These better conditions are noticeable in the south, and the people are happier, and society is better protected, and law is more respected, by reason of them.

Let us hope the day is dawning all over America when the golden rule shall be the law supreme in the conscience and in the acts of every citizen, when good citizenship shall rest upon good fellowship, and when the constitution of our country shall be regarded and respected as the fundamental of American liberty and of democratic institutions.

OPENING THE MOUNTAINS

On this page is a communication from the secretary of the Nacoochee-Hiawassee Highway Association telling of the magnificent work that is progressing in building highways through the north-central and northeast Georgia mountains.

The association is a product of The Constitution-government expedition conducted through these mountains in the summer of 1922, and its work in planning systematically a complete "system", and in getting the coordination of the federal, state and county authorities in putting into execution the system planned, stands out conspicuously as one of the most aggressive and constructive accomplishments of any public-spirited organization yet formed in Georgia.

The road that is now being built across the Unicoi Gap, thus linking the Nacoochee and Hiawassee valleys, is directly the result of the interested counties getting together so unselfishly that one county is spending its own gas tax funds in another county, but the investment is not only a good one but enables the other county to provide connections and laterals of great value to all the group of northeastern mountain counties.

Another main objective of the association is the opening up of the beautiful "Toccoa basin" with highways and approaches, and in this the federal forestry department is planning to give material financial assistance.

The state highway department is cooperating most acceptably and effectively in all of these undertakings, assisting as far as is legally possible in the building of roads not included in what is known as federal aid roads or in the state-wide program which is the highway department's main objectives. One of these highways is the Atlanta-Asheville highway, which is now being driven, with steam shovels and large forces of men, literally through the Blue Ridge mountains in Union county.

In all of this great development work The Constitution takes a keen and pardonable pride. Its aim for two years has been to have the federal forest reservations of northeast Georgia converted into a recreational area, and that day is so rapidly approaching that even this approaching summer will find thousands of pleasure and health seekers camped in these reservations, the government having already completed a number of camp sites, including running water, sewerage and other modern and health-assuring features. The government is also building hundreds of miles of equestrian trails, and permits for fishing and other outdoor sports will be given by government agents on the ground.

The time is not far distant when the mountain sections of Georgia will become the most famous playgrounds of eastern America.

TO VISIT CUBA.

A commission of business men, created under the auspices of the Southern Commercial congress, will leave shortly to study business conditions in Cuba. Several Atlantans, including Mayor Sims, are members of the commission, and will make this trip.

Atlanta is peculiarly interested in Cuban trade. Millions of dollars' worth of Atlanta-made products are shipped into Cuba each year, and this trade can and no doubt will be increased.

Not only is Atlanta interested, but the entire state of Georgia has a keen trading interest in Cuba. Since the "overseas railroad" has been constructed to Key West, Cuba is but a step from Georgia, and hundreds of Georgians visit the island, the population of which is about the same as that of Georgia, each year.

The commission soon to visit there will find that the factors which generally determine the course of Cuban business are in the main most favorable. Estimates of the new sugar crop forecast a yield approximating that of 1922-23, which was of ample, though not of record-breaking proportions. The prices remain around 5.75 cents a pound, which are considered by growers as most satisfactory.

Second in importance to sugar is tobacco, and reports from Havana say the 1923-24 crop will be the largest in the history of the island, while prices are expected to reach the same high level they did for the last crop.

The income of the Cuban government, month after month, exceeds expenses, and on January 1 the government had over $23,000,000 in the treasury.

The one fear in Cuba, and the direct cause for much of the business caution, is the unsettled political situation. This is improving, as a great deal of the idle labor of 1923 has now been placed in productivity. Idleness in labor always causes political disturbances, even in far older and more settled nations than Cuba, and the business men of the island have realized that the best panacea for political equilibrium is to get the labor employed, and to keep the people busy. This they are doing to a most satisfactory degree, and the effect is being felt in less restlessness, and in less political disturbances. Of course, so long as people have ambitions there will be political contests, but the old spirit of power through revolution has almost entirely passed in Cuba, and for this better condition the strong arm of the United States has been largely responsible.

WHERE DISEASE LURKS.

With the appropriation by council of $6,000 as a campaign fund "to fight smallpox," and the admission by the city physician that "there are more cases in the city than in several years," the importance of a campaign in the interest of better housing, sanitary and hygienic conditions in the more congested tenement districts is accentuated, and especially as to the negro tenement zones.

As a matter of fact the great majority of the white citizens of Atlanta have no conception of the squalor, filth, disease-inviting conditions that prevail in many of the sections of this city and suburbs in which the negroes are segregated. They are a disgrace to Atlanta, a disgrace to the owners of these shacks who profit upon the helplessness of a race, without thought of personal comfort or health, or the great menace to the general health of the city, and a reflection upon the city authorities who allow such conditions to prevail.

Talk about an increase in smallpox! The wonder is, when one surveys some of the living conditions among the very poor of Atlanta, both white and black, that there is not every contagious disease under the sun prevailing here. In a winter like that which is now fortunately coming to a close, with severe cold and extreme and acute and precipitate changes in temperature, that there has not been an epidemic of influenza and pneumonia is one of the marvels that good fortune has bestowed, for certainly conditions of living in hundreds of so-called "homes" in the tenements have been conducive to both, and to all the other ills that broken windows and doors, and fallen chimneys, and heatless rooms and accumulated dirt, and nauseating odors, and other contributing factors, could possibly produce.

It is not pleasant to call attention to these things. The truth hurts, but it is necessary to tell it in order to correct abuses and conditions that must be corrected, not only in the interest of decency and humanity, but in the interest of the health and contentment of all the people. The squalor and lack of sanitation in the tenement district of any city threatens the whole city.

There are hundreds of negro families in Atlanta whose living conditions are good. They have every element of modern comfort and sanitation about them. Hundreds of them own their own homes, and many of them are fine homes.

But, while this is true as to hundreds, there are thousands living in shacks that are little better than hog pens—and it is a shame that reflects upon the city as well as upon the landlords who are profiting upon the helplessness of a class that is unable to make a remedy.

Of course the increase in smallpox should be stamped out immediately. And the conditions to make contagious diseases possible in Atlanta, or certainly their spread possible, should be stamped out with equal vigor. Smallpox incubates in filth and squalor. Malaria is preventable, but it costs Georgia millions of dollars every year, in the loss of man power. Standing water, cess pools, damp, undrained housing sections incubate the mosquito that in turn transmits the malaria virus. There are streets and alleys in Atlanta that incubate these mosquitoes by the millions every summer, despite Atlanta's altitude and climate.

These conditions must be remedied. Atlanta is too great a city to strain at gnats in smaller matters, and swallow with apparent relish, as it does, the camels of menacing health conditions that exist under the very noses of more than 200,000 uninformed citizens.

Clean up the negro tenement zones of Atlanta, and condemn every house or shack that is not fit, under every law of health and sanitation, for human habitation! And do this now!

Disease and contagion know no race or color line!

POLITICAL BUNCOMBE!

Senator Reed, of Missouri, made a speech at St. Louis in which he viciously assailed one of the outstanding candidates for the democratic nomination for president. Reed's speech was what he designated an "opening gun" for the same nomination, although his "candidacy" is not regarded seriously even in his own state.

At any rate Senator Moses, republican of New Hampshire, grasping the idea that Reed's speech will make good republican campaign material, as it undoubtedly will, attempted to have the speech, though made out in Missouri, and of no connection with congressional proceedings, printed in The Congressional Record. After two failures he finally succeeded.

Then, after the precedent had been established, Senator Harrison, democrat of Mississippi, succeeded in getting read into The Record abstracts of speeches made by Senator Hiram Johnson, a candidate for the republican nomination.

What does it mean from the viewpoint of the people? The taxpayers must pay for the printing of an enormous amount of partisan political buncombe, and to pay further for the franking of the stuff throughout the United States, possibly by the millions of copies.

Further, The Congressional Record, which is supposed to be a fair and unbiased official record of the acts of congress—and nothing more—thus becomes debauched with petty politics, and bordered with a mass of partisan bunk that the people generally care nothing about.

Where is the senate of the old days—and the senators who hold public office to be a public trust, and the conservation of the public's welfare an inherent and sacred duty?

MILLENNIAL DAWN.

The communication of Mrs. B. P. Ware, published elsewhere, is entertaining and illuminating.

In advocating the ironical crusade of Hudson Maxim against coffee and tea, in which he classifies these well-known breakfast beverages along with the intoxicants outlawed by the eighteenth amendment, this good lady admits she is "trying to bring about the millennium and would like to start it here in Atlanta."

A great many good things start and end in Atlanta, and if there is to be a millennium Atlanta is undeniably the place "to start it."

When one contemplates the possibility of a law that would put the two hundred million steaming cups of coffee and tea in America each morning into the same outlawed class with the flood of home-made hootch that is inhibited by the Volstead act, then it is really time to contemplate the millennium, for surely such a situation would develop either a millennium or a revolution, and of the two we prefer the former.

If coffee and tea are to be outlawed, on the ground that they "kill," then we should be consistent and outlaw the various other articles of diet that have also had their enemies since time began.

Some medical "authority," perhaps a scientist, has said that salt is injurious, as it hardens the arteries; and soda hardens the bones; and pepper reacts on the liver.

Some "authority," perhaps a scientist, has said that all meats will sooner or later kill, and that a vegetable diet is the only solution for long living. This theory is so general that vegetarian groups are organized all over the country, and perhaps with excellent health results.

And yet there are "authorities" who will tell us that vegetables are poisonous—that tomatoes create an acidity of the blood, that cabbage contains arsenic, and potatoes a starch that retards elimination.

And so on, and so on!

As long as time shall last the world will wrestle with the problem of food and drink, and dieticians will continue to tell us how to live or die.

In seriousness, intemperance in anything is physically harmful.

In all seriousness, too, a law that is made and generally violated becomes responsible for a condition that is more distressing than that before such a law was enacted. It destroys respect for law—and that in turn tears at the very vitals of government.

The question of food is a question for the individual to solve. If coffee injures one, then stop coffee. That is sensible. And so with tea. And so with everything that we eat.

But as to laws inhibiting accepted food, as Hudson Maxim suggests as to coffee and tea—it's all bosh.

Let's have greater respect for laws, and create only those that are essential to the public welfare and morals, and not build up a greater disrespect for them through sumptuary proposals.

With all this oil flare-up, it does look like congress at last is "getting down to business," and there is a possibility of "catching up" with it.

The Later Blessing

When Life turns gray
And the light has left the day,
The blessing of the children
As they sing along the way!

Their faces, joyous-bright,
Bring heavenly scenes in sight,
And there is no more sighing,
And there is no more Night.

And sweet it is to know
That tears have ceased to flow,

Makes the glad world love them so!

THE WORLD'S WINDOW

A Glance at the American Labor Movement.

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN

To speak objectively of the American labor movement, that is to discuss its origin, development and ultimate goal without bias or partiality, but rather as an examination of facts, becomes increasingly difficult. The difficulty increases in the same ratio as its ever-growing size and strength. It is an easy matter to laud its purposes. But that particular phase must be left to the old-time politician, who, for reason of his own, seizes the opportunity from time to time to compare the movement to nothing less than the beginning of millennium. He sees in shortened working hours, in child labor legislation, old age insurance, and such like programs a tremendous step forward. But he does not examine its historical process. He does not consider the basic facts. He does not relegate the American labor movement to its proper place in the economic-historical process of this great nation.

The American labor movement is nationalistic to the core. That is to say it has no binding affiliations with any of the great labor internationales. True its attitude toward the Amsterdam internationale is far more friendly than toward the Moscow internationale, but in essence it is a typical product of American conditions. It does not consider itself proletarian and therefore cannot accept the international character of all labor internationals. For the internationales, as their name implies, stand for world-wide action. The American citizen resents foreign domination and history shows that he resents as much to dominate others with his own program of action. Therefore we have never seen the creation of a labor internationale in America, unless we want to consider the American Federation of Labor as such an instrument, for its ramifications extend as well to Canada and to Mexico.

Why has the labor movement never entered the political field? Is it due to the leadership of Samuel Gompers? Or has its executive deemed organization of craft unions as a sufficient weapon for emancipation? The answer is there has not been in the American labor movement and there does not appear to be any imminence of such a deep, miserable condition of abject poverty that has characterized the working classes of Europe. America is by pre-eminence the land of home owners. The labor man strives for the day when he shall own his own home, when he shall live off the interest of invested funds; in other words, when he shall have become a capitalist, in Marxian phraseology. To achieve this aim he allies himself in the political sphere with one of the dominant political parties.

* * * *

In America there is no proletariat to speak of. There are slum dwellers. There are sweatshops. There are appalling conditions in the great industrial centers, in the stockyards and coal fields. But the percentage of men who have emerged from that condition and have risen to higher planes in life is infinitely larger than in any other country. This fact serves as a continued and never-ceasing inspiration to men and women still existing in the lower strata of social life. The ladder is there. They may start the climb any moment they choose. It all may be a delusion, but the delusion is holding the workers spellbound.

* * * *

In Europe the fate of the working classes is one of increasing misery. Wars and artificial deflation of currency have driven them to the last refuge—communism. The historical process over there is gradually eliminating all middle-class existence. As the struggle for life becomes more acute, some sections of the bourgeoisie or middle classes are forced into the class known as the propertyless class and others are forced the other way, into the class of big landowners and industrials. The middle classes are squeezed out of existence and the lines of demarcation become clearer marked. Property owners against the poorest peasants and workers. Naturally, such an unavoidable process leads to hostility and class war.

* * * *

There are those in the United States who declare that the same historical process has made a beginning in this country. They contend that as the trusts and big corporations grow in size and power they are forcing the masses of the population backwards. Driving them into abject misery, so to speak. There is no doubt to the impartial observer that labor has to fight for every gain it makes, that it had to fight in the past and that it must fight in the future, but there is an increasing acceptance of labor's standing in the social life of this country. The world war was an overwhelming test. The government at that time recognized labor as one of the component parts of the nation by appointing its leaders to responsible posts. It was a recognition that labor accepted with good grace, not without tremendous importance to the nation as a whole.

* * * *

No one will deny that this period of active participation in the administration of the country was followed by a period of reaction. And at the same time this period saw the origin of a labor political formation. These two incidents followed each other with logical consequence, but the second will disappear again as the prosperity of the country as a whole increases. For a time the ladder of success was hidden from view to the average worker, during the period of financial and industrial depression following the close of the war, with the inevitable result that he sought refuge in political action. He saw no way out; did not see the light ahead, and resorted to other means. It is for the same reason that political labor parties in Europe flourish, because there the period of depression has no ending but continues now unabated for the past ten years.

* * * *

The creation of such organizations as the workers' party with a program largely constituted of idealizing the Russian revolution is distasteful to the American worker, because it is something with which he is not concerned. He has his own problems. He does not see that his case is in any way related to the case of the moujik and the Russian industrial worker. He is not so certain of the validity of the maxim of Lenin that the proletariat must exercise a dictatorship. He does not consider himself proletarian and neither he is. He has been steeped from his very youth in the phraseology of democracy. And he has come to believe in government by the people for the people. That, in his estimation, means co-operation of all classes in society for the common weal. Of course, the extremists within the labor ranks, who are boring from within, say that in this process of co-operative administration of the affairs of the country he is merely duped, that the benefits go only one way. But the idea of dictatorship is not to his liking. He is a free citizen and he does not want others to be ground under his own heel, so he argues.

* * * *

But the significant fact about the American labor movement is that it has no urge within its own bosom to become a political force. Whatever has appeared on the surface along that line during the last fifty years has largely been superimposed and produced by the influx of foreign influences through immigration. Not that a labor political party would need to be feared, England shows the fallacy of that old bogey. But American workers never have felt the need for political action. And this because of the psychological reason that the American worker considers himself even above the aristocracy and titled nobility of Europe. A worker may go down in the pit and dig for coal the one day, but he had the vision that within one year he will set up a little store or a shop. In two years he will own it. In twenty years he will be able to live comfortably off his savings.

* * * *

Labor will continue its present program of non-political action only as long as it feels assured that its interests are safe with the party leaders in power. And only so long as prosperity continues in the land. With the unlimited natural resources at hand, with an ever-growing market within its own frontiers, the United States will become more and more self-sufficient, self-dependent and prosperous while the declining influence of other hemispheres will affect its status less every year. Revolution, preached here and there, will not come as long as men have before them the vision of a home and security in old age. Take that away, however, and America will be Europeanized along social lines within a decade.

When "Speculation" Becomes "Peculation."

Each generation is prone to think of itself as peculiar. It is always interesting and often amusing to find that our contemporary criticisms sound like echoes of the judgments delivered by our forefathers upon the customs of their own time. It would be so easy to substitute what our grandmothers said about the "young people" of their day, for what we are saying about the boys and girls of our day, and pass it off for current criticism. Shakespeare may have been right in saying, "History never repeats," but, if that is true, we will have to make a distinction between history and the historian. Human nature seems to have very little originality. It varies, I grant you, in its costumes and is fond of many fashions, but underneath all of its changing clothing the same characteristics are found generation after generation.

How would this do for a description of the tea party which we are now holding in Washington:

"Speculation, peculation, engrossing, forestalling, with all their concomitants, afford too many melancholy proofs of the decay of public virtue. . . . Is the paltry consideration of a little dirty pelf to individuals to be placed in competition with the essential rights and liberties of the present generation and of millions yet unborn? Shall a few designing men, for their own aggrandizement and to gratify their own avarice, overset the goodly fabric we have been rearing at the expense of so much time, blood and treasure? And shall we at last become the victims of our own abominable lust of gain?" This happens to be a quotation from a letter written by George Washington to James Warren under date of March 31, 1779.

Influence for Sale.

This criticism is so modern that one is tempted to say that George Washington had caught somebody removing the "S" from speculation. He raises a very old and serious question. What is the difference between "speculation" and "peculation?" I shall not stop to argue, but I am quite certain that there is a legitimate speculation. Indeed, all legitimate business is, in a measure, a speculation as to future events and conditions. When the speculation is legitimate the speculator must use legitimate knowledge and bring to bear legitimate influence for the success of a legitimate business venture. While all business is, in a measure, a risk, we will all agree that a man must only risk that which is his own. It is rather clear that what George Washington was talking about was that form of speculation where one speculates with public interests to aid his own private interests. It is in such a transaction that speculation becomes peculation. It seems to me that just here we touch the real disease which is in danger of becoming epidemic among our public officials at Washington. A high official position at Washington, in congress, the cabinet or some of its important bureaus gives a man certain inside knowledge and avenues of influence not in possession of the general public. It is certainly a great temptation to take this knowledge and influence and trade with it for private gain. Men of large business affairs have been quick to see the monetary value of these men to their enterprises. We need not use the crass and shocking term of bribery, and usually these business men do not use such rude methods. There are easier and more legitimate ways of doing business.

It is easy to fall into sweeping and indiscriminate criticisms here which would do injustice to many good people, yet we must face the situation which has already been thrust before us with ugly vividness. Washington certainly becomes a very attractive place for retiring government officials to do business. The question always is, to what extent does such a man sell his legitimate ability and experience, and how much of his monetary value that must be attributed to his political influence, gained as a public official?

Legislation and Public Opinion.

Of course there is always the temptation to attempt to solve difficulties by legislation. The suggestion has been made to bar former government officials from practicing before national courts—the forbidding of government representatives of all kinds from dealing in stock markets and other suggestions equally sweeping and indiscriminate. The objections to this type of legislation are to my mind apparent and overwhelming. The very enactment of such legislation would be a confession of such widespread weakness and corruption among public officials, as is utterly unwarranted. Men, offering for public responsibility, will hesitate to place themselves under such government espionage and the subjection of their legitimate freedom to such limitations.

While I believe that social conditions do arise which require restrictive legislation for the protection of the welfare of society, I am convinced that such legislation should always be a last resort. What we need most is the rearing of higher moral standards for public life, supported by an alert and vigorous public opinion. I have said in this column before that more shameful than the revelation of scandals connected with the oil leases is the moral revelation which has been made in the use of these scandals by our political leaders. If it is wrong to use the public interest for private financial gain, isn't it even worse to use this public shame for party political gain? It is the revelation of this low political standard which makes one fearful for the future.

Rapid Progress Made In Opening Mountains With New Highways

Editor Constitution: The Nacoochee-Hiawassee Scenic Highway association is planning to hold its annual meeting on June 2 next, and your attention is called to the fact that we will have important business before us at that time.

This meeting will celebrate the first anniversary of the organization and the second anniversary of The Constitution's government forest tour, which Mr. Hollomon personally conducted through northeast Georgia.

Concrete results in road construction and the betterment work, which continues now on important connecting roads and lateral links, will be pushed forward as fast as weather conditions will permit, and by the first of June there will be most encouraging progress for the complete system of mountain roads that our association is sponsoring.

We hope to broaden the scope of this work and get other mountain counties to join in this organized effort for general road construction and improvement in this region. Our plans and program will be perfected through the adoption of new projects when we meet in June. All mountain counties in Georgia should be sufficiently interested in this movement to take active part, for we hope that all Georgians will soon be given easy access to all parts of this great playground section within the borders of our own state. The south has no more beautiful region and we only need new and improved roads to make the attractions and advantages of this region available to all.

Project No. 1 of this highway association is a striking example of what can be done through the right kind of cooperation and effort. Splendid work has been accomplished here between Cleveland and Helen, in White county, and this link should be completely graded by early summer. The next link of this same project, between Helen and Hiawassee, crosses the mountain divide at Unicoi Gap on the line between White and Towns counties, and remarkable progress has been made on this link on the White county side of the mountain. As Towns county is setting the example of spending her money entirely on the White county side of the Unicoi Gap at this time, it is also most encouraging to know that for every dollar spent there is 100 cents of road construction to show for it. In fact, the total cost of the first one and one-half miles of this road construction has been so satisfactory and cheap that we can only account for this by giving due consideration to the spirit of cooperation and the personal interest that each local laborer has taken in the job.

Under the able supervision of Ed England, of Towns county, the Unicoi Gap road link is being graded at a cost not to exceed $1,000 per mile and with the 14-foot width and maximum grade of 6 per cent, this four-mile link will be completed this summer, thus eliminating the greatest barrier on our project No. 1 at a most satisfactory cost. We have no contractors on this job, and the only profits made are in county pride and patriotism.

The state highway department is doing a large part in making this cheap construction possible, for the tools and explosives given and the surveys made free of charge to us, come as investments for the entire state and are greatly appreciated. As soon as the weather opens up we hope to see the surveys begun on other projects that this association is sponsoring in Lumpkin, Union and Fannin counties for the forest roads that will open up the beautiful Toccoa Basin in the Cherokee National Forest.

With $65,000 now available from forest service and local sources we may hope to see the main barriers "knocked out" first of all on the three-way road connections in that locality.

It has been estimated that $25,000 spent on each of the two mountain passes—the Woody Gap and the Wolfpen Gap—and $15,000 spent on road betterment work and relocations along the Toccoa river, would make the entire government area in this part of Georgia accessable to motor travel at the earliest possible time with the funds now available.

Each of the counties of Lumpkin, Union and Fannin have allocated $5,000 from their operating fund and each will be matched at least 3 to 1 in this important work on forest roads. These three local counties are to be congratulated on their prompt action in this matter and the advantages to be gained are of equal value to all.

This association is only interested in holding the interest of all in the three-way road connections for opening up the Toccoa Basin, thus giving the shortest routes from the Carolinas, Georgia, Florida, Alabama and Tennessee, all at the same time, into this wonderful beauty spot of Nature. Neither of these connections will be complete without the other and this association feels that the wise distribution of the $65,000 now available will give all three of these local counties the same results and Georgia will thus offer to the south one of the best recreational areas in America on this national forest within 100 miles north of Atlanta.

Millennial Reform To Be Achieved By Dietetic Restriction

Editor Constitution: Hudson Maxim's fight on coffee and tea is not "all bosh," as you say. Tobacco and overating are not the only causes of these sudden deaths which are so very frequent in Atlanta lately. Coffee and tea do their full share of causing sudden deaths. Why do people have all these various diseases? A great many diseases are caused entirely from the use of coffee or tea. One cup of coffee and I develop "an awful cold" in about one day. One cup of tea and I feel as if I could "stand upon a rock and command the sun to stand still."

"Nine-tenths of all disease originate in the digestive tract," and if people had enough sense all disease could be eliminated.

What we call the devil is just the result of wrong physical habits, chiefly wrong eating and drinking.

Sickness and crime have the same origin. I am trying to bring about the millennium and would like to start it here in Atlanta. I can not see why someone has not thought it out long ago.

MRS. B. P. WARE.
Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 29, 1924.

Daffodil Time.

It is daffodil time in Georgia,
The yellow, nodding things,—
They seem to help the sunshine,
The flowers, the bird that sings.

They are so gay and golden,
So bonny and so bright,
Old Winter has been vanquished
By springtime's warmth and light.

When days were chill and dreary
And fetters held them bound,
They bloomed, divinely smiling

It is daffodil time in Georgia!
Let grudges have an end,
Sad memories be forgotten,—
Good cheer to you—my friend!

Weekly Bible Talks

Israel's First King

BY WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN

TEXT FOR TODAY'S BIBLE TALK BY MR. BRYAN.
(1 Samuel 15:13-23.)

And Samuel came to Saul: and Saul said unto him, Blessed be thou of the Lord: I have performed the commandment of the Lord.

And Samuel said, What meaneth then this bleating of the sheep in mine ears, and the lowing of the oxen which I hear?

And Saul said, They have brought them from the Amalekites: for the people spared the best of the sheep and of the oxen, to sacrifice unto the Lord thy God; and the rest we have utterly destroyed.

Then Samuel said unto Saul, Stay, and I will tell thee what the Lord hath said to me this night. And he said unto him, Say on.

And Samuel said, When thou wast little in thine own sight, wast thou not made the head of the tribes of Israel, and the Lord anointed thee king over Israel?

And the Lord sent thee on a journey, and said, Go and utterly destroy the sinners the Amalekites, and fight against them until they be consumed.

Wherefore then didst thou not obey the voice of the Lord, but didst fly upon the spoil, and didst evil in the sight of the Lord?

And Saul said unto Samuel, Yea, I have obeyed the voice of the Lord, and have gone the way which the Lord sent me, and have brought Agag the king of Amalek and have utterly destroyed the Amalekites.

But the people took of the spoil, sheep and oxen, the chief of the things which should have been utterly destroyed, to sacrifice unto the Lord thy God in Gilgal.

And Samuel said, Hath the Lord as great delight in burnt offerings and sacrifices, as in obeying the voice of the Lord? Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams.

For rebellion is as the sin of witchcraft, and stubbornness is as iniquity and idolatry. Because thou hast rejected the word of the Lord, he hath also rejected thee from being king.

The children of Israel clamored for a king.

"Then all the elders of Israel gathered themselves together, and came to Samuel unto Ramah.

"And said unto him, Behold, thou art old, and thy sons walk not in thy ways; now make us a king to judge us like all the nations."

It will be noticed that three reasons are given: The first was that Samuel was old, the second that his sons did not walk in their father's ways, and the third was that the children of Israel wanted to be like all the nations.

We are not able to estimate the relative weight of the three reasons. The first, however, could not have been the most important, because age is to be expected, and God had always raised up a new prophet and judge to take the place of the one who preceded him.

Samuel's Bad Sons.

The faults of Samuel's sons may have contributed materially to the dissatisfaction of the people; that a man so upright as Samuel should have had children so disobedient and so unsatisfactory was calculated to excite criticism. The partiality that led the father to continue them in spite of their misconduct may have aroused a fear that he would try to make one of them his successor. But it is probable that the third reason was most influential; it is the only one repeated after Samuel's warning.

They were a peculiar people, different from the nations about them. They relied for guidance upon an invisible God speaking through his prophets, while the nations around about had visible rulers who could lead them in battle and execute the laws, crude as they may have been. God told them through Samuel what a king would do, and it was as faithful a picture of the unlimited monarchy as was ever painted. It reads as follows:

The Way of Kings.

"And he said, This will be the manner of the king that shall reign over you: He will take your sons, and appoint them for himself, for his chariots, and to be his horsemen; and some shall run before his chariots.

"And he will appoint him captains over thousands, and captains over fifties; and will set them to ear his ground, and to reap his harvest, and to make his instruments of war, and instruments of his chariots.

"And he will take your daughters to be confectionaries, and to be cooks, and to be bakers.

"And he will take your fields, and your vineyards, and your oliveyards, even the best of them, and give them to his servants.

"And he will take the tenth of your seed, and of your vineyards, and give to his officers, and to his servants.

"And he will take your menservants, and your maidservants, and your goodliest young men, and your asses, and put them to his work.

"He will take the tenth of your sheep; and ye shall be his servants.

"And ye shall cry out in that day because of your king which ye shall have chosen you; and the Lord will not hear you in that day."

"They Have Rejected Me."

Instead of being frightened away from their desire by the warning of the Almighty, spoken through Solomon, the people refused to obey the voice of Samuel and said:

"Nay; but we will have a king over us; that we also may be like all the nations; and that our king may judge us, and go out before us, and fight our battles."

Samuel was very much displeased, but God said unto him, "They have not rejected thee, but they have rejected me." But the Lord told Samuel to hearken unto their voice and make them a king.

God let them have their own way. Here we have the doctrine of free will very clearly stated.

A God, all-wise, all-powerful and all-loving designed the world, and as God is infinitely wiser, stronger and more loving than man, he made the world on a plan infinitely better than any that man could have devised. He made man the commander-in-chief of all that is, and asked in return nothing but obedience to laws made by a loving Heavenly Father for man's good—laws that link man's happiness to his virtue and his prosperity to his righteousness—laws which, when obeyed, enable him to rise up and live upon the exalted plane to which He calls all his children.

What God Might Have Done.

But man is not compelled to obey these laws. If he were compelled to obey them, he would not be free.

Man might have been made perfect like the birds and the beasts—which live up to their possibilities. The birds are free from fault; they do all the work that is assigned to them. And so with the beasts. The horse is one hundred per cent useful; the cow is as serviceable as a cow can be, and the pigs do their best. God might have put man in the same class and exacted from man the same obedience that He exacts from all other animate things.

But he did not. He made man "a little lower than the angels" and "crowned him with glory and honor." Man could not rise voluntarily without the power to fall; which freedom to worship God carried with it freedom to deny Him.

Man's Power of Choice.

Rewards and punishments, blessings and cursings were set before man; he is allowed to choose the good with the rewards that are indissolubly joined to it, just as he may choose the wrong with the punishments that go with wrong doing.

Duty and reward, disobedience and punishment—these go in pairs. When a person chooses one he necessarily chooses the other, just as one chooses to be burned when he chooses to put his hand into the fire.

Some who have an excess of egotism—a superheated conceit—rebel against God's plan and imagine that they could have made a better world, or devised better laws for running it—a world in which one could revel at night without a headache in the morning—but they are powerless to change God's plan.

A Modest Youth Goes Wrong.

Samuel, obedient to the will of God, proceeded to select Saul as king. He was a modest youth, of fine appearance, and began well, but in spite of constant advice from Samuel, he went wrong. Authority was too much for him: "It went to his head," as the saying goes, and he proceeded to show how easily a ruler can be corrupted by power.

After Saul had led the people in a successful campaign Samuel called Israel together and had Saul's selection confirmed by a plebecite. Then Samuel delivered a wonderful farewell address, which has been a model for retiring officers, although not all of them have been able to secure such a unanimous approval of their public service.

The lesson text deals with an incident in the life of Saul which may seem very trivial in the eyes of critics, but shows in a very emphatic way how stern are God's requirements.

Saul Disobeys God.

Saul waged war against the Amalekites. He was told to fight against them until they were consumed. Instead of obeying the letter of the law, he undertook to construe it according to his own purposes and plans.

He saved King Agag of the Amalekites. It could not have been out of any sympathy for Agag; it may have been pride; he may have wanted to exhibit him in triumph to the children of Israel chained in the rear of a triumphal procession. Saul also saved some of the spoil, sheep and oxen.

Saul's Hypocritical Excuse.

He had been lifted from obscurity to prominence. He had done nothing himself to win the great distinction that God had bestowed upon him, but instead of being content to do what he was told, he did as man is quite prone to do—he substituted his own judgment for the judgment of his commander-in-chief.

He did worse; he attempted to justify himself. He even offered a hypocritical excuse, saying that the people took of the spoil, sheep and oxen, the chief of the things which should have been destroyed, to sacrifice unto Jehovah. Then follows a rebuke that stands out as one of the gravest in the Old Testament.

The whole record of God's dealing with the children of Israel, a chosen people, is instructive. It sets forth in the light, and graphically describes, God's dealing with His children. His law is the same today; His rewards and His punishments are the same, as severe and as sure as they were in the days of old.

"To Obey Is Better Than Sacrifice."

But today we do the interpreting ourselves, and we do not always interpret them aright, or draw from them the lessons they are intended to teach. Hence, the value of this photograph of God's government and God's court.

It would be inspiring if we had a perfect portrait of the great prophet as he stood before Israel's king and hurled in his face the divine judgment that he was commanded to deliver: "Hath the Lord as great delight in burnt offerings and sacrifices, as in obeying the voice of the Lord? Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams."

God's laws are from everlasting unto everlasting. His plan is an unchangeable plan; obedience is the key that unlocks the Beatitudes and permits man to enter into the heaven above and into the heaven that will come on earth when His will is done here as it is done in heaven.

The Sin of Stubbornness.

The truth that Samuel utttered was so important that he phrased it in still another sentence: "For rebellion is as the sin of witchcraft, and stubbornness is as iniquity and idolatry." No excuse could be offered; the sin was deliberate and the sinner unrepentant. Then follows the decree: "Thou hast rejected the word of the Lord, and the Lord hath rejected thee from being king over Israel."

Few lessons are more practical. Every human being at every age in life should take to heart the words of Samuel to Saul, because in every heart is the tendency to sin.

Pride, against which Christ so often and so earnestly warned his disciples and the multitudes, is always lurking near. Humility is one of the greatest of the virtues and one of the most difficult to cultivate. Some one has said that when one becomes humble he must be on his guard lest he become proud of his humility.

Temptation to Pride.

In proportion as one acts in a representative capacity, and serves in a large way, just in that proportion is the temptation to pride increased.

The Christian's strength is not in himself; it comes from above in answer to prayer; too often the source is forgotten and one becomes boastful of borrowed power, as if it were his own.

Beginning with the consciousness of weakness that inspires petitions for strength one is apt to become forgetful and treat the gifts of the Heavenly Father as if they came from and were a part of himself. Obedience to God and to the heavenly vision is our duty and should be our greatest pleasure.

Southern Negro Scientist Contributes One of the "Lost Arts" to Civilizaion

Photograph by Mathewson & Price, Staff Photographers.

There are four or five lost arts in the world. One of them is the composition of the Greek fire which burned under water and which consumed the Persian armada that came to subdue the Greek empire of the early centuries.

Another lost art is a certain molding of copper which the ancients possessed and that was lost to civilization during the dark ages, when war and pestilence came near wiping out the last vestige of culture and art. Centuries have elapsed but no recovery of these lost arts has been reported.

One of the lost arts has been recovered in the United States. It is the process of making paints from natural products and the establishment of their superiority over all artificial coloring. This contribution to the world's civilization belongs to Prof. George Carver, of Tuskegee institute, an aged negro, who is at the present time giving an exhibition in the Healey building in Atlanta.

Born in Slavery.

Professor Carver was born in slavery and spent his youth in abject poverty. During years of patient observation in which he had to combat ridicule and objection on the part of legitimate scientists, he conceived the idea of extracting colors from the soil.

In his life the historical process of Phidias, the great painter of antiquity, was repeated. He also went back to nature for his color schemes and astounded posterity with the freshness and brilliance of his work.

The remarkable fact about Professor Carver's discoveries is not the curiosity that his paints are extracted from decayed vegetable matter, from peanuts and sweet potatoes, but the astounding revelation lies in the hues and colors obtained in that process.

Look at the paintings of the early Flemish schools. Think of Rembrandt's masterpieces and the works of Rubens or even the later Spanish and Italian schools. The glory of Rembrandt was in his genius to play with light in such a manner that it contrasted in sombre brilliance with the darker shades of the painting. It is a matter of historical record that the "Night Watch," Rembrandt's greatest creation, which hangs in the Rijks museum, at Amsterdam, was condemned by his patrons because it did not bring into brilliant relief the gorgeous costumes of his subjects.

Color Qualities.

One glance at Professor Carver's wondrous assortment of paints reveals that quality in the assortment of colors which was the object of the Dutch school.

Instead of a superimposed glow Professor Carver's colors have a depth of brilliance that lies not on the surface. That is a possessive quality of his mixtures.

Rembrandt would have selected these colors. But the process of extracting shades and hues from the earth was lost even in his day. He had to content himself with the laborious task of putting the glow into his masterpieces with the addition of oils.

Oil is no longer necessary when Professor Carver's discoveries are used. They have that particular hue in their natural composition.

Reestablishes Maxim.

Professor Carver has re-established that maxim of the ancient Romans: "Natura Artis Magistra" (nature is the mistress of all art).

The earth is richer than man's imagination. Nature is more brilliant than the greatest conceptions of mankind. In that lies the importance of his discoveries.

The commercial possibilties of Professor Carver's work are obvious. Georgia has the geological deposits from which paints may be manufactured in enormous quantities. Like the colors of antiquity they will need no retouching with varnish or veneer to retain their freshness. It is inherent in their composition.

Inquiries from foreign countries, especially England and Holland, have reached Professor Carver. The greatness of his discovery is recognized in other parts of the world.

Nature has given Georgia many advantages over other territories. None, however, compares with Carver's discoveries in the realm of decorative art

Musical Lily Out of the Muck

Jazz Dons the Purple!

BY O. O. McINTYRE.

It has been a long climb for jazz to reach the perfumed purlieus of Aeolian hall from the saw-dusted, coated honky tonk of the Barbary Coast, but Paul Whiteman has landed it there with a fashionable fine feathered audience in attendance and a list of patrons and patronesses, according to the program, including Mmes. Frances Alda, Amelita Galli-Curci, Mary Garden, Alma Gluck, Walter Damrosch, Jascha Heifetz, Victor Herbert, Otto H. Kahn, John McCormack, Leopold Stokowsky, Sergei Rachmaninoff, Joseph Stransky and, oh, yes, a guy by the name of O. O. McIntyre.

Whiteman showed one of the most brilliant audiences that perhaps New York has ever seen that what people dislike about jazz is the brothel opprobrium of the name and that jazz is in reality of symphonic worth. He gave the recital as an experiment and such was the enthusiastic response that he repeated it to an overflowing hall, and it is more than likely that before many moons Whiteman will be touring the country in concert just to prove that those who come to laugh at jazz will remain to cry for more.

The history of jazz is one of the most interesting phases of modern American life. It is a music that just grew—like Topsy. About twelve years ago a jazz band consisted of a cornet, trombone, clarinet, piano and drum. These perfectly legitimate instruments were in bad company. They were played amid the din of anvils, buckets, kettles, cowbells and other hardware for soggy denizens of boozeries.

In reality it was a musical lily lifting its head in the muck. Today its jouncing rhythm has settled down to a steady, rocking, sometimes whimsical metre. The vulgarities have been subdued and embellished. And credit is due Whiteman for blazing the trail.

Paul Whiteman came from a musical family—but he became a roving blacksheep. He was a taxicab driver in Los Angeles when the war came and he joined the navy and formed an orchestra. He has been the leading spirit in lifting jazz to a higher plane. As a result he makes a salary bigger than the president. He is still a huge lumbering, bashful boy who doesn't seem at all sure of himself until he conducts. Then you can see what music means to him.

American composers have never been encouraged. Whiteman has proved that out of jazz has been evolved an American school which will equal those of foreign origin or which may at least provide a stepping stone which will make it very simple for the masses to understand, and therefore enjoy, symphony and opera.

He did some amazing tricks with jazz. He showed that when Handel wrote the "Messiah" he must have had an appetite for bananas. Little did he imagine that portions of his "hallelujah" chorus would develop into a vehicle for the sale of a fruit of which there was, for a short time, a rather scanty supply. The tremendous popularity of the banana song, Whiteman proved, was due to Handel.

Kill the Name.

One of the things Whiteman is trying to accomplish will not meet with success. He is trying to kill the name Jazz. His contention is that most people who ridicule the present jazz and who refuse to condone it or listen to it seriously, are quarreling with the name Jazz and not with what it represents. This may be true—but modern American music will always be called Jazz.

As one who knows nothing of music but knows what he likes—I'm for the name Jazz. It is succinct, expressive and typically American. I know a lot of men who have made the name Jack, Bill and even Mike creakingly dignified. The same can be done for Jazz.

There is no reason why a song called 'Mama Loves Papa" should be a disgrace. Personally, I think it is more American than some high sounding nomenclature that means nothing.

Whiteman took such standard selections as "Pale Moon," "To a Wild Rose" and "Chaasonette" and adapted them to dance rhythm. He took such popular melodies as "Alexander's Ragtime Band," "A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody" and "Orange Blossoms in California" and gave them a semi-symphonic arrangement that brought down the house. That is progress—but it is still jazz and jazz it will remain.

There must be humor in our American music as well as in the other arts. A lot of credit is due those ebullient young composers of Tin Pan Alley at whom we lightly scoff for the jazz rum-tum-tiddy.

They have caught the spirit of this young and restless age as it has not been done in our literature and in our canvases. At the concert, for instance, Zez Confrey himself played his own composition, "Kitten on the Keys." He began with doleful meows and choppy musical figures. You could hear "puss" jumping up and down on the same spot for four or five bars. Suddenly she dashes up the keyboard—hesitates, turns about and scampers for the other end of the piano. That is human—and also, it strikes me, true art.

Then there was young George Gershwin, one of the Tin Pan Alley pounders. He played his own composition called "A Rhapsody in Blue" out of materials known to him—the rhythms of popular American music and the harmonies produced by American jazz bands. The audience sat as enthralled as it would at the heaviest score played by a symphony orchestra.

Herbert and Jazz.

Even the estimable Victor Herbert bowed to jazz and wrote his first compositions for Whiteman's jazz orchestra. He declared to me that his experiment into a hitherto unknown field was a novel one. "Here I have had to remember that to the same player may be allotted three instruments, which he must have his chance to change. I might wish at a given moment the plaintive voice of the oboe, but just at that moment the gentleman who should play the oboe is busy with the bass clarinet. I have respected the rules of the game. I might say of his suite of serenades I arranged, in the words of the seventh century nun, that "even if other people do not like it, it pleases me because it is I who did it."

Mr. Herbert is one of the most versatile of American composers. He does not bow to any especial line. Not so long ago he led the orchestra at a moving picture theater. He is no stranger to the Metropolitan and he is the fashioner of many of our popular musical comedies. He may have a number or two in the Follies and lead the orchestra the first night.

He will be of great value to the ingenious Paul Whiteman in bringing a technical mastery to jazz.

The musical critics were very encouraging in their reviews of the Whiteman concert. They treated it quite seriously, which is as it should be. We have been importing orchestras and conductors whose effulgence is quite overshadowed by this American product, and Whiteman is keeping his head. He knows he is running against stern barriers. He does not deride or grow angry. He appears anxious to convince that he is doing much toward giving good, modern music a stimulus by a graduating process

He has a keen sense of variation, of shifting accents and of emphasis and color. That is due largely to his musical training, of course, but it is due in no small measure to his knowledge of people. He studies them and he reflects their moods in the wave of his baton.

He is not influenced by any foreign school. He is developing his own ideas and this chronicler will be for him so long as he does not try to delete the word jazz from our language. Jazz, just as Whiteman's idea, has come to stay.

And may each live long and prosper.

Things New and Old About the Bible

Guides for Biblical Interpretation

BY REV. W. P. KING,
Pastor First Methodist Church, Gainesville, Ga.

We are to interpret the Bible with the realization of the progressiveness of revelation. There is the reasonable protest against associating in the old way the imperfect morality of some parts of the Old Testament with the highest religion. The protest was delayed by the habit of spiritualizing passages when they conflicted with Christian teaching, reading mystic meaning into details, and evading difficulties with some slight-of-hand performance. The Christian conscience condemns some things which the Old Testament approves.

Unless we are to play fast and loose with the natural meaning of the word, the ethical standard of our day demands that the traditional view of Scripture be modified. This moral difficulty disappears when we recognize the fact of development, which of course implies that we do not put all Scripture on the same level of authority. With the doctrine of a level Bible all portions of which are of equal authority, we are unable to condemn slavery and polygamy. Jesus himself as authority for the progressiveness of the revelation.

We are to interpret the Bible from the viewpoint of God the Father as the central fact of Revelation. The one thing of primary importance is a right conception of God. It is not your particular theory of inspiration, but your idea of God that is essential.

Primacy of Spirit.

The Bible should be interpreted with the realization of the primacy of the Spirit of God and religious experience. Life comes before literature. Primarily the Bible grew out of religion and not religion out of the Bible. Religion made the Bible and not the Bible religion.

Religon comes before theology or interpretations of religion. People were saved before the Bible was written or before they knew about the Bible.

The Bible should be interpreted according to its purpose. It is an injustice to deal otherwise with any book. Much of the present theological confusion results from ignoring the principle. Some churchmen used to be constantly reminded that it is not the purpose of the Bible to teach modern science

We should interpret the Bible with a knowledge of its historical setting. Each writer was first of all addressing his own generation. An inspired message to our generation is applicable to all generations.

The Bible is to be interpreted with a recognition of the plastic use of language. Some interpreters with a hard and fast logical method fall into numberless absurdities. They turn poetry into prose and myths and legends and parables into history.

Has Suffered Much.

There should be sincerity of mind in interpreting the Bible with no feeling of obligation to make a forced reconciliation. The Bible has suffered much in the house of its friends. It has been subjected to torturing manipulation in the effort to make all incidental statements harmonize Men have exercised pious fraud on the Book that teaches us to be truthful

In interpreting the Bible, we are to discard the fable of verbal dictation and literal inrancy. This is a medieval ghost that haunts the minds of many good people.

We are to interpret the Bible with the assurance that the revelation of the perfect revelation is still going on. The guidance of the promised Spirit is bringing us nearer to the truth of God. We are coming into a clearer understanding of God's fatherhood and his moral purpose in the world.

We are to interpret the Bible with the realization that the theory of the compilation of different documents is a question to be passed on by scholarship. The essential elements of revelation are in no way involved.

We are to interpret the Bible with the understanding that there are open questions of authorship. Whether there are one or two authors of Isaiah does not impair the moral and spiritual value of the truth proclaimed.

In interpreting the Bible we are to avoid like a pestilence the old doctrine "false in one false in all." This is to keep the mind of the church in a state of constant panic. It is to weaken the foundation of the faith.

The Bible is to be interpreted with the recognition that the reality of any historical event does not depend on an inerrant account of the event. This is to make all history impossible.

Proof Demanded.

In the interpretation of the Bible we are to avoid the contention for the historical certainty of a narrative when the evidence is insufficient. The modern mind demands proof. There is not the same evidence for the origin of the different languages in the confusion of tongues at Babel as for the missionary travels of St. Paul in Europe.

In the interpretation of scripture we are to recognize the difference between fact and truth. A parable or fiction is not fact and yet it may teach the most profound truth.

We are to interpret the Bible with a correct understanding of the mission and message of the prophets.

The purpose of the Bible is in no way more perverted than in the fanciful exegesis of the message of the prophets. They are made to play a role which they never intended to assume. They are made to draw grotesque pictures of the future, while the great moral and spiritual lessons of that message are overlooked. The ancient prophecies are wrenched into forecasts of the second coming of Jesus, when the inference could only have had to do with his first coming.

We are to interpret the Bible with the faith that all ideas and doctrines must meet the test of the perfect revelation of Jesus Christ. The effort to put all the contents of the primitive revelation on a level with Christ is to deny His religious authority. The defenders of an equally authoritative Bible make too little of Christ.

Dr. Benjamin W. Bacon writes: "As in all previous ages of the church there are conservative masses who regard it as a sacrilege that the Holy Book should be subjected to critical analysis. . . . However, the best, the most scientific, the most searching methods available will continue to be applied to these records of God's spiritual creation, because men in search of God are determined to learn more and more of the evolution of spiritual life.

The Bible cannot suffer from any method of real study, any more than the sunbeam suffers when the spectroscope resolves it into its component rays.

There abides the influence of the example of Jesus himself who opposed the traditional conservatism of Biblical interpretation. His interpretation for example of the meaning of the Sabbath, was in direct opposition to the religious leaders in that He put the need of man above the Sabbath. In the sermon on the mount He clearly asserts the imperfection and insufficiency of ethical standards in the Old Testament. The interpretation of Jesus was "not of the letter that kills, but of the spirit that gives life." The disciples exclaimed as they recalled His interpretation of the law and prophets and psalms: "Did not our hearts burn within us while He opened to us the scriptures."

The Man Behind the Gun

IF you could buy an automobile that would ride easier, drive easier, steer easier, last longer; whose upkeep was less, whose brakes were safe and everybody said was a good car, you would feel as though you had made a safe investment in transportation, would you not?

THIS is just what we offer you in the REO—a car that has been on the market for twenty years, that has always been made by an independent company and is still the handiwork of its six founders, embodying in its staunch construction the ideals of its founders to build a motor car just as good as they knew how.

Speaking of independent companies, did it ever occur to you how many automobile factories were controlled by Wall Street? Do you think a man in Wall Street can build an automobile as well as the man behind the gun at the factory—especially if the man at the factory controls that factory?

Everybody knows that most factories have brought out unsatisfactory models or "lemons" from time to time. Many such models were built and sold against the better judgment of practical factory men, but Wall Street demanded a new model—a best seller—and at a price that would enable factory production figures to mount to unheard-of figures. Many an automobile buyer has paid dearly for such policies.

REO policy is refreshingly different. It has always been a good car, and we say without hesitation "REO IS A BETTER CAR." We have sold and serviced many makes of cars, but none in which we have had more confidence than the REO line.

Let us demonstrate the REO to you and explain its construction. We are sure you will then understand why we are so enthusiastic about its merits.

WARNER'S SEVEN ACES IN HOWARD PROLOGUE

The Feature Picture Is "Pied Piper Malone," With Tom Meighan.

Booth Tarkington's done it—written an original story for the screen—and for Thomas Meighan at that. It's "Pied Piper Malone" which will open at the Howard Monday. It's a comedy drama with the star in the role of Jack Malone, third mate of the S. S. Langland, Captain Clarke in command, George Fawcett plays the captain. Malone is a regular "Pied Piper" to all the kiddies in town. He is "Uncle Jack" to all. In this cast there's not a girl in every port, only in Oldport, Jack's home town, and that's Patty Thomas, the mayor's daughter. Lois Wilson has this part. Charlie Crosby (Cyril Ring), second officer of the Langland, has always claimed Patty as his girl. There is great rivalry between the two men.

Malone is unjustly accused of the responsibility for the loss of the Langland while under the influence of liquor when on duty. Only his parents, Patty and the children, believe in him. In the working out of his problem and the setting to rights his score with the villain and the love story with Lois Wilson—"Pied Piper Malone" reaches great heights of drama and Thomas Meighan again scores a distinct knockout in his latest picture.

An interesting feature concerning the filming of this picture happened in Georgetown, S. C., where many scenes were filmed. The entire company joined in a benefit performance for the poor children of the town which netted $600. Mr. Meighan and other members of the company made contributions, the balance coming from the townfolk, who paid to see the performance. The funds were used for milk and clothing for the poor children of the community.

Warner's Seven Aces, Atlanta's premier jazz band, will be presented at the Howard all week. The Seven Aces are all Atlanta boys and are known for miles and miles around Atlanta. In their presentation a saxaphone sextette will be featured as will Miss Lillian O'Neil, Oriental dancer. The numbers to be played by the Aces will feature the most recent of Broadway hits and also a song number by the entire orchestra, making a novelty singing jazz orchestra. The saxaphone sextette is a new addition to the orchestra and is a feature in itself.

The overture for the week is "The Only Girl," by the Howard Concert orchestra, Enrico Leide conducting.

"Monks a la Mole" is the comedy screened to the tune of "Monkey Doodle." In this comedy you will see the cleverest monkey on the screen.

Perry Bremer, the Howard solo cornetist, will offer a cornet solo, "The Charmer" and "Duna."

The latest Out of the Ink Well comedy entitled, "Balloons" will also be shown.

Almost every nation and province in the entire world is represented by a contingent of its natives in the United States navy. Among the 82,355 enlisted men in the navy, 74,738 were found to be native born Americans, while 7617 are foreign born.

SEENA OWENS STARS AT THE METROPOLITAN

"Unseeing Eyes," Story of the Great Outdoors Life, All Week.

The Canadian Rockies form the picturesque background of "Unseeing Eyes." The film, an adaptation of an Arthur Stringer story, is chock full of action, which reaches its climax in an airplane pursuit. It differs from other photoplays of the great outdoors in its careful direction and beautiful and effective staging. The pictures of the mountains lend a grandeur and impressiveness that assist immeasurably in the unfolding of the story.

The scenario was prepared by Bayard Veiller; it was directed by E. H. Griffith. Joseph Urban, noted scenic artist, made the settings.

The cast is a splendid one in every respect. Lionel Barrymore, who always adds distinction to any picture in which he appears, is featured in the leading role. Playing opposite him is Segna Owen, who is charming in the role of Miriam. Others in the cast are Louis Wolheim, a most picturesque and efficient villain; Gustav von Seyffertitz, Walter Miller, Charles Beyer, Helen Lindroth, Jack Johnston, Louis Deer, Frances Red Eagle, Paul Panzer and Dan Red Eagle.

"Unseeing Eyes" is produced on a magnificent scale that stirs the spectator. The snow scenes of the northwest are alone worth going miles to see. The hills, evergreens, the open spaces are all thoroughly impressive in their beauty.

The story of Miriam Helston and Conrad Dean and their airplane flight across Canada to rescue her brother from a band of cutthroats, the subsequent perils which overtakes them in the heavy snows of the northwest, their struggle to reach the brother and the thrilling complications that result make the picture a stirring tale of adventure and romance. "Unseeing Eyes" is a production of unusual appeal, both scenically and dramatically.

The 'Rainbow Band" with Calvin Rolfe is being held over for a second week following their sensational success of last week and Conductor Risinger will take advantage of this opportunity to present the great "Tannhauser Overture," with the Rainbow artists augmenting the Metropolitan Symphony orchestra, Calvin Rolfe and his organization are equally competent in standard as well as modern dance music and the combined instrumentation of the two orchestras under Mr. Risinger's baton promises a rare treat to Atlanta music lovers. The musical specialty in which the Rainbow orchestra appears this week is a very novel one. It will open with a new idea in theater presentation centered around the new waltz sensation, "Sleep," and will use the Ampico player piano as part of the presentation. Other offerings will be "Linger Awhile," "Shake Your Feet," from the new Ziegfeld Follies, with a dance interpretation by Marian Robertson, who proved so popular with last week's audiences, and a very unique and original "Rainbow" arrangement of "Sobbin' Blues."

In the feature Mr. Risinger will use several numbers from "It Happened in Nordland" and some colorful numbers by Greig and Goldmark. Literary Digest's "Fun From the Press" will be accompanied by an orchestra rendition of "West Indies Blues."

'THE UNINVITED GUEST' IS LOEW'S PHOTOPLAY

A Story of Deep Sea Romance and Two-Fisted Action.

With a story that fairly breathes deep sea romance through every reel of its two-fisted action, and with the injection of the Technicolor scenes that bring out the natural and vivid hues under water, "The Uninvited Guest," coming to Loew's Grand theater as the feature screen attraction all next week, introduces something wholly unsurpassed in submarine productions.

The dramatic highlights of the picture come in the submarine scenes themselves, while the story is melodramatic to a pleasing degree. Sharks, their ugly noses pointed menacingly at the camera's eye, are shown in their natural deep sea habitat, and octopuses reach out their long tentacles eage to close in their unyielding embrace the cameraman, protected by the iron walls of his diving bell.

It is sort of uncanny—these scenes made so many fathoms from the sky and air in the very heart itself of mysteries of the ocean's bottom.

The story has to do with the fortunes of a young girl, cast away on an island together with two professional gamblers, one of them a woman. A ne'er-do-well sponge diver rescues her from the island after the gamblers have deserted her, fights his brutish partner to protect her and later helps her to establish her identity when the gambler's wife impersonates her.

It has for its setting the tropical seas which at once suggest romance. The island scenes are consistently interesting.

The picture brings to the screen a new face, Jean Trolley, who, in addition to offering a very creditable demonstration of histrionical ability, especially in view of her first effort, is distinctly easy to look at and her lithe athletic grace makes her the ideal type for the part.

For Doors That Stick.

If you would avoid in your home the nuisance of doors that stick in moist weather, paint or varnish the tops and bottoms—places that are usually neglected because they don't show. These hidden edges, if not painted, are vulnerable points where the wood absorbs or loses moisture rapidly, says Popular Science Monthly for March. Especial danger points are the ends of the outside uprights where the wood grain is exposed.

But regardless the enormous expense it is in keeping with the policy of the Howard to give to the people of Atlanta the best talent available.

Whiteman's Orchestra will play at the Howard the week of March 10, in conjunction with "The Stranger."

'SINGER JIM M'KEE' TO PLAY AT RIALTO

William S. Hart, in "Singer Jim McKee," is the kind of a picture that has given to Hart his wonderful popularity, produced in the Majestic Sierra mountains.

Are there still new trails to be blazed in the western photodrama? William S. Hart says there are. In an interview he states he believes there is a rich vein of western romance which has been untouched, a vein of glittering wealth which will open a virgin field of drama. He says:

"The popular conception of a western picture is one in which the chief element of thrill is hard riding, expert roping and flashing gun-play. These things all have their places, but there is a deeper wealth of drama that is less generally known. The cowboy of the ranges will always be popular, and rightly, for he was a romantic figure. But back beyond the ranges, in the mountains, there is another type of westerner, a type that lives today.

"It is this type that I want to bring to the public in this, my latest picture, 'Singer Jim McKee.' I want to show that all the romance and drama of the old west has not passed with the coming of fences and irrigation ditches to the ranges. I want to show that back in the mountains there remains a west that reflects all the color of the old frontier, perhaps less gun-play and surface glamour, but nevertheless, a west of tense, swift drama, where thrilling things may happen.

"In 'Wild Bill Hickok,' I pictured the old-time westerner of history, but in this, my latest picture, I portray the modern westerner, who still lives in the wide open spaces and moves in an element of romance."

There are loads of thrills in "Singer Jim McKee," but "the play's the thing."

Star—author—producer — William S. Hart.

Support—Phyllis Haver, leading woman, Gordon Russell, Bert Sprotte, Ruth Miller, Edward Coxen, William Dyer, George Siegmann and Baby Turner.

Type of Story—Romantic western thriller—great heart-appeal.

Plot—Singer Jim McKee and his partner, Buck Holden, have a 3-year old motherless girl whom both men try to take care of. They go broke. Things get desperate. They hold up the stage to get money. Buck is killed by the cowardly sheriff, Glass. "Singer" escapes with the baby.

Fifteen years later "Singer" is a miner in the Sonora district. Mary, grown into a beautiful woman, keeps house for her "uncle." Glass is now president of the bank at Stockton. To get clothes for Mary, "Singer" holds up an auto, his crime being traced by the serial number on the stolen money.

Released from prison, Jim goes into the mountains. Glass, about to die, confesses to having shot Holden, clearing "Singer."

He and Mary are reunited.

Reginald Denny will be on hand in one of the Leather Pushers, this being the third of the third series and entitled "Dan Coyete." International News and Views of the day will also be shown.

Two Fine Pictures At Paramount Theater This Week for Colored

Marion Davies will have a role entirely different from anything in which she has heretofore appeared and one exactly suited to her appealing personality when she appears as Patricia O'Day in "Little Old New York" at the Paramount theater on Monday for three days. The roguish, mischievous traits of Princess Mary Tudor, played by Miss Davies in "When Knighthood Was in Flower," are found in little Patricia, but there is also a quality of wistful pathos which shows a new side of Miss Davies' dramatic ability. The role of Patricia has something of the character of Maude Adams' "Peter Pan" or of "Little Lord Fauntleroy" about it. Miss Davies appears most of the time as a young boy, having donned this disguise in order to inherit a fortune.

One of the most dramatic scenes in the picture and one which gives Miss Davies a wonderful opportunity for expressing emotion is on shipboard when Patricia's brother is buried at sea. The star spent several days and nights on the ocean in an old-fashioned schooner while these scenes were being made. It is a wonderful picture.

"Name the Man!", the first Victor Seastrom production since that director came to the Goldwyn studios from Sweden, opens next Thursday at the Paramount theater.

Included in the cast are Conrad Nagel, Mae Busch, Patsy Ruth Miller, Hobart Bosworth, Creighton Hale, DeWitt C. Jennings, Evelyn Selbie and many other well-known players.

The story was adapted to the screen by Paul Bern, from the novel entitled, "The Master of Man," by Sir Hall Caine, and was Victor Seastrom's first production under a contract the Swedish director signed with the Goldwyn studios.

The entire story is set on the Isle of Man, and deals with the youthful Deemster, or judge of the island, and the trial of the girl whom he has wronged for the murder of her child.

The picture is declared one of the most dramatic and emotional ever filmed, and in it Miss Busch and Mr. Nagel rise to their greatest emotional heights.

"ENEMIES OF WOMEN" IS ALAMO 2 PICTURE

That the picturization of his latest story, "The Enemies of Women," made by Cosmopolitan Productions, is a magnificent photoplay following closely his famous story, is the opinion voiced by Blasco Ibanez in a letter sent to Cosmopolitan Productions.

"Lionel Barrymore and Alma Rubens come as the stars," he writes, "and I found the whole company very good. All the actors, even to those playing minor roles, worked with enthusiasm, and Allan Crosland, the director, is a very intelligent young man who knows his work well. I think we have produced a masterpiece and one which will please the public."

"For a whole week I abandoned my literary work to live the life of a film actor. I got up at 5 o'clock each morning and at 6 o'clock was at Monte Carlo, where I stayed with the company until night, always beside the director to help him with his work. I put him in touch with people who have lived more than thirty years on the Cote d'Asur and who know all the picturesque spots, even those which are most mysterious and unknown to outsiders. I arranged with the ministers who constitute the government of the principality of Monaco and they gave me permission to make scenes of the prince's palace where the historic cannons are, and also in the prince's gardens from which there is a magnificent panorama of the sea. It is the first time that the government of Monaco has given any such permission."

"Altogether, I did everything that I could, and I am sure that the film will be a magnificent reproduction of the Cote d'Azur."

"The Enemies of Women" will be shown at Alamo No. 2 on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Lionel Barrymore and Alma Rubens are the featured players, while other important roles are looked after by Garteh Hughes, Gladys Hulette, Willie Collier, Jr., Pedro de Cordoba and W. H. Thompson.

Kingsmore Brings Whiteman's Orchestra To Howard Theater

Howard Price Kingsmore, director of the Howard theater, announced Saturday that after several months' unsuccessful effort he had at last booked Paul Whiteman's famous Collegian orchestra. This orchestra is the second most famous orchestra in the world, being second only to Paul Whiteman's Palaise Royal orchestra, now playing in Ney York city.

The Collegian orchestra is the orchestra that took London by storm. It is the orchestra that played for all the crowned heads of Europe and was the toast of the whole European continent.

Most everyone has heard this famous orchestra on the phonograph, for they have made records for nearly every make of record and machine.

In bringing this orchestra to Atlanta Mr. Kingsmore said that it was the most expensive attraction that had ever played the Howard theater.

"Spices of 1923" To be Featured By Pretty Girls

Hilarious Comedy Satire at Atlanta Theater for a Full Week.

Gorgeous in its scenic investiture, hilarious in its comedy, keen in its satire, "Spice of 1923," the sensationally successful revue which occupied the boards of the New York Winter Garden and startled Broadway with its magnitude and magnificence, will be offered at the Atlanta theater for the week beginning tomorrow night with matinees Wednesday and Saturday. It is now presented by Edward L. Bloom and sets a high mark for future production effort. Mr. Bloom is general manager of the New York Winter Garden company.

A large company, including a specially trained chorus, is necessary for the big production which is on a scale seldom seen outside of the largest of the New York theaters. The principals include practically the entire original company and the scenic investiture which will be staged here is the original, calling for the services of a small army of stage mechanics.

Musical comedy favorites and vaudeville headliners such as Georgie Price, Alice Ridnor, Sam Hearn head the cast, which also includes such well-known peoples as Demidoff and Gansakourdia, Betty McGowan, Patricia Abell, Mammy Jinny, Dolores Suarez, Eddie Fox and Maris Chaney. The chorus is particularly attractive. It is a well-known fact that they had much to do with the original success of the production at the Winter Garden. The Castle House orchestra is also prominently featured.

Jack Lait, who wrote the book and lyrics of "Spice," is the famous author, playwright, newspaperman, war correspondent, critic et al, and he has written a profusion of clever lines and skits that make this offering stand out for its satire and humor, to say nothing of the topical sallies.

The entire production of "Spice"—book, music, lyrics, costumes, scenery, dancing and staging—is of a Tiffany luster and moves at the highest possible speed. No scene lasts more than three or four minutes, and there is no "stalling" between scenes, of which there are thirty-two in "Spice."

Although it is American in its speed and pep, "Spice" has a Frenchy atmosphere of color and design. It seemingly was the object of the pro-

"BLOSSOM TIME" COMING.

Proving again its indubitable right to the slogan "the musical comedy that is different," "Blossom Time" is again shattering records and will return to Atlanta for a third time this season, a record never before attained by any theatrical attraction. But breaking records has been a habit of this incomparable musical play ever since it was first produced in New York, and it will probably continue to do so as long as Schubert's famous melodies are sung and the story of his life unfolded. Ever since its second engagement here, where, having broken house records on its first engagement, it proceeded to shatter its own record on the return, inquiries have been received daily at the Atlanta theater box office asking whether or not there would be another engagement here this season of this matchless attraction. Arrangements have just been completed and on Monday, March 10, the Messrs. Shubert are sending back their acknowledged hit to the Atlanta theater for an engagement of four nights, with a single matinee Wednesday.

The same cast returns here as played before.

Mail orders are now being received, and it is suggested that you get yours in early, for from present indications there will be even a greater attendance this time than on either previous engagement.

BEEBE'S DRAMATIC ART

Lyric Technical Director Begins 3d Term of His School.

Stuart Beebe's class in dramatic art, having completed 10 weeks of highly successful and intensive training in historical effort, enters this week upon its third term with the prospects of a substantial increase in enrollment and the staging of several plays in the near future as a part of the course.

Mr. Beebe is technical director of the Lyric Players stock organization at the Lyric theater. He has been in Atlanta with the stock players for 103 weeks. He is being assisted ably in his present enterprise by Miss Dolly Lewis, a competent actress.

A number of changes in the class, especially as to hours of convening and other scholastic details, have been made with the close of the second eight-week term.

Instead of just two classes a week, as has formerly been the custom, there will be four, one of Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of each week. The term, which consists of eight weeks' intensive training, will remain the same.

Many of the students who have attended both terms of the class are remaining in the third term in order to be more finished actors and actresses than was possible to develop in that length of time. Also many new ones have been added, not only in the dramatic course, but in classes in public speaking, after-dinner speeches and other new features that have been added to the course.

Application may also be made for evening classes.

Mr. Beebe's studio is on the third floor of the building at 2 1-2 Auburn avenue.

The first American Legion post in Illinois named for Woodrow Wilson was recently chartered at Bloomington. The first commander is Jacob Legion Tenny. Because of his interest in the American Legion, Tenny had the word "Legion" legally made a part of his name.

GUM CHEWING IS NOW WORLD-WIDE PASTIME

Washington, March 1.—The rhythmic and musical motions of the gum chewer are no longer a sight peculiar to American shores. The delights of gum chewing, the department of commerce says, are captivating the rest of the world to such an extent that the habit has even begun to displace the immemorial custom of betelnut chewing in Ceylon, India, Burma and the Straits settlements.

And a large proportion of the product used abroad, a department bulletin today said, comes from American factories. Wrappers on American gum are now printed in eighteen languages, including Japanese and Chinese. The American doughboy was credited with giving the first impetus to the spread of the habit in Europe, where before the war the demand was said to have been negligible.

Madeline Berlo's Diving Girls Is Loew's Headline

Hippodrome Stars Will Teach Locals the Art of Diving.

Madaline Berlo and her five diving girls, late feature of three New York Hippodrome shows, "Better Times," "Cheer Up" and "Good Times," will be the headline attraction at Loew's Grand theater this week.

Miss Berlo, who is recognized as the champion woman professional diver of the world, has been pronounced by Dr. Dudley Sargent, former director of education at Harvard, as the most perfect specimen of womanhood in this country. Comparing Miss Berlo's measurements favorably with those of the goddess, Venus de Milo. Mr. Sargent claims the beautiful diver to be a "perfect 36."

With Miss Berlo are her four sisters, who appeared with her at the Hippodrome. All five young ladies execute the most difficult dives into the largest tank used in vaudeville. Madeline features a seventy-five foot head first dive into four feet of water. A record achievement.

During the week, amateur contests will be run for Atlanta divers and silver trophy cups donated by The Atlanta Constitution, together with bathing suits, caps and belts, etc., will be awarded as nightly prizes.

Four other acts augment the enjoyability of the program arranged for the week.

Charles Bennett and Marie Craig, a team that has become popular among Atlanta theater goers through many previous successes, are to appear in a new vehicle entitled "Recuperation." It is a one-act comedy skit, brimming with pep and fun, and includes, besides Mr. Bennett and Miss Craig, Frank DuFrance who adds much to the finesse in which it is offered.

Arthur Thornton and Sam Carlton have some straight comedy that is bound to prove a winner in the Hebrew character interpretations around which they build their act.

Jim Reynolds, who calls himself "A Loose Leaf From the Ledger of Laughs," will present a fancy comedy monologue with some songs and dances. He knows how to put them over right.

Amorous and Obey open the bill in some Parisian eccentricities, featuring acrobatic novelties intermingled with songs and dances.

"The Uninvited Guest," all-star Metro production, will be the feature screen attraction of the week.

New in Pictures.

Ever since motion pictures have been invented scientists have been working on the theory that pictures for the screen could be made showing depth as well as height and breadth. For years and years inventors have been working on the theory and at last a method has been perfected whereby motion pictures have the same appearance as the old post cards we used to look at through a stereoptican. Remember how the figures of men and women stood out from a wall and were made to look as though they were feet in front of the wall? That same impression has been accomplished in motion pictures and the first of these pictures to be exhibited in Atlanta will be shown at the Howard the week of March 10 in conjunction with "The Stranger."

The scientific analysis of the process is so vague that the average layman could not understand it after having it explained to him, but the solution of the whole thing is that the pictures are photographed in colors. One side of the picture is made in red and the other in blue. You look at the screen through colored glasses which will be furnished by the theater. One lense in the glasses is red and the other blue. Looking at a red picture through red glass you see nothing and the same of blue, but when looking at a blue and red picture through blue and red glasses you get the depth to the picture or, in other words, a rounded appearance.

The effect is really startling. For instance, the audience instinctively dodges when from the screen a stream of water is directed at them. Or the operator can be apparently placed in a speeding automobile and whirled through traffic, or through dangerous situations, with such reality that the effect is indescribably thrilling.

"The Third Dimension" is a revolutionary invention, the possibilities of which cannot be estimated at the present time. It introduces absolutely new sensations to the observer by making him seemingly present at the scene on the screen. Actors approach the ob-

LYRIC PLAYERS BRING 'POLLYANNA' TO STAGE

Isabelle Lowe To Personify "Glad Girl" in Drama of Optimism.

"Pollyanna," the glad girl whose happy philosophy is the basis of a new method of living, will step into life on the Lyric stage this week in the radiant personality of Miss Isabelle Lowe, leading woman of the popular stock company.

The original play, as adapted by the noted Catherine Cushing from Eleanor Porter's books and as produced in New York and on tour throughout the continent by Klaw & Erlanger, will be presented all this week at the Lyric theater, beginning Monday night and including performances each night and at matinee Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

The books have been read by more people than have read any other works of popular modern fiction. The circulation of the books has been so tremendous that it is said that one out of every five persons more than 12 years old in the United States has read them.

Something Good in Everything.

Their appeal has been so powerful that "Pollyanna" clubs have been formed in more than a hundred cities in America and abroad to put into practice the "Pollyanna" philosophy of finding something to be thankful for in everything that happens.

The play opens with the central character the young daughter of an impoverished country preacher, poorly clad from the charity of a wealthy city congregation that has taken the backwoods mission in charge. Into the bleakness of life around her Pollyanna radiates happiness. In this phase of the play Miss Lowe has an unusual assignment which few actresses can fill successfully. Tremendous gifts of personality are prerequisite to convincing portrayal of the character. It is not enough that the actress be a good actress, she must be a dynamic personality who can make her audience feel the warming influence she exerts on those whose lives she touches.

Lyric patrons who have seen Miss Lowe in five different characters before will find a signal interest in watching her work in this one.

Cheer for Gloomy Luxury.

In the last phase of the play she has been taken out of the pinched and drab atmosphere that surrounded her in childhood and is beautiful sub-deb ward of a wealthy aunt in a big city. Among surroundings of luxury she finds as much need for the spreading of good cheer as she found in her gloomy childhood surroundings.

Two pretty threads of romance are followed through the play, one in which Pollyanna participates as a principal figure, the other that of her aunt in which she acts the part of a matchmaker, dispelling a bitterness that has estranged two of her elders since their youth and bringing a happy ending to the play for all its characters.

"Pollyanna" is by no means the only person of interest in the play which bears her name. David Herblin, Rankin Mansfield, Will Lovd, Gus Forbes, Miss Marion White, Miss Loraine Bernard, Miss Jane Stewart, and others of the company figure prominently in developing the story. The charming apostle of optimism works a change in them all.

The players have never before presented a play with the breadth of appeal and human interest this one has. It has enthralled tired business men and has inspired their wives to find more of joy in everyday life; it is a play that appeals to the higher intelligence of its audiences but makes its appeal in a manner simple enough to catch the imagination and the interest of children.

Mrs. Eleanor Porter wrote the "Pollyanna" books with a serious purpose of making the world a brighter place in which to live and Mrs. Cushing dramatized it to retain all the power of the books in the more direct medium of the stage. The result is a play that may be expected to have a lasting effect on those who see it.

Princess Radjah Tops Keith's Bill First of Week

Princess Radjah, the celebrated continental exponent of Terpsichore, is to headline the vaudeville program at Keith's Forsyth theater this week in her pantomimic portrayal of the tragedy of the immortal queen, "The Dance of Cleopatra" and other highly classical and strikingly beautiful dances.

The Princess Radjah's appearance in Atlanta marks her return to this country after a two-year triumph in Europe where she was acclaimed as one of the greatest dancers of the age.

Her dance of Cleopatra is taken from the story of the wicked but beautiful monarch, who after hearing of the death of her lover Anthony is supposed to have indulged in a wild, weird oriental dance, finally playing with and tantalizing a pet snake.

Her other success, the "Arabian Chair Dance," combines grace and strength to such a degree as to make it a performance which has never been equaled.

The program also includes Frank L. Whittier and company, presenting the comedy entanglement "In Wrong." Here is crowded a whole evening of laughs into a few brief but exciting moments. The playlet concerns the merry adventures of a man who gets into the wrong bed and is further complicated when the adjoining twin happens to be occupied by a pretty young bride. The appearance of the distressed newlywed husband and an indignant wife adds to the embarrassing tangle from which the innocent culprits must extricate themselves.

Joe Lane and Pearl Harper have something of a variety offering in "Bits of Wit," in which they take the fun functions functioning. Their upon themselves the duty of keeping singing and talking number is effervescent and sparkling.

Paul Gordon and Ame Rica are bicyclists, dancers, singers, musicians and last, but not least, they are comedians. Unitah Masterman is bound to prove pleasing in his songs and impressions.

A Pathe newsreel and an installment of Aesop's Fables complete the bill.

NATIONAL PLAGUE BODY TO CONVENE HERE ON MAY 5-10

Approximately 1,500 delegates are expected to attend the twentieth annual meeting of the National Tuberculosis association to be held here May 5-10. Representatives from every state in the union and probably from Canada and Mexico are expected.

The national association was formed at Baltimore in 1904, and this is the first time in its history that a southern city has been chosen for the annual meeting.

Dr. E. W. Glidden, superintendent of the state tuberculosis sanitarium at Alto and president of the Georgia Tuberculosis association, is chairman of the state entertainment committee. Mrs. F. G. Hodgson, president of the Raoul foundation, is chairman of the Atlanta entertainment committee.

JOHN HINTON SINGS AT TRINITY CHURCH

A special musical program will feature the regular Sunday night services at Trinity Methodist church tonight. The program, arranged by Dr. Ben J. Potter, organist, will feature John Hinton, widely known tenor soloist, and the regular quartet of the church, composed of Mrs. Nellie Nix Edwards, Mrs. Floyd Bridwell, R. S. Bradford and John Clotworthy.

Dr. Potter has arranged several special organ numbers, the chorus, quartet, duet and solo numbers interspersing the organ renditions.

NORWORTH ENTERS DIVORCE FUTURITY

Former Follies Star Challenges Laurels Now Held by McCoy, Hopper and Nat Goodwin.

Jersey City, N. J. March 1.—Jack Norworth, star of the original follies, nearly 20 years ago, and still a featured comedian on the stage, has become a formidable rival for the matrimonial records of Kid McCoy, De Wolf Hopper, and the late Nat Goodwin.

Hopper figured in a divorce action by his latest wife a few days ago, but Norworth offset that gain when he was divorced here Thursday for the third time. The charge was abandonment.

The latest recruit to the sisterhood of ex-wives of Jack Norworth gave her age as 29, said she met him in Oakland, Cal., in 1911, when she was 16. She related that they were wed as soon as she was 18 years old, whereupon they went to London. There, Norworth was named co-respondent in an English divorce suit and his wife returned to New York to demand a divorce, but relented for the sake of their two sons, who are now 9 and 8 years old respectively, and students in an eastern military school.

The newest ex-Mrs. Norworth said Jack had been paying her separation alimony of $9,000 a year out of an income of $50,000.

The best-known of Norworth's ex-wives is Nora Bayes, the actress, for whom a theater has been named on Broadway. It was the team of Bayes and Norworth that Jack had his first success in the old Follies.

DOMESTIC COMMERCE WILL BE DISCUSSED

Irving S. Paull, chief of the domestic commerce division of the federal department of commerce, and formerly executive secretary of the joint commission of agricultural inquiry, will visit Atlanta on Monday, March 10, and will remain in the city for three days, according to B. C. Getsinger, district manager of the Atlanta office of the department.

Mr. Paull has arranged to appear before the Retail Merchants' association, Atlanta Retail Food Dealers' association and the Atlanta Association of Credit men for addresses. He will also be available at the office of the department of commerce, 538 Federal building, for personal and group conferences of interested business executives, Mr. Getsinger said.

Mr. Paull is a leading national authority on cost of living, distribution, elimination of waste and other economic problems that affect the fundamental business life of the country. The government division he now heads, under Secretary of Commerce Hoover, was organized only recently to investigate these problems and other matters connected with business and industry in an effort to reduce the cost of living and unnecessary waste in industry, and to make special studies of various industries. He is said to be an unusually interesting and forceful speaker, it is stated.

Appeal for Funds To Be Made During Anniversary Week

Beginning Monday night and continuing through Sunday, March 16, members of Ebenezer church (colored), corner Auburn avenue and Jackson street, will celebrate the thirtieth anniversary of the founding of the church and marking the thirtieth continuous year of service of their pastor, Rev. A. D. Williams.

During the two weeks' celebration a special effort will be made to raise $3,500, the outstanding indebtedness of the church, incurred early in 1920 when additions were made to the building. According to the pastor, the church was organized with 13 members 30 years ago, and the membership continued to grow until 1920 when a total of 900 members were enrolled on the church register. The wave of migration which swept through negro settlements in the south during the past four years greatly depleted the membership of the church, and now only 283 active members remain. This number, however, is expected to be enlarged during the two weeks series of meetings.

An appeal has been made to both races for the small sum necessary to pay off the present indebtedness of the church. Rev. Williams stated that it is the first time in the 30 years' history of the church that a general appeal for funds has been found necessary.

New York's most distinguished matrons and debutants have taken to fencing as a form or sport.

Frau Elna Munch, president of the Danish Woman Suffrage association and member of the Folkething, is probably the only woman in the world whose privilege it is to sit next to her own husband in a national parliament.

Unmasks the Chorus of 'The Spice of '23'

Nat Phillips, manager of "The Spice of 1923," explains to Constitution reporters where all the pretty chorus girls come from. The show opens Monday night at the Atlanta theater for a week's engagement.

Where do chorus girls come from?

Nat Phillips, manager of "Spice of 1923," which is coming from the New York Winter Garden to the Atlanta theater for a week's engagement beginning tomorrow, with matinees Wednesday and Saturday, recently answered this query with two words, "New York."

"But they're not all New Yorkers," it was urged. "How did they get to New York?"

"Durned if I know," admitted Phillips. "Let's go and ask 'em."

Back stage, in the whirl of girls, boys, costumes, stage hands, scenery and stars, Phillips picked out a dancing-eyed youngster.

"Back stage this is "Pasty," he said. "On the program she is Vera Watkins."

The uppermost question was explained to "Pasty."

Alabama Bred.

"I was born in Montgomery, Ala.," she said.

"I liked dancing and thought I could make a better living at it, so I went to New York and got a job."

Lorraine Lee was practically born on the stage, her father having played with Bernhardt and Nat Goodwin. Dorothy Kendall worked as secretary and treasurer of a theater in Manchester, N. H., before deciding she could do as well as some of the actresses she saw.

Beth O'Sullivan was one of the New York girls. Florence Dillon came from Reading, Pa. Edwina Collum said she had nothing to do after graduating from high school in Kansas City and she liked to sing, dance, travel and see new faces, stage work seemed to fill the bill.

Another Alabamian.

Ruthye Mansfield was born in Mobile, Ala. Through a friend of the family entered the motion picture field.

Thelma Seymour played a "kid" part in "The Fatal Wedding" when she was 12 in her home town stock company in Baltimore. Nellie Gerley is from Kansas City. Sophie Mills is a Brooklyn girl. Billie Jerome was attending college and went with a vaudeville act to get sufficient money to continue her studies. She never returned to the school.

Admits Qualifications.

Without exception, the girls all told of early stage ambitions and a love of dancing. A pretty face or figure they admitted was an asset.

"The day of the show girl has gone," one of the girls said. "They were nothing but pegs on which to hang pretty clothes. The successful chorus girl of today has to double as a showgirl, singer and dancer. To get a job in the chorus of a show like "Spice," a girl has to be trained almost from babyhood. None others can do the acrobatic steps that such a production requires."

State Securities Commission Holds Meeting on Monday

The regular meeting of the Georgia securities commission will be held Monday morning at 9:30 o'clock in the office of the secretary of state. The chief subject listed for discussion at this time is to decide upon the attitude of the commission toward dealers in lands located outside the state boundaries.

Following publicity given activities of some dealers of this class, operating without a license, the commission has received letters from a number of dealers seeking information regarding the law and the commission's requirements. Letters have also been received from purchasers through alleged unauthorized dealers, according to a statement made Saturday by Chief Examiner T. B. Conner.

KLAN SOLICITOR ASKS AUDIT OF ACCOUNTS

A suit asking that accounts of E. Y. Clarke, former imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, which contain receipts of money received on each application to the klan during his administration, be audited to establish their correctness, was filed Saturday in Fulton superior court by E. D. Smith, of Indiana, who charges that Clarke is indebted to him to the extent of approximately $8,000.

Judge John D. Humphries, of the Fulton superior court, before whom the petition was presented, signed an order fixing March 15 as the date for hearing. Smith charged that he entered into a contract with Clarke on July 1, 1922, by which he was to receive a percentage of each fee collected from new members coming into the klan. Clarke is indebted to him in the sum of several thousand dollars, Smith averred, claiming that he failed to receive promised compensation for his efforts, he says.

FRIENDS ENTER SMITH IN WISCONSIN PRIMARY

Madison, Wis., March 1.—A good man can't keep himself down.

Governor Al Smith, of New York, who requested that his name be withdrawn when it was filed in Illinois as that of a candidate for the democratic presidential nomination, has now had a similar honor conferred upon him in Wisconsin.

IF YOU GET UP NIGHTS YOU'RE OLD BEFORE YOUR TIME

Prostrate and Bladder Trouble Makes Many Men Feel Twenty Years Older Than Are

It is said that fifty per cent of men past forty and many younger ones are victims of prostate trouble.

One of the commonest symptoms of this dangerous disease which saps vitality and makes you old before your time is the necessity of getting up several times a night.

Other symptoms are dull, draggy, aching at the base of the spine, pain in groin, burning sensation of organs, lack of vigor and frequent attacks of the blues.

But there is hope for you, no matter how old your case, from a wonderful new formula. It seemingly brings new health, vigor and freedom from these troubles to both old and young.

This wonderful treatment is known as Walker's Prostate Specific, and is prepared in convenient, pleasant tablet form. All you need to do is take one tablet after each meal and the symptoms seem to vanish like magic.

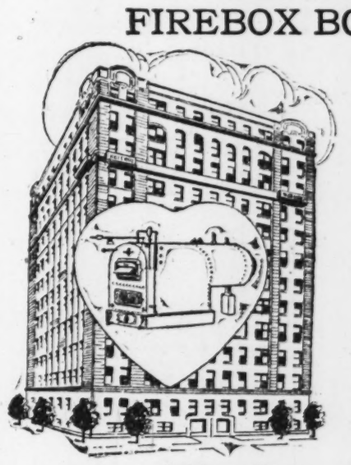

To prove these statements the Walker Institute, 1002 Gateway Station, Kansas City, Mo., generously offers to send a $1 treatment under plain wrapper, postpaid and free of charge to any sufferer who will write for it. If it cures you tell your friends and pay whatever you think is fair, otherwise the loss is ours.

Remember that you are the judge, and you pay nothing now or at any time unless you wish, so send your name today before the introductory offer is withdrawn. It is good for only 10 days and guaranteed in every way.—(adv.)

KEWANEE
The heart of your building

No man is any better than his heart. Neither is a building. If a man's heart is no good, physically the man is as unstable as cheese. And if a building has a poor heating boiler, the building can't keep smiles on its owner's map or keep the rent going as a self-respecting building should.

A KEWANEE ALL-STEEL FIREBOX BOILER is a sound and steady heart, not a nervous or fluttering one. And being sound, it keeps up a steady flow of heat on the coldest days when other types of boilers crack or leak or pass out altogether. KEWANEE being a healthy heart, keeps your tenants satisfied and willing to go on with you indefiinitely. Hence it is an asset, not a liability—a money-maker, not a spendthrift.

The finest buildings—great and small—in America are standard testimonials of KEWANEE'S worth—many of them are magnificent government buildings—lots of them imposing office structures—great hotels, churches, clubs, theatres, hospitals, auditoriums, apartment buildings. And incidentall this boiler will burn any kind of coal without smoke. So, if you ever butt into a drastic smoke ordinance, you can laugh in its face.

No man should put up a building until he has seen this boiler first. And the Old Man Behind the Boiler will assist him with details that will prove to him that a good boiler is the biggest thing in buildings

Christian Womanhood United in Prayer.

O Thou, by whom we come to God,
The Life, the Truth, the Way,
The path of prayer Thyself hast trod;
Lord, teach us how to pray.

There is something very fine in the call to prayer of the Christian womanhood of the land in a great united appeal to Almighty God for strength and wisdom in His service. It is a high expression of unity of purpose and devotion to the Master. There will be light indeed at eventide as Friday's day of intercession closes, and the world will be better that hearts have been searched in penitence and prayer, and richer that the Spirit of Power of God has given more abundant life to His own. Somewhat more of humility, somewhat more of compassion, and a surer trust in prayer must come out of this walk with the Master. And those who labor in hard and distant places, whether in arctic or tropic climes, whether in places of ignorance and suffering and vice, or superstition, and poverty or wealth, will sense a closer bond of brotherhood, and glow with deepened faith, because these have prayed.

"We would be like Him in love and charity, in reverence for truth and duty, and in the spirit of helpfulness which made Him the servant of all. We pray that all nations may turn toward Christ, as the Light and Life of men; that envy and strife, rancor and bitterness between nations may cease; that the spirit of good will may prevail, and that from the Prince of Peace we may learn those lessons which shall make for universal peace, and the establishment of the Kingdom of God and His righteousness upon earth."

STATE EDITOR.

City-Wide Prayer Service

A nation-wide call to prayer is made for Friday, March 7th. This is one of the great unified acts of service of all devoted Christian women for the spirit of power in the mission work of all the churches, for the mission field throughout the world. The observance of the day will be marked by earnest supplication and praise, and renewed consecration of soul and body in the Master's work.

Mrs. T. L. Lewis, president of the Federated Church Women of Georgia, has arranged for the service in Atlanta to be held at the First Baptist church, from 3 to 5 o'clock p. m. She urges a city-wide attendance from all the churches.

Girls! Try this! When combing and dressing your hair, just moisten your hair brush with a little "Danderine" and brush it through your hair. The effect is startling! You can do your hair up immediately and it will appear twice as thick and heavy—a mass of gleamy hair, sparkling and possessing that incomparable softness, freshness and luxuriance.

While beautifying the hair "Danderine" is also toning and stimulating each single hair to grow thick, long and strong. Hair stops falling out and dandruff disappears. Get a bottle of delightful, refreshing "Danderine" at any drug or toilet counter and just see how healthy and youthful your hair becomes.—(adv.)

TRINITY CHURCH AT DECATUR

At our "get together" entertainment held at the parish house on St. Valentine day $40.89 was added to our treasury and a most enjoyable afternoon was spent by all who attended. In order to help out the building fund the woman's auxiliary and guild are putting on sale the best chocolate ever placed on the market, sold only for institutional work.

Although nearly a year in advance, preparations are being made for a sale of fancy work to be held next December.

The auxiliary has accomplished much this month, having sent one box of clothing to St. Thomas, Virgin Isle, and a box to Tennessee. The social service department also sent a box of old and new clothing to DeKalb Red Cross.

Miss Snook, our diocesan president, gave us a most interesting and instructive talk on foreign missions and church conditions on the 21st of February. Appreciation of her visit was evidenced by a full house of attentive listeners.

The Church Periodical club, just celebrating its first birthday, is sending literature into thirteen states besides Cuba, Porto Rico and the Canal Zone. The Episcopal club (called St. Agnes guild) at Agnes Scott college will have Miss Hall, student educational secretary, give a talk some time soon. She is visiting Episcopal clubs in southern colleges.

The Young People's Service league, of which Eugene Hicks is president, is one of the church's loveliest organizations and there is seldom an absent member when the roll is called. Each Sunday evening they meet at the home of some member for dinner and afterwards take part in an instructive program. The last meeting was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Webber.

Miss Annie Goode Torbet, who has been our faithful and regular organist for so many years, has given up this work to Mr. Harner and is now taking charge of the Sunday school.

Mrs. E. L. Winterton, the first woman associate member of the British Institute of Railway Signal Engineers is employed as a draftswoman by the Great Western railway, making safety appliances being her specialty.

A Perfect Skin

No blackheads, no blemishes ever

By Edna Wallace Hopper

Mine is a perfect skin—a skin which young girls envy—at the age of 62. After 40 years as a stage star, I look like a girl of 19.

I owe all this to a rich, ambitious mother. She searched the world for methods to multiply my beauty and to keep her youth. Those helps made me a famous beauty, and they keep me a beauty still.

Now I have arranged so every girl and woman may have those identical helps. Thus I hope to bring to millions the benefits I got.

My Facial Youth

One is a liquid cleanser which I call my Facial Youth. It contains no animal, no vegetable fat. So it cannot grow hair on the face. It cannot assimilate in any way with the skin.

It simply cleanses the skin to the depths, penetrates every pore. When I wipe it off, all the dirt and grime, all that clogs the skin comes with it.

Clean the skin in the best other way you know. My Facial Youth will still remove much extra grime and refuse.

I cover my body with Facial Youth before bathing. Thus I remove much clogging matter which water fails to get.

Apply Facial Youth night and morning, and whenever else the face needs cleaning. You will never find another way to keep the skin so clear.

One-fourth price

The greatest beauty experts now employ this liquid cleanser. Some supply it to dainty women, but at four times what I charge. No cleansing formula in existence can compare with this. And a clean skin is essential.

Edna Wallace Hopper's Facial Youth is now supplied by all druggists and toilet counters at 75 cents per bottle. Also my Youth Cream—my fruity cold cream. Also my White Youth Clay—the utmost in facial clay. Also my Hair Youth, which brought me luxuriant hair. My Beauty Book comes with each.

I urge you to try Facial Youth. Learn what a really clean skin means. Let it do for you what it does for me. You will be amazed. Then, if you want my other helps, they are at your call. Edna Wallace Hopper, 536 Lake Shore Drive, Chicago.

King's Daughters Executive Board Holds Sessions

The regular mid-year meeting of the executive board of the King's Daughters and Sons of Georgia was held in Savannah February 22. The meeting was well attended, eleven members being present. Plans were discussed and completed for the annual convention to be held in Columbus May 13, 14 and 15.

The general national convention to be held in Charleston, S. C., April 2 to 7 was also discussed. Miss Kate Hall, state president, is anxious that Georgia be well represented, as this is the first time the general convention has been held in the south.

In addition to our central council member and state president we are entitled to five voting delegates which will be elected from city unions, chapters or circles.

The meeting was a threefold success, business being thoroughly discussed and definite plans made. All were inspired and encouraged to greater effort, while socially it was most enjoyable. Those of us who had not the pleasure of a previous acquaintance with our new president, Miss Kate C. Hall, feel as the others, that we have as competent, capable, wide-awake, consecrated leader and that the state work is in good hands.

The Savannah Daughters of the King are ideal hostesses. After the business meeting luncheon was served, after which we visited the Julia McLoud Nursery home, which is the special work of this chapter. This was a revelation to us all, indeed the most complete of its kind I have ever seen and of which they are justly proud.

We were then given an automobile ride, seeing beautiful Savannah, and then to Hampton home, the Chatham county home (for it could not be called a prison) for delinquent women. This home is so attractive, so beautifully clean and inviting that some of the ladies expressed a desire to remain and asked what they would be required to do to become a permanent inmate.

I failed to say that at each of these places we were served delicious refreshments.

At 6:30 o'clock we were again entertained at the church with a banquet, and notwithstanding the fact that we had been eating all day, we thoroughly enjoyed the feast.

At all of these delightful functions the hatchet and cherries were evident and we had the real George and Martha with powdered hair and costume. After the banquet we reluctantly departed for home, feeling that the day had been well spent.

MEMORIAL FOR MRS. BELL PLANNED

The Woman's Missionary union of the Capitol Avenue Baptist church was exceedingly fortunate Monday afternoon in having Dr. Austin Crouch, superintendent of church extension work of the Baptist home board, give them an interesting talk on his work.

Much stress at this time is being put on giving financial assistance to homeless churches in the Southern Baptist convention and since last May the board has made more than four hundred thousand dollars in loans to assist such churches.

Through a motion of Mrs. M. M. Cook, field missionary of the Capitol Avenue church, a memorial to this church home building fund has been made to Mrs. T. P. Bell, first president of the ladies' work in this church from 1897 to 1908. It was Mrs. Bell who changed the Aid society to a real Woman's Missionary union and through her prayers and untiring efforts that the two Bible women were supported in China.

Mrs. Bell was a most generous contributor to every cause fostered by the church, but missions were ever foremost in her heart and the ladies who had the privilege of working with her in this union feel that all their missionary spirit is due to this good woman. It is a great joy to help our homeless Baptist churches throughout the south by making this memorial for Mrs. Bell and thus her labors of past years will be of untold good for many generations to come.

CLARA B. STEPHENSON,
Chairman, Publicity Committee, Capitol Avenue Baptist church.

FITZGERALD SOCIETY GOES OVER TOP

The Fitzgerald Woman's Missionary society of the Christian church held its jubilee banquet in the church dining room Monday evening, January 28.

Seated with the ladies of the society were interested friends from the church and Bible school, covers having been laid for seventy-five. At the speaker's table were Mrs. C. N. Downey, state secretary of the Georgia Woman's Christian Missionary society, the honor guest of the evening; Mrs. L. A. Turner, local president and toastmistress; Rev. Bruce Nay, pastor of the church; W. A. Adams, Bible school superintendent; Mrs. U. J. Bennett, missionary superintendent; Mary Frances Turner, one of the Junior society members; Evelyn Brown, World Call Girl, and Miss Lucile Bryant, of Christian Endeavor.

The decorations and appointments were in keeping with the jubilee idea and the program consisted of a "Tribute to the Pioneers," by Mrs. Bennett; "What the Missionary Society Has Meant to the Church," Mr. Nay; "Toast to the Juniors," Miss Lucile Bryant; response, Miss Mary Frances Turner; "World Call," the missionary magazine, Evelyn Brown, dressed in a unique costume made of World Call covers; "We Will Help Those Women," W. A. Adams, Mrs. L. A. Turner, who has been president of our society for nine years and whose untiring efforts have brought it up to its present standard and efficiency, introduced Mrs. C. N. Downey, who made the address of the evening.

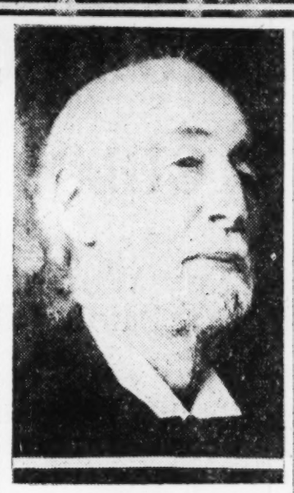

Beginning with the pioneer movement in 1874, Mrs. Downey painted a picture of the struggles and accomplishments of the Woman's society that held her listeners spellbound. She closed with an appeal for all Georgians to rally to the Macedonian cry from Atlanta and in a few minutes Fitzgerald's quota was oversubscribed—$587.50 was pledged, $500 being our quota.

Dr. Albert Theodore Spalding gave sixty-six years of his life to the Baptist ministry. For ten of those years he served our own Second Baptist church of Atlanta. Later he was a member of the First Church and at the time of his death, and while he was serving as the chaplain of the Georgia Baptist Orphanage, he was a member of the Ponce de Leon Avenue Baptist church.

He rendered gracious Christian service all over the land, Philadelphia, Louisville, Selma, Ala.; Galveston, Texas; Atlanta and many other smaller places were included in his pastorates. For years his life was woven into the life of the Baptists of this city and state, as well as into every movement for good which needed his cooperation. A simple stone marks his last resting place in Westview cemetery, bearing the inscription, "He Went About Doing Good." But up to this time no fitting memorial has been made to remind us of the blessedness of his life.

The Junior Business Women's Bible class of the Second Baptist church led by Mrs. Mary Connally Spalding, established a memorial to the beloved Dr. Albert Theodore Spalding. These young women were moved to foster this fund in memory of one whose life will be always an inspiration. The spirit of love and reverence is resourceful. A folder was sent out telling what the Junior Business Women's Bible class was doing in honor of Dr. Spalding's memory. Responses poured in from fifteen different states in amounts from 25 cents to $25, from over 200 people. In two years' time the fund has grown to over $800.

During January the money was invested in larger interest bearing securities and one-half of the interest will be used for missions or benevolence and the other half added to the principal for further investment.

This fund is still open to contributions from any one who wishes to take a part.

What a grand, inspiring task for these young women, for it strengthens their minds and hearts for higher ideals when thinking of the "One who went about doing good," they too, will yearn for a part in making the world better for having lived. They were led to feel by their faithful teacher, Mrs. Spalding, that there are memorials more lasting, more enduring than bronze and marble. The memorial established for Dr. Spalding will tell of his useful life on down through the coans of time and bear witness for him in Eternity.

MRS. L. L. LEWIS.

Decatur Church Business Women Organize Circle

For our young women and girls.

This question is a vital one in our church life today.

The need of women who will lead the young women and girls in the various organizations fostered by them.

This question would seem out of place were it not for the fact that in every church there is an organization of some kind to train women for this very work. This being true, why the shortage of leaders?

Are we as women shirking our responsibility?

Are we holding back the talent of leadership?

Or have we failed to realize the glorious privilege that is ours if we will but heed the call.

Much stress is put on leading the young people today, and truly it is a day when our churches everywhere are teeming with young life.

Christian women of every denomination, the young women and girls of our churches today need you. They need your influence. They need the best we have to give.

Shall we fail them and stand idly by and gradually see their lives turn to the things that last only for a season? Let's give them our tender guidance.

Remembering always that the girls of today will be the women of tomorrow.

MRS. J. W. SMITH,
Secretary Fourth District.

A group of young business women in the First Methodist church of Decatur, with the help of Mrs. Homer Wright, have formed themselves into a circle. This circle will be known as the Young Business Women's circle, and will be a part of the Woman's Missionary society. The membership numbers 35 and the meetings will be held twice monthly at the church. The young ladies will have supper served by the other circles of the Missionary society and after supper the meeting will be held. This is a most enthusiastic group and promises to be an outstanding factor in the church and in the Missionary society.

Mrs. Clarke Speaks On Japanese Culture

Mrs. Harvey Clarke spoke before Mrs. John Spalding's history class at the Homestead on "Japanese Culture" as seen in their education, music and drama, on February 22.

Mrs. Clarke (nee Lucile Daniel) has been for twenty years one of the most prominent Baptist missionaries in Japan. Her life has been tinted with an interesting and beautiful romance. Her husband, Rev. Harvey Clarke, while a student at the Southern Baptist Theological seminary in Louisville, and while a member of the First Baptist church of Atlanta, heard the call for a missionary to Japan. Mr. Clarke responded and received an appointment under the Baptist foreign mission board. Later he went to Japan alone. It was not until he had found joy in missionary service that he wrote and asked Miss Daniel, whose heart he had won, to join him and share his labors in the island nation. Miss Daniel, already a missionary at heart, was accepted by the same board, and shortly sailed for Japan with a party of other missionaries, and on reaching the mission field became the bride of Mr. Clarke and co-laborer in the work to which they have given the best years of their lives.

The Baptists all over Georgia remember Lucile Daniel Clarke, who is home for a rest with her six lovely children, two of whom are in college.

It is a privilege to have been a missionary to the most progressive Asiatic nation of the day.

Mrs. Carter Helm Jones, who is welcomed by the Christian women of all Atlanta, will also be one of the guests at "The Homestead," as a guest of the history class.—C. M. L.

AT PONCE DE LEON BAPTIST CHURCH.

All Baptist observe several days in March for special prayer in the interest of home missions at the Ponce de Leon Baptist church, a very delightful three day program has been arranged by the mission committee, under the direct management of Mrs. W. A. Sandefer, chairman of home missions, for the church. On Monday, March 3, the services will be conducted by Mrs. C. N. Hughes and her committee. A most enjoyable afternoon is in store for all who plan to attend.

This is the regular missionary society day combined with the mission committee, in interest of home missions.

Miss Laura Lee Patrick, corresponding secretary of the state W. M. U., will be the honor guest and speaker for the afternoon.

Tuesday, Miss Emma Leachman, field worker for the south, will be the speaker. Miss Leachman is a most interesting talker, and vitally concerned in home mission.

Mrs. Nellie Nix Edwards will sing at this service, which will be held at 3 o'clock in Sunday school annex.

On Wednesday afternoon a most unique and delightful affair has been arranged with our greatly beloved missionary Miss Catharine A. Bryan in charge. Miss Bryan is at present resting in Atlanta, but her heart and interest is centered in China. She will illustrate her discourse with stereopticon views taken in China. Music will complete this program. The public is invited.

When the liner Samaria steamed from New York recently on a cruise around the world it carried with it the first "floating bookshop," a collection of 5,000 volumes on all subjects. The idea was conceived by Miss Ruth Lerch, daughter of a wealthy manufacturer of Scranton, Pa.

Briefly Told

All Saints' Episcopal church school has adopted an orphan, through the self-denial service of Grade 8, No. 1. It is the ambition of their teacher, Mrs. de Liesseeline, that they shall carry their protege on through school days and college, from the kindergarten, where they have just placed her in Sunday school, and the girls in class A may look back and realize they had not spent their time in vain.

A silver tea was given recently for initial funds for clothing, which the girls will make. It is a beautiful service, for the gift with the giver is there.

REV. JONNARD ACCEPTS CALL.

After two years as assistant rector and later rector-in-charge of St. John's church, Savannah, Ga., which work has been combined with both diocesan and provincial field work in religious education and Young People's work, the Rev. W. Aimison Jonnard has accepted the call to the rectorship of St. John's parish. The call was extended last December, but it has been only after much consideration that the decision was reached. Mr. Jonnard thus relinquishes the field work in the Province of Sewanee in which he has been so intensely interested, but it is understood that he will retain oversight of the Georgia diocesan work of religious education.

UNION LENTEN SERVICES.

The Clericus, a society composed of the Episcopal clergy in Atlanta and vicinity, has decided to hold a series of union services during the Lenten season. As arranged for they are as follows: The opening service will be at St. Philip's cathedral on March 6, with Rev. W. W. Memminger as preacher. The others come on regular weekly dates, March 18, at the Church of the Holy Comforter, Pulliam street at Atlanta avenue; March 20, St. Luke's church, Peachtree street; March 27, St. John's church, College Park; April 3, Church of the Incarnation, Lee street; April 10, Church of the Epiphany; April 17, All Saints' church, West Peachtree street.

All services will be at 8 o'clock in the evening. Preacher at each church to be selected by the rector or priest in charge.

GIVES SILVER TEA.

On Thursday a very successful silver tea including a musical program was given by St. John's church, College Park, under the auspices of the Woman's guild. The rooms of the parish house were very tastefully decorated with the red hearts and colors of St. Valentine. Light refreshments in the way of cakes, sandwiches and tea were served by the members of the guild. The musical part of the afternoon's entertainment was under the charge of Mrs. Edward Lycett. Many of the leading features of the program were renditions by her pupils, all of which showed careful training and study. The following was in the main carried out:

Piano Solo—"Narcissus," Miss Betty Ransome.

Vocal Solo—"Rosalie," Miss Louise Heard.

Reading—"The Cardinal," Miss Minora Conley.

Piano Solo—"Spanish Dance," Miss Regina Pudney.

Vocal Solo—"Mighty Lak a Rose," Miss Lucile Aaron.

Solo Dancing—Miss Louise Roberts.

Piano Solo—"The Waves," Miss Lydia Willingham.

Vocal Solo—"The Rosary," Miss Kitty Vance.

Piano Solo—"Smiling Through," Miss Elaine Yeast.

Piano Solo—Sextette, Miss Blanche Roberts.

Later on in the evening an entertainment was given by the Young People's Service league. J. Wayne Moore, Jr., Miss Kitty Vance and other young persons were in charge of this program.

W. M. S. RECEPTION.

The cordial reception given by the ladies of the W. M. S. of the Central Baptist church on February 21 to the fifth district rally of the W. M. U. of the Atlanta association, was greatly appreciated, not only by the secretary, Mrs. L. O. Freeman, but by the large number of friends who enjoyed the all-day program and splendid Christian fellowship.

NEWS FROM ST PHILIP'S.

The second week of intensive training for church school teachers was held in the cathedral from February 24 to 29. Mr. Leon C. Palmer, of Spartanburg, S. C., a well-known church worker, was one of the principal speakers.

The Boy Scouts of Troop No. 28, under their scoutmaster, Charles Gray, Jr., fought fire on their last hike out near Decatur waterworks. Several of the boys got test credits for their efficient work.

Dean Johnston's confirmation classes, held on Wednesday evenings at 8 o'clock, at his home, 75 St. Charles place, are rapidly growing in size and popularity.

W. M. U. OFFICIALS HERE.

Mrs. W. C. James, president of the W. M. U. (auxiliary to the Southern Baptist convention), and Miss Ethel Wingfield, assistant to the corresponding secretary, both of Birmingham, Ala., were in Atlanta last week and in conference with a goodly number of Baptist women, who are especially interested in the plans for welcoming the W. M. U. convention which meets in Atlanta in annual session May, 1924. Mrs. W. A. Hartman, superintendent of the W. M. U. of the Atlanta association, will be the hostess for the convention, and has charge of the appointment of all necessary committees.

Women of Payne Memorial Most Active in Church Work

The superintendent of mission study for the Women's Missionary society of Payne Memorial church, Mrs. C. C. Beachum, is both resourceful and enthusiastic.

The study class recently conducted by Mrs. Beachum on Japan was so successful that it may be well used as a model for other churches. We wish there were space enough to tell all the fine points about this class as written by Mrs. U. N. Martin, superintendent of publicity, but for lack of space we will only be able to give some of the best features.

The book chosen for study was "The Woman and the Leaven in Japan," by Charlotte D. Forrest. A brief, interesting sketch of the life of the author was given by Mrs. Manning. Shintoism was explained by Mrs. T. K. Frye, and Mrs. J. J. Baker told of the early history of the Japanese prior to the time of Commodore Perry's visit.

After an open discussion of the book, the pastor of the church, Rev. Debardeleben, gave a splendid talk on missions, explaining that the true missionary spirit means love for humanity, regardless of race or color.

Mrs. Beachum has decorated the class room profusely in beautiful cherry blossoms, which she had fashioned herself. There were also on display numerous curios from Japan, conspicuous among them a miniature image of the great Buddha.

Following the address by the pastor, a committee of ladies served refreshments from a dainty Japanese tea service.

BUSINESS WOMEN. ORGANIZE CIRCLE

Business Women's circle, No. 7, of the Women's Missionary society of the Payne Memorial Methodist church was organized on Friday evening, February 15, at the church.

Those present at the organization were Mrs. George H. Sims, president of the Women's Missionary society of Payne Memorial Methodist church; Mrs. W. F. Griffin, vice president; Mrs. Myrtice Beattie, Miss Eva Reitzel, Miss Nannie Scott, Miss Lucy Cagle, Miss Nellie Scott, Miss Floy Langston, Miss Annie Hughes, Mrs. McEwing, Mrs. Thatch, Mrs. B. Manning and Mrs. Baxter Coker.

The officers elected for the current year for circle No. 7 are as follows: Mrs. Myrtice Beattie, chairman; Miss Annie Hughes, vice chairman; Miss Eva Reitzel, secretary; Miss Nannie Scott, treasurer.

A delightful supper was served the new circle by circle No. 3, of which Mrs. B. Manning is chairman.

The next meeting of circle No. 7 will be held on Tuesday, March 4, 6:15 p. m., at the church, and we cordially invite all business women, not only of our church, but those living near who are not affiliated with any other church, to meet with us and join our circle. We need the help and co-operation of all, so come and help us make this circle a power for good in our church and the entire community.

ANNIE HUGHES,
Vice Chairman and Corresponding Secretary.

BACK FROM AFRICA.

Miss Susan Anderson, returned missionary from Africa, made the chief address in the afternoon at the fifth district Baptist rally. Miss Anderson won the hearts of all who heard the story of her own experiences in the Dark Continent.

Dr. C. B. Wilmer Addresses Atlanta Chapter, U. D. C.

An address from Dr. C. B. Wilmer featured the regular meeting of the Atlanta chapter U. D. C. on Thursday afternoon. Dr. Wilmer took as the theme of his address "loyalty to posterity," declaring that the prime duty of Daughters of the Confederacy is "to see that facts are handed down unwarped." A caution was sounded by Dr. Wilmer against regarding truth as a matter of geography, even while asserting that he himself possessed an "unconquerable prejudice in favor of the south," and at the close of his address Dr. Wilmer entered a vigorous plea that no obstacles be placed in the way of having the young people of today tackle the problems of today, and saying that the future holds as many prizes to be won as the past has offered.

Mrs. Charles Bellingrath, contralto at St. Luke's, sang selections from Samson and Delillah, accompanied by Miss Duck, organist at St. Luke's.

Miss Anna Bennett, custodian of crosses, called the attention of chapter members to the fact that on Memorial day this year there will take place the first bestowal of crosses of service, and that the crosses are to be given to men of southern lineage who served in the world war. Miss Bennett stated that application for these crosses must be made at an early date by chapter members who intend to take this opportunity of showing their interest in world war service men. Crosses are $1 each, and application must be made through the chapter president to the state chairman.

New members welcomed into the chapter by the president were Mrs. Louis A. Falligant, Mrs. E. D. Thomas and Mrs. E. V. Carter. In the absence of Mrs. Warren D. White, Mrs. Forrest Kibbler made the report of the registrar. Mrs. J. A. Erwin gave one of the important reports of the afternoon.

Resolutions on the death of Mrs. W. C. Henderson, auditor of the chapter, were offered by Mrs. M. C. Henderson, Mrs. Joseph Morgan and Mrs. Charles T. Phillips.

Announcement was made by the president of a check given by Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Woodward with which payment on the chapter's piano has been completed. Mrs. J. H. Beckham reported two portraits given by her committee to Atlanta schools on Georgia day. Mrs. A. O. Woodward made the presentation of the picture given to the William A. Bass school; Mrs. Phillips made the presentation at the Capitol Avenue school, the portrait being given by Mrs. John A. Perdue.

Mrs. R. K. Rambo presented an invitation to the chapter to attend the tree planting exercises to be held Sunday afternoon on the Bankhead highway under the auspices of the woman's commission of the Bankhead highway.

Miss Louise Alice Williams was a guest at the meeting, being presented as the daughter of one of the chapter's members and announcement being made by Mrs. Phillips that Miss Williams will give a dramatic reading at the Atlanta Woman's club on March 17.

Bowdon College Notes of Interest.

Miss Iris Smythe Davenport, head of the home economics department, accompanied by Mrs. Ernest Dillard, spent Tuesday in Atlanta, buying additional equipment for the domestic science laboratory.

Prof. Ernest Dillard, head of the science department, visited the Roopville High school on last Monday morning and delivered an address during the chapel exercises of that instutiton.

Dr. G. W. Camp, president of the college, will deliver an address on "Socialized Education" to the teachers of the county at their teachers' institute to be held at the Carrollton High school, Carrollton, on next Saturday.

Dr. J. L. Lovvorn, president of the board of directors of the college, was in Washington city for a few days last week.

The Halycon Literary society is preparing a Woodrow Wilson program for its meeting on March 4.

At the combined Washington's birthday and leap year party on last Friday evening, the Bowden players had as their guests the following: Misses Sarah Frances Barrow, Mabel Lipham, Frances Holmes, Willie Curtis Dye, Charles Sims, Adel Spence, Harold Lipham, Eric Staples, Homer Wilson, Herman McGouirk, Mgllalieu Bishop and E. C. Burns.

The senior cookery class will serve a luncheon on next Monday to the following invited guests: Mrs. W. L. Brooks, Mrs. F. A. Martin, Mrs. C. V. Weathers, Mrs. H. H. Bowen, Mrs. J. T. Roberts, Mrs. H. M. Bird and Miss Iris Smythe Davenport. Misses Marguerite Martin and Ila Brook will be the hostesses of the occasion.

Library day will be observed by the college this year on March 17. On this date, the friends of the institution have a special invitation to visit the departments of the college.

Fittingly commemorating the beautiful grove of oaks, covering the college campus, the name, "The Oaks," has been chosen for the commencement number of the illustrated college magazine to be published by the students and faculty of the college.

Toccoa D. A. R. Entertain.

One of the most delightful events in the social life of Toccoa was the entertainment given at the Albermarle hotel by the Daughters of the American Revolution in celebration of the birthday of George Washington. The "Daughters" wore colonial costume.

After the presentation of the young chapter by the regent, Mrs. Mary Jarrett White, the guest of honor, Colonel John T. Boifeuillet, made an interesting address, being introduced by Miss Mabel Ramsay.

A short address by Colonel Fernen Barrett was much enjoyed. A delightful musical program added much to the pleasure of the guests. A piano solo by Mrs. George Allen and songs by Miss Ruth Barron and Mrs. Fernen Barrett were especially delightful. "Who Knows" was sung by Mrs. Barrett.

The minuet was danced by Misses Ditz Ramsay, Eleanor McLaughin, Janie and Joe Lawrence, Jenna Sue McNeely, Janie Crawford, Mrs. Elien Mitchell and Mrs. Winston Owen.

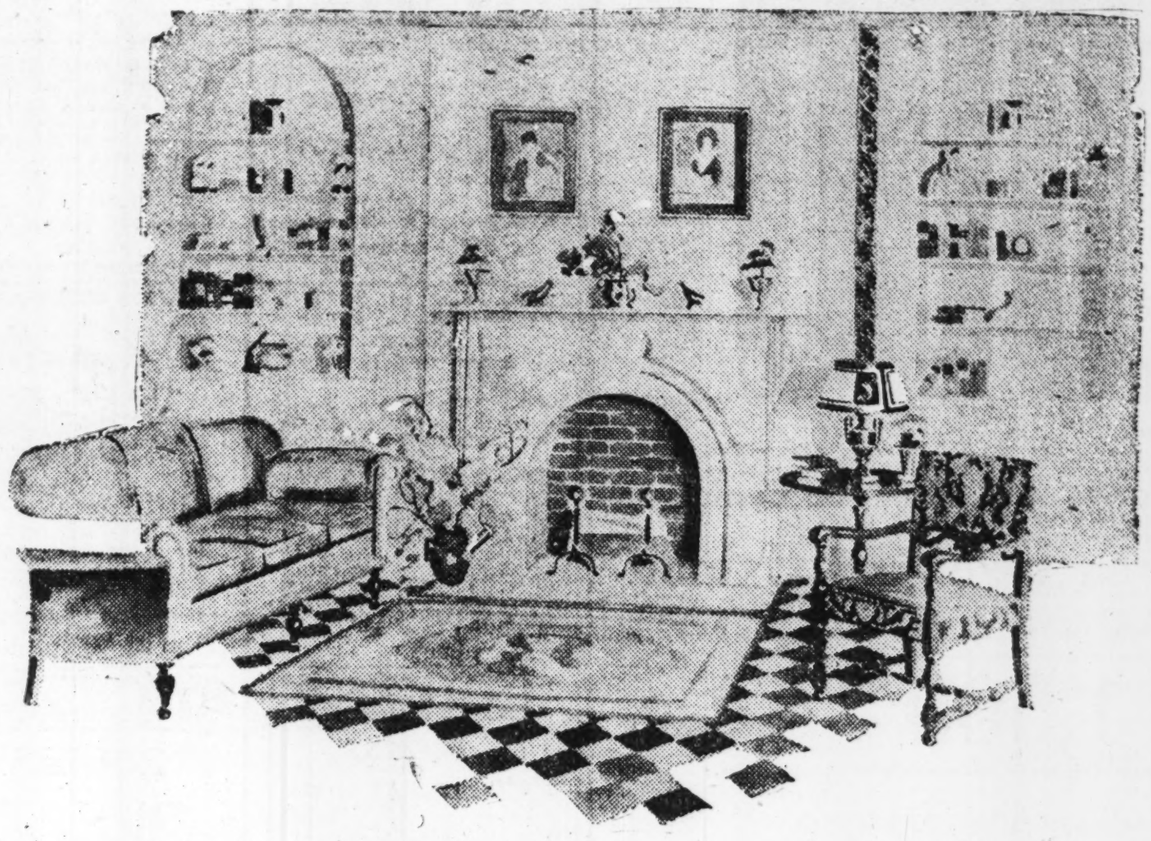

The Toccoa chapter of the D. A. R. has only been organized recently, and this entertainment was their debut party.

Buckeye Club Holds Meeting.

The Buckeye club held a meeting at the home of Mrs. C. T. Baker, Tuesday, February 26, the vice president, Mrs. Floding, presiding.

Birthdays of great men born in February, was the study for the afternoon. Mrs. McKibben read an interesting paper on the life of Abraham Lincoln, followed by a paper by Mrs. Wilson on the life and customs of St. Valentine. Mrs. Alexander discussed the great patriot, George Washington, and compared him with Woodrow Wilson. Responses to roll call were from Longfellow.

A delightful social hour followed.

¶ In order that we may better serve the people of Atlanta and the South---that our efforts may be intensified---we have joined forces with the Wiley Jones Furniture Company, an institution that, in itself, is a monument to Southern furniture merchandising. This consolidation will become effective as soon as we can dispose of our present stock.

¶ Furthermore, we have only a short time left in which to vacate the building we occupy. Selling must be fast.

¶ There is, therefore, a good and imperative REASON why it is to YOUR interest and to OUR interest that this disposal be accomplished at the earliest possible moment. WE are taking a great loss in profits to accomplish it. YOU will reap a great benefit by helping us accomplish it.

¶ In a quiet, conservative manner we are trying to impress upon you that we are NOT CONDUCTING THIS SALE TO MAKE MONEY. Our biggest idea is to liquidate our stock quickly regardless of cost. When you come down to the EMPIRE and see for yourself---see what wonderful quality, what astonishingly low prices, and on what liberal terms purchases may be made you will learn the truth, and will be happy that such a glorious opportunity for furnishing your home has been offered you.

¶ Sales are being conducted all over town, and for worthwhile informative and comparative information we shall appreciate your attending these sales before coming to the EMPIRE. It will give you a more comprehensive understanding of the magnitude of the savings to be realized here.

¶ You people living out of Atlanta will realize great savings by attending this sale. You can buy as conveniently and as economically as can resident customers.

ATLANTA WOMAN'S CLUB WILL INAUGURATE OPERA MUSICALES

Many Prominent Artists Will Be Heard in "Il Trovatore"

The coming week marks the opening of the series of opera musicales, which are annually conducted by the Atlanta Woman's club. The first opera presented this year will be the beautiful and popular "Il Trovatore," which will have among its cast of characters some of the most gifted artists of Atlanta.

Mrs. Jack Lester, who will characterize "Leonora," is noted for her beautiful soprano voice, and Mrs. Bess Merrell Smith, who will assume the role of "Azucena," is instructor of voice at the Atlanta Conservatory of Music and possesses a magnificent contralto. Clifford Durham, as "Manrico" in the opera, is one of the city's most gifted tenors. Tom Hoffman, as "Count de Luca" and Harry Pomar as "Ferrando," with their rich baritone voices, complete the cast for one of the most delightful arrangements for the presentation of "Il Trovatore."

Those familiar with the unusual talent in dramatics possessed by Miss Ada Evelyn Lewis will be delighted to know that Miss Lewis will direct the first operalogue, as well as read the opera, throughout.

There will be seven opera musicales conducted by the Atlanta Woman's club prior to grand opera season. The week following "Il Trovatore" two operalogues will be presented on the same date, "Cavallera Rusticana" and "Pagliacci." Those selected to enter the casts of these two opera musicales will be some of the best talent in the city.

The series of opera musicales have each year proven most cultural and of great benefit to those who wish to attend grand opera and enjoy the famous operas to the fullest extent. Possibly several chosen for this year's season are entirely familiar to a great many lovers and students of music and drama, but it is a magnificent opportunity to review the operas and to hear the most gifted artists in the city in their interpretations. The fee for the entire series is only $2.

Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, president of the Atlanta Woman's club, will be assisted in arrangements by the following committees: Mrs. E. S. Corrigan, treasurer and chairman of ticket committee, assisted by Mrs. W. D. Williamson and Mrs. Arthur Hazzard. Mrs. John M. Cooper, as club music chairman, has appointed the following chairmen for the stage setting committee: Mrs. Harry Poole, Mrs. Earle F. Scott, Mrs. Perry Blackshear, Mrs. Ben Treadwell, Mrs. Frank Berry, Mrs. George Elton Sauls and Mrs. Howard Stacy.

Patronesses for the series of operalogues are Mrs. George Muse, Mrs. John S. Candler, Mrs. C. E. Murphy, Mrs. George W. Forrester, Mrs. Haines McFadden, Mrs. Milton Dargan, Mrs. C. B. Bidwell, Mrs. D. F. Stevenson, Mrs. Frank Carter, Mrs. W. H. Melton, Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, Mrs. Victor Kreigshaber, Mrs. Ira Ryan, Mrs. R. R. Otis, Mrs. Henry Kuhrt, Mrs. Fletcher Spratling, Mrs. M. L. Thrower, Mrs. James Holliday, Mrs. Fred Scantling, Mrs. John R. Hornady, Mrs. Norman Sharp, Mrs. J. A. Carlisle, Mrs. George Ripley, Mrs. Flora McDaniel Pitt, Mrs. W. W. Alexander, Mrs. Norman Poole, Mrs. Wilmer Moore, Mrs. Charles Goodman, Mrs. J. B. McNelly, Mrs. Howard McCall, Mrs. George Obear, Mrs. W. D. Alexander, Mrs. Alyce Taylor, Mrs. J. M. Manry, Mrs. J. P. Billups, Mrs. Charles Jerome and others.

Methodist Church Society To Meet.

The Missionary society of the First Methodist church will meet Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock, Mrs. C. J. Hansell presiding. Circle chairmen will report. Circles are using as Bible study S. B. Meyer's "Devotional Commentary," and for a mission study, "The Leaven in Japan." A delegate will be elected to the annual conference which meets this year in Griffin. Mrs. W. J. Young, Jr., a former member who is now visiting Atlanta, will sing.

CLUB INSTIGATES WOODROW WILSON MEMORIAL DRIVE

Possibly one of the most beautiful memorials to Woodrow Wilson being planned at this time is the two-mile driveway presented for the purpose at the instance of the Atlanta Woman's club by the Morningside Subdivision company, of which J. R. Smith is president. This driveway, under the supervision of a landscape artist, will be beautified by planting elm trees with three to every 100 feet and crepe myrtles between.

This attractively arranged driveway will lead to a plot of ground of triangular shape, which will be planted in shrubbery best fitted to this climate and there in the midst of this beautiful garden of flowers and shrubbery will be placed a bronze tablet bearing an inscription which tells of the honor paid to the great statesman and with what love this plot of ground was dedicated to his memory.

It was through the inspiration of the Atlanta Woman's club that this movement was started and it is possibly the first street planned by a landscape artist that was submitted to the city planning board for its approval. It is also the largest plot of trees dedicated to any one person, certainly the largest in the south.

There are at present twenty workmen preparing the ground for the vast number of trees to be planted and these plants were ordered by wire as soon as the Woman's club and planning board approved the plan.

According to Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, president of the Woman's club, and Mrs. M. C. Hardin, chairman of the memorial tree planting committee of the club, an elaborate program is being worked out for the dedication exercises, which will take place within the next few weeks.

Now, since the spring weather has begun, the farmers at the municipal market are preparing for a great display of fresh fruits, vegetables and dairy products and every housekeeper is anxious to see the spring produce coming in.

The new market building is not far from completion and it will be a joyous day for the women of Atlanta when all the stalls are established and Georgia products are in full evidence. At this time many plans are being made for the opening of the market and a great many stalls are engaged by merchants over the city.

Fresh mustard salad, radishes, new onions and a great variety of new vegetables are now on the market and it would behoove the many housekeepers of the city to investigate the prices and visit the market in order to select vegetables right from the Georgia gardens.

Mrs. Norman Sharp, chairman of the market committee for the Atlanta Woman's club, has asked Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith and the executive board of the Woman's club to be patronesses for the market during the coming week.

East Point Club Holds Meeting.

The East Point Woman's club met Friday afternoon with a large attendance.

Mrs. Christian heard the reports from the chairmen of committees. Old business was disposed of and items of new business introduced for consideration at the March business session. The meeting was then turned over to Mrs. W. D. Morgan, who presented the program.

Professor J. F. McGee, D. J. Simmons, Harry Goodhart and Judge J. C. McKenzie were present and made five-minute talks on timely subjects.

The floral department met Wednesday afternoon with the chairman, Mrs. J. F. McGee, presiding, and discussed plans for cultivation of spring and early summer flower gardens.

NOTED AUTHOR WILL LECTURE AT WOMAN'S CLUB

Three lectures by Edward Tomlinson well-known lecturer and writer, on topics of current interest, will be one of the outstanding events of the Atlanta Woman's club for the month of March from an educational and instructive standpoint. The applied education department of the club will sponsor these lectures and with Mrs. W. W. Alexander, as chairman, will endeavor to arouse the interest of the city in hearing Mr. Tomlinson.

The topics of his discussions will be: "The Question of Race," "Where Is Education Leading?" and "Politics Today." Mr. Tomlinson has for years been a close student of the above subjects, having written several articles appearing in American magazines and it will be an opportunity worthwhile to the men and women of Atlanta to hear him in his views as gained by close study and extensive travel abroad.

Mr. Tomlinson has studied in the United States, Scotland and England; has written for The London Spectator; contributed to American publications; lectured for the Scottish Historical association and was special lecturer to the British armies. Being a Georgian by birth, he is especially pleased to present his findings to an Atlanta audience, after having lectured throughout the country as a member of the American Academy of Political and Social Science.

The arrangement of the dates for the three timely discussions made by Mr. Tomlinson have been made for March 24, 26 and 27, at the Atlanta Woman's club, taking place during the evening hours in order that men as well as women may have the opportunity of hearing him. A round table discussion will take place on each morning following the lectures.

Only a few years ago William Jennings Bryan said: "I am much pleased with young Tomlinson." Ralph Parlette wrote in the Lyceum Magazine: "Edward Tomlinson is the brilliant young southern orator who has already attracted attention in America as a speaker. The world war gave him his baptism of fire. He saw some of the hardest fighting of the war in the Argonne Forest. While in a British hospital as a convalescent, they discovered he was an orator. The result was they sent him speaking to the different camps throughout France."

Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, president of the Atlanta Woman's club, with Mrs. W. W. Alexander, chairman of the applied education department, bespeak the interest of the public in these wonderfully interesting and instructive Tomlinson lectures, given at the woman's club in March.

Even an Expert Overlooked This--

We felt especially flattered the other day when a cleaner in Western Tennessee, who has the reputation among the trade for knowing his business well, sent us in a white crepe de Chine dress with an oil stain in it which had become "fixed" from previous work.

He said that this was the result of the customer's own attempts at removing it.

Our method was so simple, our success so convincing, that even he himself can hardly believe it. We simply used warm glycerine, which absorbed the oil—and then removed the glycerine by sponging.

Message From Mrs. Walter Grace

Mrs. Walter Grace, president of the Georgia division calls attention to the following important matters:

Article VII, section 2, constitution of the Georgia division says, "On the first day of March in each year, each chapter shall pay to the treasurer of the Georgia division the sum of $2., which money shall be used to defray the necessary expenses of the annual convention."

The state essay contest, the subject of which is "Stone Mountain, its message and its memories." Mrs. A. M. Duggan of Hawkinsville is chairman. Many chapters give prizes to the students of local schools as an incentive in addition to the state award.

The approach of Memorial day, Crosses of Service and Crosses of Honor are to be awarded on this year's memorial day. Crosses of Service are for World War veterans and this year will mark the beginning of the bestowal of this token of appreciation of valor and sacrifice on the part of men of Confederate lineage. Application for Crosses of Service must be applied for through chapter president, to whom Mrs. Lee Trammel of Madison will supply blanks. Crosses of Honor are for the veterans of the Sixties.

The historian's fund "We cannot over estimate the splendid work Miss Mildred Rutherford is giving us."

The Stone Mountain confederate memorial. "It is a privilege to have a part in this marvelous work."

Contribution to the division's loan scholarship fund. "Girls look eagerly to us for loan scholarships."

The Children of the Confederacy, Mrs. Leroy Hankinson of Augusta is director; Miss Adeline Baum of Dublin is state organizer. "They will gladly give you assistance and information."

Mrs. Walter Grace,
President, Georgia division
United Daughters of the Confederacy.

Georgia Products.

Quitman chapter, U. D. C. is putting on a Georgia products dinner which is expected to be a brilliant occasion. Mrs. A. L. Tidwell is chairman of arrangements.

Memorial day plans have been placed in the hands of a committee which includes Mrs. W. R. Hunter, Mrs. C. T. Tillman, Mrs. J. R. Davis, Mrs. Lee Branch, Mrs. E. B. Jelks.

This chapter will raise $1,000 for Stone Mountain.

Memorial services for Woodrow Wilson conducted by the chapter were markedly impressive. This chapter is marking the graves of Confederate dead in the Quitman cemetery. Mrs. A. J. Port raised $8 from the sale of flags on Georgia day.

LaFayette Chapter

Chickamauga chapter, of La Fayette, announces the appointment of Mrs. R. S. Steele as chairman of Children's Founders roll for the Stone Mountain Confederate memorial. The chapter observed Georgia day and realized a large sum from the sale of flags, the money being given to the Helen Plane Educational Fund. This chapter answers roll call with "Georginagraphs."

Memorial service for Woodrow Wilson was held by the chapter.

The February meeting was entertained by Hrs. Frank Kirby, assisted by Mrs. A. B. Fortune and Mrs. R. S. Steele. The program of the occasion emphasized Georgia day. Mrs. O. M. Clemons is press chairman for this chapter.

Buena Vista Work

Marion county chapter, Buena Vista, has undertaken to place portraits of General Robert E. Lee, General Stonewall Jackson, and President Jefferson Davis in each if the 23 schools of Marion county. This chapter is contributing to the Jefferson Davis monument fund, the Maury monument fund, and offering a special metal to Marion county contestants for the state essay medal. Memorial day will be observed with impressive exercises, followed by a dinner to the Confederate veterans and World War veterans. Dues are paid to the state on 107 members.

Memorial exercises for Woodrow Wilson were held at the February meeting. Georgia day was emphasized at this meeting, following the memorial service, papers being read on the early inhabitants of Georgia, on famous Georgia women, and on the first graduate from a college for women.

Officers and chairman of this chapter are—president, Miss Minnie C. Lowe; first vice-president, Mrs. Etta Lowe Williams; second vice-president, Mrs. Madge Mae Mershon Clements; recording secretary, Mrs. Annie V. Butt Hirshburg; corresponding secretary, Miss Lillian Greene; treasurer, Mrs. Frances Bethune Parker; registrar, Miss Sarah Haynes Lowe; historian, Mrs. Augusta Edge Williams.

Brunswick Chapter Is Reorganized

The newly reorganized Clement A. Evans chapter, U. D. C. of Brunswick announces a membership of fifty and much U. D. C. work already under way. World War crosses of Service will be bestowed on Memorial day and the Children's Founders roll is receiving much attention. The Jefferson Davis monument fund received a contribution of $5 at the second meeting of the chapter.

Mrs. James S. Wright was hostess to the February meeting, presided over by Mrs. J. M. Couric, president. Mrs. C. H. Leavy is the press chairman.

HEAD OF CANDLER SCHOOL SYSTEM UNDER SUSPENSION

Suspension of M. H. Williams, county school superintendent of Candler county, was announced in a recent issue of Georgia State School Items, a paper published by the state department of education.

Notice of the suspension said: "M. H. Williams, county superintendent of schools for Candler county, was suspended from office on February 18 by the state superintendent of schools. The reason for suspension was that Mr. Williams issued a first grade high school certificate to H. H. Olliff and placed thereon the seal of the county board of education without the authority of same. This certificate was used by Mr. Olliff to obtain a certificate of qualification to run for county superintendent of schools of Jenkins county."

The history of the case was reviewed in full by the paper.

Dance Orchestras Combine To Record Numbers for Victor

Two dance orchestras assist Georgie Price in completing a moving Victor record of two very popular songs. Listen or dance, or both, there is never a moment of lassitude in this combination. First, the Manhattan Merrymakers help this popular entertainer through "California, Here I Come," which is a composition of favorite sons. "I'm Goin' South" is the second selection from "Bombo," as is the first. This time the Virginians furnish the music, appropriately to the tune and the occasion.

Paul Whiteman leads his orchestra through "Limehouse Blues," which is a decidedly unusual type of fox-trot number. Paired with it is "If You'll Come Back" by the Virginians, avowedly pure jazz.

Piron's New Orleans orchestra puts the flavor of gulf winds into two more Victor dance records. "Do Doodle Oom" doesn't read very romantic, and it is really more happily humorous than "West Indies Blues," which is decidedly creole.

Joe Raymond's men and the Bensons share a record this week. "I Wonder Who's Dancing With You Tonight" introduces bits of Schubert's "Serenade," and is a really lovely piece of dance music. "Are You Lonely?" by the Bensons is close to an ideal fox trot.

Warner's Aces Play at Howard All This Week

Warner's Seven Aces, pride of Atlanta's dancing contingent and one of the nation's leading orchestras for the past two years, will appear all next week at the Howard theater, according to Manager Howard Price Kingsmore. The appearance will be the final theater engagement of the Aces before a barnstorming trip through the east, including New York engagements.

The first step toward nation-wide fame came to the Aces' orchestra many months ago via Station WGM, radiophone broadcasting station of The Constitution. For several months the orchestra was the daily feature of the 6 to 7 o'clock broadcast, and the name soon became a byword with hundreds of thousands scattered throughout the hemisphere. In Station WGM's studio the Aces furnished music for dances in a number of the leading cities in Canada, Mexico and along the Pacific coast, and were known far and wide as "The Constitution's Own."

The Aces have played at leading theaters and for club functions and social affairs at leading clubs in the southeastern states during their two years' existence.

The orchestra made a number of phonograph records in the spring of 1923 for a big New York record firm, the sales of which reached an enormous figure, attesting to the popularity of the orchestra.

The Aces' style is strictly original, no imitations of Whiteman's or other big orchestras of the same caliber. They are individual in their renditions, a fact which has placed the orchestra not merely among the best in the nation, but on the topmost position in orchestradom. No orchestra, perhaps, is more widely "aped" by ambitious Americans than the Aces.

Upon closing the Howard engagement the Aces will "hit the trail," playing in all the state capitals and at the largest clubs in the eastern states, en route to New England. After a tour through the northeast, the orchestra will fill an engagement in New York, returning to the city early in May.

Byron Warner is director and pianist of the aggregation, and Tom Brannon, trumpeteer of the outfit, is business manager.

The orchestra is made up of Atlanta boys—eight of 'em.

CUSTOMS LINE CLOSED AT NIGHT ON BORDER

Washington, March 1.—In an effort to curb smuggling and check traffic in contraband, Assistant Secretary Moss of the treasury has ordered customs lines closed at 9 o'clock each night at Tia Juana and Mexicali on the southern California border.

Hereafter business can be transacted across the border only from 7 a. m. to 9 p. m. The order is effective three days after its receipt by the customs collector at Los Angeles.

Assistant Secretary Moss said that representations made to the customs authorities indicated a serious condition resulting from the wide open operation of resorts in Mexicali and Tia Juana.

LABOR PARTY LUCKY, SAYS LLOYD GEORGE

West Hartlepool, England, March 1. Addressing delegates representing the united forces of liberalism in the northern counties of England today, David Lloyd George said that it was just like Great Britain's luck "that the first experiment in socialist administration had come under conditions where it could do the least harm, even conditions which could do a great deal of good," and the experience was having a salutary effect on tempestuous souls of the socialist party.

"I am all for leaving them for some time between the plough handles. They will soon have aching backs and weary hearts, but very much wiser heads, and in the future they will realize you cannot plough from the clouds."

He likened Premier MacDonald to an air squadron leader of socialism, who spent most of his time in the clouds of socialistic idealism, but now he was a changed man since he had joined the infantry and had to trudge on mother earth carrying a knapsack.

"In Mr. MacDonald's first speech as premier," continued Mr. Lloyd George, "all the restraints, reservations and compromises which mundane statesmen hitherto have indulged in were repeated in every particular. When I heard Mr. MacDonald, who had indulged in the shrillest notes, pitching his tune so low and imitating the very modest notes from less pretentious singers, it recalled the memory of many a cracked tenor who had been forced to become a baritone."

Lloyd George said the last government was a spectacle of pitiable fatuity and it was not a high compliment to pay the existing ministers to say that whatever were their defects or shortcomings they were infinitely better than the men they had supplanted. "If the present government," he concluded, "in a moment of folly proposes a capital levy or any measures for the overthrow of private enterprise, the whole of the liberal party will vote against it without regard to the effect on the fortunes of the government."

SOUTHERN BEGINS WAGE HIKE RULE

New York, March 1.—The Wheeling and Lake Erie and the Southern roads today began to pay their train service men a wage increase of 5 per cent.

The Wheeling has announced an agreement with all four train organizations and the Southern railway with its conductors and trainmen. The latter railroad entered into a three-year cooperation agreement whereby the men will get one and one-half per cent in addition to the 5 per cent increase the second year and 3 per cent the third year, provided the ratio of operating accounts to gross revenue is reduced below the 1923 level.

Doris Wittner and other German women leaders are seeking to have German women appointed to the diplomatic service the same as men.

VOTE SHOWS MAJORITY IN FAVOR OF BOK PLAN

New York, March 1.—As the incessant stream of returns on the winning Bok peace plan continues to flow in from every part of the country, public opinion continues overwhelmingly in favor of the plan, according to the American peace award.

The referendum returns have maintained practically the same percentage throughout—they now stand 87.3 in favor of the plan, and 12.7 opposed. The total number of votes received up through February 28, was 562,022—490,549 favoring the plan and 71,473 against it.

Many organizations and communities throughout the country have set up the goal of reaching every one of their members through the referendum.

A letter received Saturday from the chief of the bureau of information, Havana, Cuba, speaking of his interest in the winning plan, said:

"As you are probably aware, Cuba accepted without hesitation the final draft of the Versailles treaty and became at once a member of the league. We have never had occasion to regret it nor have we been able to understand why our sister republic of the north refused to enter this, to us, admirable organization which has for its purpose the same object for which you are working."

MILWAUKEE KLAN DEMANDS OUSTER OF KING KLEAGLE

Milwaukee, Wis., March 1.—Ouster of William Wieseman, king kleagle of the Ku Klux Klan of Wisconsin, is asked in a communication sent to the national headquarters of the klan today by klan No. 1, Milwaukee.

The claim made by the local organization is that the extension division activities in the Wisconsin klan has "degenerated into a money grabbing process in connection wth 'splits' on initiation fees."

The king kleagle is reported as having retaliated by outlawing the local klan, No. 1, and refusing to grant it a charter. The local has asked that a charter be given it, but refuses to have any connection with the extension department.

PEOPLE OF PERSIA TALK OF REPUBLIC

London, March 1.—The people of Persia are censuring the Shah for his repeated lengthy absences in Europe and are talking of founding a republic, says the Teheran correspondent of The Daily Mail. The entire Persian press, he declares, is strongly in favor of the change.

The Shah, who has been in Europe since early November, now is at Nice, where he participated in the "Battle of the Flowers" on Thursday. He was on the continent from January to November in 1922 and also from the fall of 1919 to the spring of 1920.

Another Sunny Spring Day Seen By Weather Man

Another delightful day of spring weather is in store for Atlantans today, according to C. F. von Herrmann, official forecaster for Atlanta. "Fair Sunday, no change in temperature," is the way his prediction reads.

Further, he says, "there is very little unsettled weather anywhere, and conditions are likely to remain favorable for fine weather at Atlanta."

The temperature at 7 o'clock Saturday morning was 44 degrees, with the mercury going above the 60-degree point during the afternoon. Friday's high point was 60 degrees.

In his monthly report, gotten out Saturday morning, Mr. von Herrmann shows that February, 1924, fell 1.82 inches below the normal in rainfall, making a total deficiency for the year to date of 2.59 inches. The average mean temperature for the month was 42.2, 3.1 degrees below normal.

While there was no snowfall any day during the month sufficient in amount to be measured, a "trace" is reported as having fallen on February 5, 6, 20 and 27.

During the month there was a total of 167.1 hours of sunshine, with ten days clear, five partly cloudy and 14 cloudy. It rained on eleven days during the month, three of these showing .25 of an inch precipitation or over. There are no frosts shown in the report, no auroras, halos, either er solar or lunar; no hail, sleet or thunderstorms. Four dense fogs occurred, the report shows.

Average hourly velocity of the wind was 13.6 miles, with the prevailing direction northwest. The highest wind velocity of the month occurred on February 26, when it reached 42 miles per hour, blowing from the east. The mean vapor pressure for the month, readings taken each day at noon, is given as .185.

Mrs. Roy Chapman Andrews, wife of the noted explorer, accompanied her husband as offical photographer on the Asiatic expedition sent out by the American Museum of Natural History to search for the "Missing Link."

What's What in the Shops and about town by Maybelle

Spring!

"Sweet spring, full of sweet days and roses,
A box where sweets compacted lie."

"When in trouble
telephone Dobbs and count the minutes."

My! what a world of assurance that sentence conveys. How many times these past few years we people of Atlanta have been in trouble (tire trouble, lest you be unduly alarmed) and it seemed as though we could count the hours before help came.

Dobbs Tire Co. is a boon to tire-trouble humanity, and no better example of their fine, quick service can be cited than an incident of last Thursday afternoon.

As soon as the skies began to clear, Elizabeth and I longed to be out in the open. We had gotten a short distance beyond West View when Old Man Trouble descended upon us! Luckily enough, Elizabeth had clipped an advertisement of the Dobbs Tire Co., with their telephone number, so she went to a nearby telephone and called the Dobbs Whitehall station (MAin 3678). Then, I followed their suggestion to "count the minutes" and sat looking at my watch. In less time than that!—15 minutes to be exact—here came Dobbs service car, and out of it jumped a courteous, smiling man to attend to the bad tire. "Speed and smiles" is their idea of how to treat a fellow in road-tire trouble, and I just naturally appreciate what this Dobbs service man did for us in his quiet, business-like way.

It's an age of modernity, I rise to remark, when a service company like Dobbs initiates the practice of charging the nominal fee of 75 cents for quick, efficient tire service. Back in the old days when so-called "free service" was the order of the day, there was a feeling of obligation to buy tires from the man who had helped (?) us at a trying time, and there was always that question of tipping the service man who came to our aid. We didn't hesitate to tip our appreciation (often more than the 75 cents fee) if the service man was a negro, but when it happened to be a white man, we just naturally felt embarrassed—to tip or not to tip, that was the question.

I tell you, this new Dobbs tire service is a splendid innovation to Atlanta, and my tip to all motorists is to remember their telephone numbers: MAin 3678 for downtown, south and west relief, and IVy 5646 for north side relief. Or if you are hot (mentally or physically) and can't remember which is which, just call either one.

Maybelle repeats:

"When in trouble, telephone Dobbs and count the minutes."

The coat lapel of the tailored suit is often adorned with a white gardenia.

The cloche, always the cloche in millinery smartness! But nothing so suits the shingled hair and the slim, boyish silhouette of the present day.

..... "daffodils,
That come before the swallow dares and take
The winds of March with beauty."

The "tailleur masculin" is the smartest of spring modes, so at Froshin's it is naturally in evidence!

Nothing is so American, you recall, as the tailored woman. France has merely borrowed this American origination and is now returning it to us with her stamp of Parisian chic!

The stunning suits I saw in Froshin's are boyish rather than mannish. The shoulder is very snug, the sleeve tight fitting, the skirt straight and narrow and short!

Boyish suits, as you know, abound. But every so-called tailored suit is not as tailored as it seems, m' dears. For instance, the difference in some suits and those at Froshin's for $49.75 is the difference in fine tailoring and good quality and that intangible something called "style."

A wise woman unquestionably knows to buy tailoring in her tailored suit, and to her it's Maybelle's solemn advice to go to Froshin's for assurance in correct tailoring and chic, and moderation in price.

The top coat hesitates between the flared and the tube silhouette, so that results are about equally divided.

Black satin for frocks, combining both the satin and the dull sides, is the chic mode for spring-time.

The strictly tailored suit no sooner appeared than it was enthusiastically welcomed by the tailored oxford. Tan oxfords lead in favor.

I'm as Mad
as a March hare about the very lovely spring silks I saw in Keely's yesterday!

New as dawn! Exquisite as spring itself!

Printed silks with gorgeous colorings and designs of the East are foremost in the printed silks for spring. And to the splendor of Chinese and Persian motifs are added charming patterns of the Swedish peasant, patterns classic in their quaint, medieval design.

Satin crepes in light and street colors are also found at Keely's—silks of such delight as to tempt any lover of the beautiful to select at once one's best, best springtime gown.

Out of mere wisps of these clingy stuffs—a handful, only, of colorful softness—the modiste-magician (or yourself, for that matter) creates the clothes we love so well.

Of particular interest to me (and I hope to you, too, dear reader) is the romance I saw dreaming in Keely's silk deparment. Romance in the form of lingerie silk—a great profusion of it! Bride-like colorings, and white as well, beckon the trousseau-collector and promise rare beauty when the artful needle has plied its tricks.

Keely's, we all know, is renowned for its high-grade, dependable, beautiful silks. And this season, seems to me, Keely has fairly outdone herself in bringing spring to you in the soft folds of lovely new silks.

The Mah Jongg parasols are distinctly Chinese in the designing of their silken coverings and the carving of their short stubby handles. Almost always the Mah Jongg parasol has numerous ribs—sixteen, as a usual thing.

Something quite new and smart is tailored lace neckwear, which is dressy and yet adheres to the severe lines necessary to the tailored woman.

We of Atlanta
take great pride in celebrating the third anniversary in our midst of the wonderful Lyric Players.

They say "three" is a charm. To each and every one of the Lyric Players, I hope this third year you are about to enter upon holds a special charm for you!

Let us not forget for an instant that Atlanta theatergoers owe the Lyric Players and Mr. Crovo, the capable manager of the Lyric, a very great debt. We have witnessed 104 splendid plays in as many weeks—104 Broadway successes which, except for the Lyric, many of us would never have seen. The opportunity they have given us to see the best in drama produced in a most acceptable and artistic manner is a source of gratification to all appreciative theater lovers.

"Do you know," said a muchly traveled friend as we left the Lyric after a very enjoyable performance, "you couldn't hope to see a more finished production unless by an all-star cast in the city of New York."

What do we care for New York's all-star casts, thought I to myself, when we of Atlanta can enjoy a fine new play each week by the all-star cast of the Lyric Players!

"The Joyous Book of Spring Lies open, writ in blossoms"
—and at High's their joyous stock of Spring lies open, writ in savings.

Pardon, please, this paraphrasing of such a momentous event as High's Ten-Days-March-Selling Campaign. But it does seem to me that the joy of spring cannot be more happily expressed to Atlanta femininity than in savings at High's on spring apparel.

March officially opens the spring season—and High's, wishing to do the season honor, has arranged this wonderful ten-day feast of values.

From roof to basement there is campaign selling. Warfare is waged on every possible penny! I am sure High's declaration, which we have all read in the papers, to give us, the people of Atlanta, the vantage point on every article within its four walls, is of decided interest!

Savings on underthings (brides-to-be, note well)!
Savings on gloves!
Savings on suits!
Savings on corsets!
Savings on hosiery!
Savings on chinaware!
Savings on silks!
Savings on toiletries!
Savings on everything are such you can ill afford to miss!

Ten days slip quickly by. If I were you, I'd visit High's the very first thing Monday morning!

BOUDOIR MIRRORS OF WASHINGTON

Vivid Pictures of Social Life at the Nation's Capital Given in a Series of Articles Written by a Woman Who Is Herself a Member of the Inner Circle

How Alice R. Stood on Head At Her Party

President's Daughter Didn't Care a Hoot for Social Conventions, but Was No Poseur.

The Constitution presents today the first installment of "The Boudoir Mirrors of Washington," the most remarkable portrayal of capital society, from the inside, ever penned. It is the anonymous work of a woman familiar with every twist and turn of social affairs in Washington during a period covering five administrations. It is a recital of today with the past for a background.

"The Boudoir Mirrors" will appear in this section in no other paper than The Constitution. An installment will be published each day.

(Copyright, 1923, in United States and Canada, by Women's News Service, Inc. Released exclusively by North American Newspaper Alliance. All rights reserved.)

FOREWORD.

I wonder if I dare!

There is so much unrecorded history in Washington—inside history—so many unrelated facts; the social ascent, the political glissade, the reason WHY!

No, there isn't an ounce of malice in me. My soul oozes sweet sympathy, yes, and my claws are carefully manicured, but. . . I wonder if I dare face the task! However, it will be great fun rummaging in the past and the near-past and revealing the present; holding the mirror to facts—in their curling pins, and without powder on their nose.

Sometimes people take themselves seriously!

I have lived in the capital so long, and have seen the rise and fall of many administrations—and people—that looking back is like exploring an attic.

I remember so many women when they first paddled on the outer edge of the social puddle. Now they can float alone, without even wings. The stumbling newcomer who tripped over traditions now considers herself the social arbiter. I particularly remember one senator's wife; she learnt the road by bitter experience. Well, she ought to know it. Now, she seems to have acquired a sort of plush finish.

When I see Alice Roosevelt Longworth come into the senate gallery and fling aside her hat, I always seem to recall the day she stood on her head to convince a woman that exercise was the best cure for lumbago.

But if I let my pen run riot now I shall get most terribly mixed up. I think I will take them one by one, or in groups, the official, diplomatic and social people who have hit the high spots in private as well as in public. I am claiming this as a privileged occasion, and if sometimes I switch my mirror on and catch unexpected people in their mental negligee, well. . . I will leave the verdict to you.

Alice Roosevelt Longworth.

Take Alice Longworth. She's a singular character; that's what she is . . . singular. There was a time when she was considered daring. Perhaps she was. Yet I would rather call her singular.

As a child she was singularly shy. You would scarcely believe that, but she was. As a girl she was singularly impulsive. No one doubts that. As a woman she is still singular; she retains her individuality, those forceful characteristics inherited from her father, which set her a little apart.

Few women in America, outside the active workers in some public cause, have focussed public interest to such an extent as Alice Longworth.

Poseur? I say not. What she does, unconventional though it may be, is not inspired by a desire to shock so much as an expression of self-determination, a vigorous protest against irksome customs and restrictions. Her attitude is one of supreme indifference to public opinion, a don't-care-a-hoot.

Other people may model their modes and manners according to precedents, but Alice Longworth will leap the social barrier with the same agility that she performs athletic stunts such as standing on her head.

I must tell you about that.

One day a woman sat miserably talking about her health. She detailed her symptoms and their reactions, her sufferings and the heroic martyrdom which never permitted her pain to dim the happiness of her home. You know the sort of woman!

"Have you ever tried standing on your head?" asked Alice, leaning forward and betraying a sudden interest.

The woman looked at her a moment, uncertain whether to take offence. But there was not a flicker of a smile on that Roosevelt face.

And She Shows How.

"It acts like a charm," she said. "Here, lend me a safety pin."

She secured the hem of her skirt between her knees, annd taking a cushion, placed it on the floor.

The hypochondriac watched with bewildered interest.

Alice Longworth put her head on the cushion and shot her legs aloft, where she remained poised perfectly.

The woman gasped annd looked at the faces of the other guests. Oh, yes, there were quite a number present. They all knew Alice, and being deeply rooted in respectable orthodoxy they envied the woman her daring, because she could do it and get away with it. No other woman in that room could have stood on her head and retained such perfect equilibrium of body or composure of mind.

"There, you try that every day, and you won't have lumbago or heart trouble," and she stood erect, returned the safety pin, and resumed her seat with leisurely ease.

All the world knows, of course, that Alice was one of the pioneers in smoking, and left a trail of ashes and smouldering disgust through conservative circles. The disapproval of the dames was to her like the ash and she flicked it aside as meriting no more consideration. She was not deliberately rude but rather delighted in the shocked look of her elders. She came and went like a merry flash. Alice Roosevelt had many of the privileges of a princess without any of the restrictions imposed by court conventions.

One night old Mrs. Leiter gave a party. It was a large and gorgeous affair, with diplomats and officials and titles there. Oh, this was some years ago, before the Turkey Trot and cigarettes had been accepted in the Best Society.

A Turkey Trot Episode.

Few women were smoking then, and those who did kept it dark. Madame Riano had acquired the art in Spain. She had been over with the ambassador and had fallen into line with her adopted countrywomen.

In the middle of old Mrs. Leiter's ball, Alice Longworth took it into her head to give an exhibition of the new dance, the Turkey Trot. But to add zest to the performance she lit a cigarette first and smoked while she danced.

She sailed down the middle of the room, puffing little jets of smoke at the ceiling, to the horror of the women. I forget who the man was who danced with her that night.

As one woman said, "Alice looked like a steam engine coming down a crimped track."

Society was shocked; unusually shocked. Even the press was shocked. Such behavior at a private ball! Not alone Washington papers beat the air in protest but New York made this notorious young woman a headliner, and the episode was related in full as a horrible example of modernism run riot.

"Now isn't that the cutest story you ever heard?" Alice said, laughing, when she read the details of her conduct, tucked, frilled and flounced and set forth for the public.

Some of you will remember Count Cassini, who was Russian ambassador during the Roosevelt regime. He appeared in Washington accompanied by a young and beautiful lady, known as the Countess Cassini.

It soon became known that she wasn't a countess, that she wasn't any sort of a Cassini. Old Washington, sedate, mid-Victorian Washington, put up its lorgnette and then dropped it. The alleged countess became invisible to the naked eye. There was merely a hole in the air where she stood.

Official Washington looked at each other behind its feather fans and said:

A Bond of Human Friendliness.

"Well, really, my dear—but one must draw the line somewhere!"

So they drew it at the countess.

The countess, however, made a singular appeal to Alice Roosevelt. She's that sort. If she likes people, she doesn't ask for their birth certificate. Perhaps it was the adventurous spirit. But whatever the bond, the "Countess" Cassini and the "Princess" Alice became inseparable companions. "Princess" Alice was a familiar press title for the White House daughter during her father's regime. It wasn't her regal bearing, however, which induced reporters to so designate her, but rather her royal indifference.

What did these two do?

Hurdle racing was one popular pastime. After dinner they would arrange the ottoman, chairs and other furniture at intervals round the room and have a hurdle race.

If you backed Alice you always backed a favorite, for she generally came in the winner. She didn't let skirts impede her progress by hanging down too long. A hitch or two and away she went. There is no doubt that Alice had a high old time.

The Russian ambassador finally rushed back to Russia and returned with the announcement that his fair companion had been adopted. Yes, adopted! Washington matrons didn't even blush watermelon pink . . . and some of them, even then, were nearly sophisticated.

But the Russian after-thought didn't mend matters. Washington still refused to accept the countess, though it didn't fail to see the fair Alice at her side, and to say—well, more than its prayers. But Alice, of course, was always socially acceptable.

She Doffs Her Hat.

Some of us here remember, not long after, one of the Sunday papers carried a highly flavored, largely illustrated story of the hapless countess, who, it seems, is now living in retirement somewhere in Italy, earning a precarious living by taking in plain sewing. Now, if she had come to Washington, Alice might have been able to divert considerable custom her way.

Not that clothes loom largely on her horizon. Neither as Alice Roosevelt nor as Mrs. Longworth had she been absorbed in dress.

Any day you may see her come into the Senate. In winter a heavy beaver coat envelops a figure still slim and graceful. Her hat, no matter how becoming, is flung instantly aside, showing her hair growing rather prettily around her forehead and knotted at the back. It is the same in the few private homes where she visits. Off comes her hat the minute she is inside the door.

Alice has big dreamy eyes; at least they look dreamy until her interest is roused. Then they light up with vivid intelligence. Her skin is smooth and fair and has no suggestion of the beauty parlor. In fact she has no artifice of that kind, and her charm though definite is elusive.

Did you know that Alice blue was named for her? She was always very partial to dull blues and this shade became popular during her residence at the White House. Since then, of course, we have had the Harding blue, and the Princess Mary blue and Tutankhamen blue.

When rubberneck tourists come chattering and clattering into the Senate chamber and the barker points out the persons and places of interest, he has only to indicate the hatless woman leaning forward in the Senate gallery, listening intently.

"That is Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, daughter of Theodore Roosevelt," he says.

Politics Her Game.

Interest in the Senate instantly wanes. All eyes turn to the Roosevelt daughter and there is admiration, almost reverence at times, in the eager look from the mixed group.

In many ways she is like her father. Over and over again, I have watched her, but she shows no embarrassment; in fact, she seems absolutely unconscious of this scrutiny.

Interest in politics has always been very real to her and she has found it an absorbing topic. An interesting debate in the Senate was a lure she could not resist.

Not long after her marriage, I think it was, she had given a big luncheon party: In the middle of it someone called her up to say that an important issue had suddenly developed in the Senate.

Grabbing a hat and hurling an abrupt apology at her guests she left the astonished crowd to finish the party without a hostess.

Why, even last year she went to New York for Christmas with the intention of staying over New Year. No sooner had the economic conference, proposed by Senator Borah, crowded the murders off the first page, than she came home. Politics comes first with her always. She sat in the gallery listening, her languid eyes alight.

"Hullo, I thought you were staying in New York until after New Year?" one woman said to her.

"Fancy staying in New York, with all this happening here," and she flung out a gesture indicating the senate floor, where a wordy conflict had inconsiderately wakened Vice President Coolidge, then presiding.

Gloves vs. Asparagus

Alice was only two days old when her mother died. Her grandmother, Mrs. Martha Roosevelt, died the same day, and the double tragedy overshadowed the arrival of this vital little person. Her aunt, Anna Roosevelt—she was afterwards Mrs. Cowles—took charge of the baby until Theodore Roosevelt married Edith Carow in London. But Theodore Roosevelt was always particularly fond of Alice; she had a special corner in his heart and there was a rare comradery between them.

I think it was back in the early seventies that someone divided the inhabitants of the United States into three groups—saints, sinners and the Beecher family. A more recent version would have substituted the Roosevelt family, for presumably they have always been a law unto themselves.

I remember a dinner at the White House one night. It was the first time I had been a guest of President Roosevelt. Alice wore a dress of her namesake blue, and long white kid gloves. I fairly gasped when I saw her eat asparagus with her fingers without removing her gloves! It may have been a bet, or a dare, but it was probably just a perverse impulse, or somebody especially correct, whom she wanted to shock! She was never in awe of the great and parental discipline did not impose too rigid a regulation upon personal conduct.

Alice Roosevelt was terribly disappointed when her father refused to let her go to London for the coronation of King Edward. But for consolation she had that memorable Taft trip to the Philippines. That was about a year later, and oh! the wonderful stories we heard about that tour—stories in which the fair Alice was star actor.

And the Sacred Elephant.

Nicholas Longworth was one of the Taft party and the romance, which had been budding, blossomed fully on the voyage.

There is no doubt Alice supplied conversation for many a dinner party by her activities in the Far East.

"My dear! Have you heard about Alice Roosevelt and the sacred elephant?" or "Do you know what Alice did in a Chinese temple?"

That she was the theme of conversation in no way dimmed her ardor for adventure. If fellow travelers did relate how she had, when dared, dived fully dressed into the plunge bath, what did she care? And if there was nearly a war because she had ridden a sacred elephant outside a Chinese temple, while the pigtailed officials prayed for vengeance . . . or was it an encore? Why worry?

Goodness, how time passes! That is over seventeen years ago. I wonder how many remember the excitement there was about her engagement and wedding and the maneuvering for invitations?

No one was surprised at the engagement, because the barometer had been "set fair" for some little time. After its announcement Alice seemed supremely happy. Functions at the white house took on an added interest.

All through the winter, I remember, each day Alice would accompany Nick to the capitol. Even on her 22d birthday, a few days before her marriage, she made her pilgrimage to the shrine of politics with her future spouse.

And the wedding! Washington will never quite forget that!

The president wished to make it a quiet affair, but that couldn't be done. Close relatives and important officials were the basis of the invitation list, but it stretched and grew until it was a thousand names long.

Royalty Sends Gifts.

Social America was on tip-toe, hoping for an invitation. The has-beens tried resuscitation and the never-wasers resorted to novel tricks to break in. Many people quite unknown to the Roosevelts sent expensive presents and then brazenly asked for invitations. Their gifts were promptly returned.

Strange, how some people seem to spend their lives courting snubs, never content with where they are. I could tell you a few who have . . . but that must wait till I get started on breaking into society and the best methods to use. Some jimmy the lock and others creep in on the dumbwaiter.

But to return to the presents. Exaggerated stories of the value of the gifts and jewels being showered upon the bride-elect grew out of the president's reluctance to have the list published. Fed by imagination, they grew alarmingly. This brought a crowd of appeals. Some asked that Alice should give from her plenitude to various worthy causes. Others made personal requests for a silver teapot or a few spoons, where there had been duplication. They had caught the souvenir habit. A few anonymous epistles were sent with a hint of future peril should she retain this abundance which had been thrust into her hands.

Nearly all foreign royalty laid gifts at her feet. We were so excited waiting to see what would come next. The Spanish king sent antique jewelry, Austria a diamond and pearl pendant. I forget what the king of England sent, but the jeweled bracelet from the kaiser, I think, Alice afterwards gave to the Red Cross during the war. I know the French gift was Gobelin tapestry and the Italian king sent mosaic from Florence. So did Pope Pius X. The Taft party, having watched the romance grow and flourish, gave her a necklace of diamonds and aquamarines. Embroideries and silk came from China and Japan and I think Nick Longworth gave his bride a diamond necklace.

They were married on a Saturday and congress adjourned without avowing a reason, so as to avoid establishing a precedent. Not that the marriage of a president's daughter and a congressman happens often. But you never know.

I remember Nellie Grant (Mrs. Algernon Sartoris) was there. She had been married in the white house 32 years before. Alice's was the tenth white house marriage.

In spite of all those jewels, Alice Longworth doesn't care a fig for personal ornaments. Jewelry makes no appeal to her. When earrings were not fashionable she always wore them. Since the demand for earrings in the 10c stores has so definitely indicated the trend of fashion, she has ceased to dress her ears. A long platinum chain, studded with diamonds, is one of her favorite ornaments and from this she suspends a gold turtle as big as a doorstop. It is rather incongruous, but somehow it has a personal appeal to her and that outweighs all fashion.

A few years after the marriage of Alice I had a western woman staying with me. She was tremendously elated one day when we received an invitation to a dinner at which Alice was to be present. She had never seen any of the Roosevelts and all her interest seemed to center in the Longworth pair.

There were five women at that party whose jewels were worth the proverbial king's ransom.

We talked to Mrs. Marshall Field, who was clustered with pearls as big as hen's eggs. Mrs. Ned McLean wore her diamond tiara, and the famous Hope diamond which is, of course, the largest in the world. Beside Mrs. McLean sat Mrs. Townsend, one of the cave dwellers, who has seen the rise and fall of many administrations and was in all the glory of her far-famed bauble. While Mrs. Joe Leiter was all a-glitter.

In the midst of this bejeweled group sat Alice Longworth, and she didn't wear a single ornament!

"Not a Diamond on Her."

When we got home and sat talking over the events of the evening, and discussing the clothes—you know how women do when they brush their hair—the western woman said:

"So that was Alice Roosevelt, and not a diamond on her!" There was a tinge of disappointment in her voice for I believe she has expected her to look like the Queen of Sheba, after having read the list of wedding presents.

Alice has always been a person of few intimate friends and Sunday evening supper at the Longworth home is an exclusive affair—exclusive in so far as you must be one of that intimate circle.

Come and have supper; Nick feels like playing tonight."

That is the probable form her invitation will take. Nick Longworth is a violinist of more than mateur ability, but he plays seldom—only when the inspiration stirs him.

One night I particularly remember. There must have been about twenty people there, each wearing the garb society had prescribed for such semi-formal occasions.

Alice received us in a costume of her own designing—long black satin trousers and a loose embroidered blouse.

"I always like to wear trousers when I listen to music," she said, curling up on the divan among the cushions. "Skirts get in the way when I sit like this—and I always do when Nick plays."

Careless Shampooing Spoils The Hair

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Many soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much free alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, which is pure and greaseless, and is better than anything else you can use.

Two or three teaspoonfuls is sufficient to cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy, wavy, and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.—(adv.)

Dandruff Soon Destroys the Hair

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. Four ounces is all you willy need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.—(Adv.)

Nurse Stacey's Suggestions to Middle Aged Women

MRS. H. STACEY
COLLINSVILLE, ILLINOIS

A MOST trying period of a woman's life is that of middle age, fraught with danger to some extent, and invariably with most annoying symptoms, such as hot-flashes, smothering spells, nervous troubles, irregularities and fainting spells.

When a woman like Nurse Stacey after many years of caring for the sick writes a letter of praise for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound like the following, it should influence other women who are passing through the Change of Life to try it.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a root and herb medicine especially adapted to act upon the feminine system. It helps nature to build up the weakened, nervous system, and enables women to pass this trying period with the least possible annoying symptoms.

Nurse Stacey's Letter Follows:

COLLINSVILLE, ILL.—"I could almost write a book in praise of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. In the first place my husband induced me to try it and I have continued taking it off and on for years. I have become a well woman from its use and am now taking it through the Change of Life just to be on the safe side. I first took it for backache and a weak condition of the whole system and I think it saved my life and my baby. She is now a mother and takes it herself and I think I can count as high as a hundred women I have recommended the Vegetable Compound to, as I am a practical nurse. Use my letter in any way you see fit for I will stand by what I write."—Mrs. H. STACEY, Collinsville, Illinois.

Another Woman's Similar Experience

"During the Change of Life I was always tired and weak, could hardly do my work and did not care to go anywhere or talk to people. After I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I noticed a change and before I had taken four bottles of it I felt like a new person. I can and always will recommend it in cases like mine."—Mrs. JOS. WANISH, 1315 S. 14th St., Manitowoc, Wisconsin.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

W. GURNEY BENHAM.

Benham's Book of Quotations. Familiar Sayings, Proverbs and Household Words is a most attractive and useful book. It is a collection of quotations from British and American authors with many thousands of proverbs, familiar phrases and sayings from all sources, including Hebrew, Arabic, Greek, Latin, French, German, Italian, Spanish and other languages, with full verbal and classified index.

There are between 40,000 and 45,000 references—these being selections from ancient, modern and contemporary authors and including writers of all periods of all lands.

This is an entirely new revision of the first edition which sold very rapidly—the original edition involved nearly twenty years of continuous labor and research and upon its publication and examination it was considered, at that time the most complete and useful volume of quotations ever contributed to the libraries of the world, or to the home library where it is a real treasure not only to the college contingent, but to the members of your home each of whom have their literary clubs.

This book has been in constant use in the British Museum library and in all the principal libraries, public and private, of Great Britain, and in our own country of America it is well known as a valuable addition to the reference books of schools and libraries.

And now we mention the class or profession that will find it the most useful and convenient—authors who are too busy for research work, journalists who are sometimes transformed into speakers at a moment's notice, and professional men and women who are being called upon for the very sayings of those well-known, well-remembered authors and writers of a brilliant past.

The "Book of Quotations" is convenient, attractive, complete and reliable, and the long suffering compiler will not only have the thanks but the appreciation of the many men and women who use it as a "first aid."

The author is a newspaper man of Colchester, England, where orders can be sent. Price cloth, $4.00, leather $6.50. Address all communications to W. Gurney Benham, Colchester, England.

NEW FICTION

The Furthest Fury. A Fleming detective story. The story of a double crime, and without a motive. The author of this thrilling tale is Carolyn Wells, whose stories can never be called "left overs." Lippincott's.

The Fir and the Palm. By Elizabeth Bisco, author of "I Have Only Myself to Blame," etc. The author transplants her young and beautiful heroine from the poverty of an Italian boarding house to "Helen's Court," one of England's most popular country houses where she becomes initiated as a member of a house party composed of smart women and clever men Putnam's.

The Ranch of the Thorn. An adventure story by William H. Hamby. The hero is Neal Ashton, the ranch is in Mexico, and there is plenty of action from the time he arrives to take possession of it until the climax, when after many trials and troubles he makes his dreams come true. Chelsea House. New York City.

The Joyous Adventurer. By Ada Barnett. A tale of a dear every day professor whose adventures are many, varied and thrilling, the last being the adoption of a baby boy whom he named William but who later was nicknamed by Gerry the Cowboy, as young "Copper Top." The story will have to be read for the reader to really find the purpose of the author, though the dominant note of the book is its call to the great out-of-doors Putnam's. New York.

You. Can the modern woman live by love alone? This is the theme of the story contributed by Magdeleine Marx, author of "Woman." Is romantic love possible in our world today? This is the leading thought in "You." Thomas Seltzer. New York

The Stone Path. By Maud H. Chapin, author of "Rush-light Stories," etc. The author has located the 16th century love story in Florence, Italy, weaving it around the beautiful daughter of a well-known citizen and a young portrait painter.

She wields the brush with a steady hand as she brings out the beauty and the delicate lines of an old, old story. Duffield & Co. New York City.

A Warning to Wives. By Hester E. Hosford, whose book, "The Public Policies of Woodrow Wilson," has been widely read. The author has not selected a very attractive title for her new volume, and in most cases the five hundred or more pages would be a waste of paper, for each wife has to work out her own affairs—the best advice being a heart of love with plenty of commonsense to back it. (Review later.) The Stratford Co. Boston.

Eight Panes of Glass—by Robert Simpson, is a novel of the Scottish Highlands. Mr. Simpson is the author of "The Bite of Benin," "The Gray Charteris," etc.

There is always an appeal about a Scotch story. Who does not remember the dear old doctor in "Beside the Bonnie Briar Bush?" This is another story of plain everyday life among the lads and lassies of dear old Scotland with all the Scotch frills of a first class love affair. Frederick A. Stokes company, New York.

The Ranch of the Thorn. An adventure story by William H. Hamby. There is a far away place called Cordoba, a quaint Mexican town, where Neal Ashton, a young American, finds himself standing on the porch of the Grand Hotel Zeballos, watching the life that was just beginnig to stir.

Among the things upon which he gazed were "three burros loaded with wood coming down the middle of the street. A Mexican woman with a red manton about her head and shoulders crossed the plaza; a dark thin old man carrying a long pole with a cluster of feathers at the end; the deep bells of the cathedral across from the plaza boomed slowly; from every direction worshippers, mostly women, came like ghosts of the night and slipped quickly into the shadowy doorway of the great church, a Ford came rattling fretfully up the cobbled street—a single American passenger got out. He entered the hotel and knocked on room 14 which opened out on the balcony. Neal Ashton listened to the interesting conversation that followed: "Buenos dias."—Buenos dias, senor. Habla usted spanol?"

On taking charge of his ranch Neal Ashton soon learns that the seven previous owners of this same ranch had mysteriously disappeared.

This is what the reader has staring at him when he begins the story, just as the hero did when he began his new life in the great-out-of-doors—forming a background of a riot of tropical colors which held up to present an exciting picture of intense action which ends with a thrilling climax. Chelsea House, publishers, New York city.

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS.

Adventures in the Arts. By Marsden Hartley—"The life of an artist as it is mirrored in a thousand emotions and delights." Informal chapters on painters, vaudeville and poets. The introduction is by Waldo Frank who says among other things "I know of no American book like this one. I do not believe American painting heretofore capable of so vital a response and of so athletic an appraisal," etc.

Among the subjects discussed are "Concerning Fairy Tales and Me," "Whitman and Cezanne," "American Values in Painting," "Modern Art in America," "Revaluation in Impressionism," etc. Mr. Frank continues: "The author has given us the life of an artist as it is mirrored in a thousand emotions and delights." Boni & Liveright, New York.

Our Nuns. Their varied and vital service for God and country. By Rev. Daniel A. Lord, S. J. This volume deals mostly with the human side of the institution in which these patient, self-sacrificing messengers play a great part. There are flashes of sunshine as well as shadows in the lives of all men and women, and in this instance the author makes even division so that it is ready a delightful book filled with humor as well as pathos. Benziger Bros., New York.

The Reconstruction of the Spiritual Ideal is a collection of six Hibbert lectures which Dr. Adler delivered in Manchester college, Oxford. Dr. Adler is a leader of the New York Society for Ethical Culture, professor of political and social ethics in Columbia university and author of many interesting books. D. Appleton & Co., New York.

A Canadian Publishing House. The frontispiece is an attractive building called "St. Martin's House"—the next page presents a picture of Sir Frederick MacMillan, "The Head of the House," of which the following from John Morley's Recollections appropriately applies:

"Aptly has it been said by one of the most brilliant writers of our day, that the great publisher is a sort of minister of letters, and is not to be without the qualities of a statesman."

The MacMillan Co., especially of New York, and its president, George Pratt Brett, are well known to the readers of the United States, for MacMillan's books can be found in the frozen north and in the warm sunshine of Florida during the same months. But MacMillan's Canadian publishing house is not so well known though in the 18 years of its existence it has been the popular gateway for the works of the best and the most popular Canadian authors, short sketches of whom are given in this little volume.

POETRY AND DRAMA.

The Dramatic Publishing Co., of Chicago, keep in stock a complete line of plays and entertainment books—the plays are suitable for amateurs and professionals, and nearly all of them may be played free of royalty or for a small royalty.

The above informations is given in response to numerous inquiries as to where entertainment books can be obtained. This company will be glad to send their catalogue to anyone writing for it.

Beyond the Skyline. Short poems pertaining to the Northland, by C. Edward Cone, "Bard of the Kiskowim," whose collection of poems will not fail to find a responsive chord in the reader's heart.

"We were dreamers, dreaming greatly
In the man-stifled town,
And we yearned beyond the sky-line
Where the strange roads go down.
—Kipling.

"Twas a sky-line rough and ragged
That was given us to view,
And the peaks snow-capped and jagged
Ever pierced the ether blue,
While the sun—bent on adorning,
With his strong sure strokes and bold
Painted them at eve and morning—
Painted them with red raw gold."
—Edward Cone.

The Wander Weed. And Seven Other Little Theater Plays, by Elia W. Peattie. This volume contains eight one-act plays—the characters and the scenes are located in the mountains of North Carolina. These plays do not deal in the usual comic style but realism goes hand-in-hand with mysticism. They are interesting little dramas of the heart, intellect, and are really fine literary plays. Publishers, Chas. H. Sergel & Co., Chicago

Enzio's Kingdom and Other Poems, by William Alexander Percy. A collection of beautiful poems on subjects that will appeal to the reader. It is an attractive volume and suitable for a friendly gift. Yale University Press, New Haven.

RELIGIOUS BOOKS.

The Power of an Endless Life, by Henry Hallum Saunderson, who, feeling that on account of the bubbles that have been blowing for the past few years in connection with real Christianity, sends out this little message for a return to the old-time strength of the faith that has radiated our lives since Biblical days.

"The central theme is touched on throughout the march of the book and at the end emerges with definiteness the idea that only conviction of immortality can dignify and purify human life."

The writer has not woven a modern story of Christianity but he writes of the eternal story of immortality which gains in confidence and strength from invisible sources and "illuminates the landscape of life with an unfading radiance." The Century Co. New York.

CURRENT MAGAZINES.

The Antiquarian is a monthly magazine for the collector of antiques, works of art and rarities, Kenelm Digby, in The New York Evening Post, said recently:

". . . We wish to call your attention, before we leave off today, to "The Antiquarian," edited by Esther Singleton . . . It is the best magazine for the collector of antiques, works of art and rarities . . .

The Century for March leading article is an interesting sketch of President Coolidge, by Clinton W. Gilbert, who has at last made his debut as the author of "The Mirrors of Washington," etc. Mr. Gilbert, something like the well-known Circuit Rider of the South, prefaces his remarks with some pleasant words, or a threadbare anecdote: "Richard W. Irwin, of Northampton, Mass., in 1907, said of the newly-elected member of the Massachusetts house of representatives, "Like the singed cat, he is better than he looks."

The World Traveler, though published in New York by Albert S. Crockett and an able staff of writers, is indeed a traveler, for it can be found everywhere. The issue for March is devoted mostly to Holland. The cover design in rich colors, by Holland Rice, "In Holland," portrays a beautiful maiden. The frontispiece is the "House in the Woods," in attractive gray tones which is the favorite residence of the Queen of Holland. The magazine is attractively illustrated with pictures of scenes in America as well as across the water.

PLAN OPPOSITION TO FOREIGN BLOC

Washington, March 1.—Immigration occupied the attention of the house again today when Representative Cable, republican, Ohio, advocated formation of an "American bloc" to combat what he termed a "foreign bloc" working against the Johnson immigration bill.

Representative Rankin, democrat, Mississippi, told the house that democratic members are receiving letters threatening them with a republican administration next year if they allow the Johnson bill to pass. Mr. Cable said the same was true on the republican side. Mr. Rankin inquired of Mr. Cable if he thought this propaganda was working on Secretary of State Hughes, whom he believed was opposed to the measure. Mr. Cable answered "I doubt it."

"If the committee would report out a bill suspending immigration I believe the house would support it," Mr. Cable declared.

Representative Sabath, democrat, Illinois, a native of Czecho-Slovakia, and a member of the house immigration committee, declared that there was no such thing as a "foreign bloc" in existence, as far as he knew. "The country has not suffered on account of immigration," he declared. "It has helped to build it up.

"There is no danger from the new immigration, as they have demonstrated their loyalty as the old immigration has," he said.

Representative Johnson, republican, Washington, author of the immigration measure, declared there was no hatred in the bill. "If I had my way and wrote a bill only for my views, I would restrict immigration amost to the vanishing point," he said. "I would admit the wives and children of those bona fide persons already here. The quicker we close down on immigration to the vanishing point, the better we'll be.

"I desire to insert documents in the record," he said, "and wish the house to see why wives and children of Italians are held back and men allowed to come."

Representative Blanton, democrat, Texas, said that he believed the house would stop immigration for at least five years.

Mississippi Basks In Revived Glory Of Former Days

New Orleans, March 1.—The Mississippi river today assumed in spots an aspect such as it has not known since the 'seventies while the huge river packet Cincinnati, of the Louisville and Cincinnati Packet company, was covering the last stretches of a run from Cincinnati to New Orleans with 300 passengers for the Mardi Gras carnival. While the Cincinnati was steaming the last few of the 1,513 miles, the steamer George Prince, with 350 persons aboard from Natchez, Vicksburg and other nearby points, was leaving Natchez for New Orleans.

The Cincinnati, a new steamer, and said to be the largest that ever plied the Mississippi and Ohio rivers, left Cincinnati February 13 and, stopping at various points of interest en route, was due here early tonight. The steamer, which will be used as a hotel by its passengers while in New Orleans, will leave here March 13 on its return trip.

Butts County Farmers Plant Pasture Lands After Loss in Cold

Jackson, Ga., March 1.—(Special.) Farmers and dairymen of Butts county who suffered the loss of more than 1,200 acres of clovers and cover crops during the severe freeze are now busy planning for spring pasture work. County Agent H. G. Wiley has placed many large orders for pasture grass seed. In a letter to the farmers and dairymen, Mr. Wiley urges that this is the proper time to plant pasture grass seed and says this is doubly important on account of the damage done to winter cover crops.

As a result of interest manifested in dairying here, much permanent pasture work is under way. Carpet grass, dallis grass, lespedeza and white clover are the mixtures recommended.

KU KLUX FORBIDDEN TO MEET IN NEWPORT

Newport, R. I., March 1.—An order by Mayor Sullivan forbidding meetings of the Ku Klux Klan in public places was issued today and the board of aldermen passed a resolution supporting him. The order was the result of disturbances in a hall last night where the police interfered at a meeting said to have been arranged by klan officials.

Industrial Exhibits To Rival "Ideal Home" for Beauty

All is bustle at the "Own Your Home" exposition headquarters as the date for the annual exposition nears. Considerable activity on the part of exhibitors who had delayed making reservations was reported Saturday by officials in charge.

The list of exhibitors now includes leading firms of the city in the various lines of industry and business that will be represented.

While the "Ideal Home" which will be shown at the exposition is generally considered the feature attraction of the show, some of the other attractions will make the event one of a number of feature attractions, rather than just one.

The Portland Cement association will have on display a stucco house. It also will show some of the other uses of Portland cement.

The John R. Pattillo Lumber company will show a playhouse, modeled after a modern house.

One of the largest real estate exhibits will be that of Smith & Rankin. Of equal importance will be the exhibits of the Adair Realty & Trust company, the Turman-Brown company and Benjamin D. Watkins.

The exhibit of the B. Mifflin Hood Brick company will be another that will in all likelihood be accorded a place among the prize displays at the show. This will be a miniature brick house. It was designed by W. G. Fackler, of the B. Mifflin Hood Brick company.

One of the most appealing exhibits of all, according to those in charge of arrangements for the exposition, will be that of the Georgia Railway & Power company.

As attractive as any exhibit to be seen at the exposition will be the display of the Crane company which will occupy a prominent place in the lobby of the auditorium.

The foregoing are only a few of the feature attractions at the exposition. Others equally attractive and valuable will be staged by Moncrief Furnace company, the Frigidaire company, Baker Kelvinator company, the Russell Electric company, V. H. Kriegshbaer & Son, the Haverty Furniture company, the Atlanta Suburban Realty company, C. A. Dahl company, the Atlanta Shope Brick company, the Atlanta Electrical association, and many others.

Lina Cavaliere, Fanny Heldy and Marie Boutznetziff, all opera singers, have formed a syndicate and will found a beauty parlor in Paris.

At the age of 56 years and finding life lonely during the day, Mrs. Anna R. Ewer, Flushing, R. I., secured a position as an art model.

CHEMISTS SEARCH VISCERA OF WOMAN FOR POISON TRACE

Louisville, Ga., March 1.—(Special.)—The body of Mrs. L. D. Clements, which was buried several days ago in the Moxley cemetery, 5 miles south of here, was exhumed Friday afternoon at a late hour under the direction of Coroner A. T. Peeples, of Jefferson county. A post-mortem operation for the purpose of removing the viscera was made this morning by Dr. John R. Lewis, of Louisville, and Dr. Lamar, of Augusta, who took charge of the analysis in search of poison traces. The complete analysis will require several days.

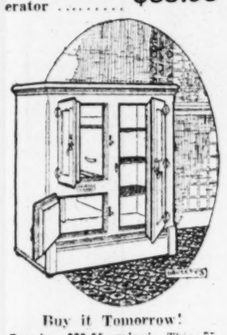

Judge M. C. Barwick has been employed by relatives of the dead woman to push the investigation. Developments after the death of Mrs. Clements, who is said to have left considerable wealth, led to suspicions of drugs having been used.

Officials would give out no names of suspects, but intimated that they were being closely watched.

Setting the standard for genuineness of quality and assured styling in the Dress Section will be found such names as Betty Wales and Korrect. These, and other manufacturers represented here, have wrought for the season creations of real beauty. They have taken the materials destined for greatest popularity—Canton Crepes, Satins, Brocades— and revealed through them many, many variations of the season's mode. They have considered the different types of women and worked out the style of garment best suited for each. They have swept the entire range of shades—including in their scope Lanvin green, Poudre blue, caramel and on through to the staple navys, browns and blacks. Prices range up to $90.00—with two very special groups, including street, afternoon and sport models, in all sizes, 16 to 46, at.....$19.75 and $29.75

For practical purposes where an inexpensive garment is required—here are serviceable and good looking Coats and Capes in wanted plaids and striking stripes at $19.75. Passing on to another interesting group of sport models in the light shades, you'll observe that the price ticket is $25.00. Of if you care to choose from staple as well as light colors, you'll find all included in a splendid showing at $29.75. Turning from these to the coats of finer type—to those that portray the superior in materials and workmanship—you'll find these here, too, in ample array. They show such rich materials as gerona, twill cord, charmeen, brytonia and poiret twill. Some are fur-trimmed. Among them are several shades of tan and gray as well as the staple and popular navy and black. As to prices—you'll find them ranging all the way from.....$50.00 to $135.00

The swagger, boyish cut is the distinguishing mark of the season's suits. And there's an air about them that is simply irresistible! So snappy—so chic! You'll be attracted to them as soon as you see them. Of course there are modifications to give individuality—one will be a strict box effect, another will be a semi-fitting model—one will have a belt, one will not. The O'Rossen type is the one, of course, that is the criterion for the season. These are here in handsome creations, made of hair-line stripes or plain twill cord superiors. Shades are principally sand, cocoa and navy—in addition to be sure to the novelty mixtures that have taken such a high place in Fashion's favor. Quality is the radiant note in each of these types—and prices as low as can be consistent—ranging from .....$25.00 to $65.00

:-: Beautiful Athens Bride-Elect :-:

Miss Hazel Hodgson, lovely daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hodgson, of Athens, whose engagement to Morgan McNeel, Jr., of Marietta, which is announced today, is of widespread social interest.

Miss Anita Thompson Is Wedded to James L. Harper

A marriage of widespread interest to numerous friends was that of Miss Anita Thompson, daughter of Mrs. I. E. Thompson, and James L. Harper, both of Atlanta, which was solemnized Thursday evening, February 14, at 8:30 o'clock, by Rev. L. M. Twiggs, the impressive ring ceremony being used.

The bride was lovely in a model of beige flat crepe. Her stylish spring hat and all accessories were also of the fashionable beige. A corsage bouquet in pastel shades completed her costume.

Mrs. Harper is a pretty young woman of the brunette type, and possesses a charming manner and a pleasing personality.

She received her education in the Atlanta grammar and high schools, where she was a popular student.

Mr. Harper is a popular young man. He finished his education at Piedmont college, where he was a member of the Protropian Debating society. He holds a responsible position in the cashier's office of the Georgia Railway and Power company.

Immediately after the ceremony the couple left the bride's home to go to their own new bungalow in Ormewood Park.

Miss Bramblett Weds Mr. Meintzer.

Of social interest to a wide circle of friends, is the announcement of the marriage of Miss Mary Era Bramblett and John C. Meintzer, which was quietly solemnized Saturday, February 16, at the West End Baptist church. Rev. W. M. Seay, pastor of the church, performed the marriage service in the presence of a few intimate friends.

The beautiful bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Bramblett, of Smyrna, and is a young lady of rare charm. Mr. Meintzer is the only son of Mrs. H. R. Drama League To Present Ruth Draper in Character Sketches

Ruth Draper, rare artist, and highly finished young American, who has been heard in and acclaimed for her original character sketches abroad as well as in this country, will be presented to an Atlanta audience by the Drama league of this city Saturday evening, March 8, at the Atlanta Woman's club auditorium.

Miss Draper's program will consist of several characterizations, each of which is done with a depth and observance of detail which shows that the actress, that she is, amply deserves the generous praise which she received in England. She is conceded to be a rare artist in character delineation.

Her equipment consists usually of a chair, table, interior set and a few other simple "props." She uses scarcely no make-up to aid her in illustrations, yet she puts her "story" over the footlights in a powerful way.

The continued success of Ruth Draper is one of the most remarkable ever known in concert annals. At first her triumphal season in London, followed by equally great triumphs in Paris, but went further and presented her recitals to equally enthusiastic audiences in Madrid.

From the very first Miss Draper has had the support of the greatest dramatic critics of America, and she has also had from the first the generous support of the theatergoing public. From coast to coast, whether in San Francisco, Chicago or Boston, she has played to capacity houses. No longer is she considered a monologuist; she is ranked with the greatest actresses and draws her houses in the same way the regular theatrical production does.

The London Times called Miss Ruth Draper "the most accomplished of living reciters," but Frances Hackett, in "The New Republic," replies to this by saying: "Above all things, a 'reciter' she is not. The static element that marks off recitations is not to be pinned on Miss Draper. She is not static, she is brilliantly dramatic, and just as much engaged in representation as if she were completely in costume in the ordinary framework of the stage. It is Miss Draper's gift to make us live in the scene she summons before our eyes."

Following are some of Miss Draper's original character sketches: "In a Railway Station on the Western Plains," "An English House Party," "On An Embankment at Night," "A Debutante," "A Dalmatian Peasant in the Hall of a Hospital," "A Southern Girl at a Dance," and many other highly interesting sketches.

Mrs. Edgar Neely, president of the Drama League, in commenting upon Miss Draper's appearance in Atlanta says: "Why, undoubtedly she is the greatest artist of the king to ever visit the south and the Drama league is especially fortunate in having the opportunity of presenting to its members and friends, one who has even been termed 'the best actress in the world' by one of New York's dramatic critics."

Mrs. T. T. Stevens Announces Lecture Series by Dr. Loveridge

Mrs. T. T. Stevens, president of the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs, announces that Dr. Blanche Grosbee Loveridge will give a new lecture series in the Ansley roof garden beginning Wednesday, March 5, at 11 o'clock.

"It is conceded," says Mrs. Stevens, "that the four great laws of the unseen world are compensation, attraction, association and suggestion. Further, scientific tests have proved that the operation of these laws is astonishingly accurate in every life and that an understanding of them is essential to all consciously directed progress. With her characteristic simplicity and directness," continues Mrs. Stevens, "Dr. Loveridge, in these lectures, will unfold many illuminating revelations which will be of the utmost importance in facilitating the personal progress of each one of her hearers. Our federation members are pleased to schedule Dr. Loveridge for these discourses, knowing that the keen interest of the women of Atlanta in the subjects offered will be met with perception and accuracy."

Mrs. E. K. Large Describes Health Trail for 2,500 Girls

With 2,500 school girls in Atlanta registered for a health trail that began February 11 to continue eight weeks, Mrs. E. K. Large, council chairman, describes the purpose of the trail and goes back in memory to November, 1922, when the council was first organized. She states that the sole purpose of the trail is to encourage good health habits for girls. The 2,500 registered include Girl Scouts, Camp Fire Girls, Junior Red Cross, and Young Women's Christian association girl reserves. After health examinations were made in the city's junior and senior high school, the girls are now keeping a daily record of the specified health points that they will gain during the eight weeks. At the close of the trail, the council will hold a health carnival for all the girls and to the Scout, the Camp Fire girl, the junior Red Cross girl and the girl reserve who has made the greatest improvement in personal health, habits and posture and the correction of physical defects, each organization will award a prize to its winning girl.

Mrs. Large states that the health examinations made by the organizations supplemented those made by junior and senior schools as the trail requires additional information on a girl's weight, whether she is over or under weight in proportion to her height, her posture and foot defects, chest expansion and general physical defects. The girls meet regularly at their separate [illegible] their leaders keep in close touch with the health strides that they are making.

"The importance of the trail," says Mrs. Large, and its ultimate effect in interesting the teen-age girl in the development of her body along health lines is shown by the results of the health examinations made by the physicians and trained nurses of the 2,500 girls. Of 253 examined, 96 were under weight, 35 over weight, 89 with postural defects, 65 with foot defects, 87 with good chest expansion, 167 with poor chest expansion, 68 with no physical defects and 185 with physical defects. The percentage of the entire number corresponded with that of the 253 examined, according to the records of the examiners.

Every point a girl makes in the health trail will be added to the honors that she will gain in the honor system of her organization.

MRS. E. K. LARGE.

Council Organized.

The history of the council of girls' agencies of Atlanta follows: The various organizations in this city, functioning as agencies for the direction and development of girls' activities, came together in November, 1922, to form a general council of girls' agencies. They began and are still holding monthly meetings at the Young Women's Christian association, Peachtree Arcade, because of the association's central location. Around the council table gathered the leaders of the junior Red Cross, Girl Scouts, Camp Fire Girls, Girls' Friendly society of the Episcopal churches, Young Women's Christian association girl reserves and the Georgia Sunday School association. Other bodies and trail is the second to be promoted.

leaders of girls are being invited to join the council.

The leaders discuss their separate organizations for girls; go into their problems and freely discuss the best ways and means for carrying out the different programs of their agencies.

The occasion of the council is that when the various agencies found they were overlapping in their work with teen-age girls; that they were not cooperating and consequently were duplicating their efforts, they decided to come together in council and harmonize their efforts.

"The movement is one of the most significant that has come to pass in organized effort in a long time," say the leaders. "It spells co-operation in the best sense and gets the attention of all organized bodies of women and those who appreciate the value of organization."

Among the accomplishments of the council are the survey of teen-age girls in Atlanta that they made in the beginning of their organization in order that they might know how many young girls are in Atlanta, what they are doing with their leisure hours after school, hoy many were in too many girls' organizations and how many were in none at all. The survey included school girls and teen age girls in commercial and industrial positions. The council has promoted training course for leaders of groups of girls and the present health trail is the second to be promoted.

Scottish Rite Girl Scouts Receive Tenderfoot Badges

Four Girl Scouts of Troop 28, Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children, were invested with their tenderfoot pins last week by Mrs. Harvey L. Parry, director of Atlanta Girl Scouts.

This troop is composed of all patients in the girls' ward who are over 10 years old. Some of them are in bed in plastic casts, some in wheel chairs and others are able to walk about, but all give a remarkable demonstration of scout spirit in their cheerfulness, obedience, friendliness, loyalty and service. It is an inspiration to hear them sing and repeat the Girl Scout promise and laws with a sincerity no active bodied scout can surpass.

Under the splendid leadership of Miss Esther Geiger, their captain, assisted by Miss Hume and Miss Wright, lieutenants, this troop has become one of the most valuable agencies of the hospital in creating that beautiful atmosphere of cheer and harmony which is apparent to even the most casual visitor.

The scouts who received their tenderfoot pins are Bessie Atkeson, Neila Waters, Gladys Rice and Margaret Williford.

The yare now going forward eagerly with their second class test work and when they are dismissed from the hospital they will transfer membership to Girl Scout troops in their own communities.

Miss Brodnax Inaugurates Camp Fire Publicity Program

An interesting program to enlist interest in camp-fire work in Atlanta has been inaugurated by Miss Sarah Belle Broadnax, assistant secretary to Miss Mary Louis Wilson. Miss Brodnax's wide interest in girls' work bespeaks a splendid future for camp-fire here.

Miss Brodnax, who is assistant and office secretary of Miss Mary Louise Wilson, executive secretary, is handling Cam Fire publicity in Atlanta.

Miss Brodnax graduated with first honor from Washington seminary, and went from there to Agnes Scott college where she received her B. A. degree last May. She took a prominent part in college activities, being treasurer of the Lecture association of Agnes Scott, and was a talented member of the Blackfriar Dramatic club of the college. She played the leading role in the play, "For Distinguished Service," which was presented by the Blackfriars at the Woman's club last February, and took the part of Hermia in the commencement presentation of "Midsummer Night's Dream." After graduation last spring, she traveled for three months through the Canadian Rockies and on the Pacific coast. She has just returned from New York where she spent the winter. While in New York she took courses in English at Columbia university.

Miss Brodnax, who is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel E. Brodnax, of Atlanta, has three interests—Camp Fire, journalism and dramatics. She is at present combining the three in her Camp Fire work. She is guardian of the group of Camp Fire girls sponsored by the Woman's club, and she hopes to make use of her third hobby by interesting the girls in dramatics. She is also an accomplished musician, having studied under Mrs. Armond Carroll.

She is writing a series of articles on Camp Fire which are to appeal particularly to girls from eleven to fifteen years of age, but her articles will contain much general information about Camp Fire, which will interest grown-ups, also. These articles will appear in The Constitution from time to time.

Kirkwood Civic League To Aid Library Growth

Helmer, chairman of public welfare of the fifth district of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, will be the principal speaker on the program which Mrs. A. B. Hargrave, chairman of public welfare for the civic league, is arranging for the women of the twelfth ward on next Tuesday, March 4, at 2:30 o'clock in the school auditorium on Kirkwood road. Preceding Mrs. Helmer's talk there will be a musical program.

Members of the league and other Kirkwood women also contributed many literary books to this library. At this meeting opportunity will be extended anyone wishing to contribute a book or books, or twenty-five cents toward buying books for the school library. Such contributions should be brought Tuesday, and turned over to Miss Nellie Emery, chairman of applied education. The league is anxious to include this in the annual report to the fifth district meeting.

Augusta Show Is Brilliant Event.

Augusta, Ga., March 1.—The Horse Show, which was held on the Hill Friday and Saturday, was the most brilliant event that has ever occurred here from the social standpoint. Beside the men that came from Columbus, Athens, Aiken and other places to enter their mounts, there were many visitors just to enjoy the social side.

The grounds where the show was held was near the Country club and not far from the tourist hotels. Two tiers of rustic boxes had been built, all of which were taken by the opening day of the show. The scene was a brilliant one when the hundreds of women in beautiful afternoon and sport clothes were seated, or strolling around the enclosure. The show was a big success from every standpoint and will doubtless be an annual event hereafter. The social events in connection with the Horse Show were the ball at the Bon Air-Vanderbilt Thursday night, the Horse Show ball Friday night at Partridge Inn and the Saturday night dance at the Country club.

Harold Richardson entertained for the younger visitors Saturday afternoon at the Country club, and Mrs. Charles Parsons, who has a winter home here, kept open house during the two days. There were also many private parties given. Hundreds came from Columbus, Athens, Aiken and all near-by towns.

Kentucky Society Holds Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Kentucky society was held in the banquet hall of the Woman's club on Tuesday with about fifty members present.

These meetings increase in interest. The programs are made from the literary and artistic works of the gifted sons and daughters of Kentucky. This program paid honor to two talented young men of the present day, David Morton, the poet, and Parker Hord, the playwright, whose works enjoy wide recognition, and whose futures hold still greater promise.

Mrs. Gilbert Fraser gave a sketch of David Morton, the Kentucky poet, whose exquisite verse appears in the best magazines of the day and who is recognized in the world of letters as a poet of first quality.

She made mention of Mr. Morton's association with the Poetry society in New York, whose first prizes he has won for the past three years. She read some twenty short poems from his volume "Ships in Harbor," with a beautiful spiritual background. Mr. Morton glorifies the every day experiences of life and the phenomena of Nature, and one catches his vision of the poet's world, the world of spirit.

Parker Hord, the well-known playwright, son of Mrs. Abner Hord, president of the Kentucky society, outlined and read generously from his play, "The Old Rutledge Farm," the scene of which is laid in Kentucky. This is a charming play, combining both humor and pathos.

Mr. Hord has written a number of plays, some of which have appeared on Broadway. He has given most generously of his work to the culture of Atlanta during his residence here.

His "Democracy de Luxe" was chosen two years ago for the opening of the Woman's Club auditorium. The Theater Guild has produced three of his plays, "The Morning After," "The Chance of a Lifetime" and "The End of Summer."

The hostesses of the day were Mrs. Ramsey, Mrs. M. L. Brittain, Mrs. Frank Woodruff and Mrs. Gilbert Fraser, who served tea at the end of the program during the social hour.

Decatur Club Rescinds Intention To Enter Contest

Owing to the unusual volume of detail work encountered in putting a new organization on its feet and in smooth running order, Mrs. Frank B. Pond, president, has rescinded her previous decision to enter the Decatur Women's club in the Atlanta merchants' and manufacturers' $12,000 "wrapper-label-container prize contest," which leaves the ground clear for any other Decatur organization that may desire to enter.

In deference to this new club, recently organized, all of the established church and social organizations of this city generously not only refrained from entering the prize contest, but volunteered their assistance to Mrs. Pond if she would enter the Women's club, which the president at first announced she would do. However, she finds that, in view of conditions attending the perfecting of her organization, it would be impracticable to assume added duties that would be incident to participation in thi enterprise, so the president has withdrawn from the former decision and she wishes to express her thanks to the other societies for having made way for hers, and her appreciation for their kind tenders of assistance.

Of national music week, Mrs. Vaissiere writes:

Watch the Women and See That "The World Do Move"

In the days before women were given the vote, and discussion, now obsolete, as to whether or not they ought to have it, was a live topic in drawing room and legislative hall, over the tea cups and in political caucus, there was one oft reiterated charge against women's taking on political responsibilities, which proved embarrassingly difficult to answer. Indeed, it was the charge most frequently advanced by women themselves who were not eager for political enfranchisement or were actively opposed to it.

That was the implication that women were presumptuous in assuming that they could successfully cope with the ballot and its related duties, when they had through all the ages never mastered those responsibilities which have always been considered intruistically women's responsibilities; namely, the management of the home with its problems of service and economy.

The lack of vision there was in this argument is obliged to be borne in on us now, with only a casual glance over the activities of the club women alone, (and large as their number is, they are not all the women who are doing things).

Even such a glance reveals how women have grown with the responsibilities which they have taken on or had thrust upon them; how the very fact of their coming together in the comparatively new custom—organization—has almost suddenly taught them how to do things which as individuals they could not have done; and how tremendously much they had managed to do while still hampered by isolation (in the sense of lack of organization).

It is not so long ago that every woman had to manage her own problems in her own way, unaided by exchange of ideas or experiences with other women. The only means of exchange was the much maligned intercourse over the backyard fence or the neighborly tea cups.

Especially were women blamed for the so-called "servant problems." But looking back a bit, we have now learned that the ever-growing demands for shorter hours and higher pay, the slackness and neglect of work, were first a part of the general industrial revolution which has had its counter-part in every kind of labor.

And did men handle employment problems any better than the women did? When restlessness manifested itself in mills and on the railroads, and wherever workers in numbers could organize, were men able to anticipate and settle the accompanying inefficiency and confusion any more readily than were women able to cope with it in their smaller, but similar way?

The women, since they have gotten together, are doing very well.

Men "shopping" has been a standing joke (masculine) for ages. Yet two weeks ago no less august an authority than the New York Times, which, wide as the interest it covers, gives little space to the things organized women are doing, stated editorially that American women are conceded to be the shrewdest and thriftiest buyers in the world, men no excepted; and that American women are the best dressed women in the world on the least money."

This was apropos of an event in itself, significant of just what we are talking about: namely, that the women, since coming together in organization, have so impressed their ability on the public consciousness that the National Retail Dry Goods association (and goodness knows there is no more arbitrary body anywhere than an association of dry goods merchants) desires to advise with the women (through the General Federation) as to improved methods for mutual advantage in the planning and selection of dry goods stocks.

Right at home in our own state, it is well known that in certain counties particularly hard hit by the boll weevil, the only actual money coming into these counties before agriculture had begun to adjust itself to the disaster, was the money the farmers' wives and daughters made on their eggs and dairy products. Moreover — and here is the important point—these women had not been able to command a market for their products before they had been taught market standards through the extension work of the state university, and this teaching had been extended to women on the farms only since women in organization had grown strong enough and persistent enough to educate lawmakers and university trustees to the realization of women's right, no less than men's, to an education, that big stepping stone to "liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

Even in the matter of their civic responsibilities, women are behaving with considerable intelligence. They are actually studying civics (and usually they open the classes to such men as may not be satisfied that they know all about government and political economy, etc., intuitively or through the newspapers). Not all the women are studying or even voting, we regret to admit, but the men, with all the years they have had to get up an interest in how their country, state, and city are run, and to get the habit of voting, have many of them not yet developed the aforesaid interest or habit. Therefore we don't expect too much of the women, but we hope a lot.

Asheville, N. C. LOUISE DOOLY.

Pioneer Work of Atlanta Federation Given Publicity

BY MRS. J. LINDSAY JOHNSON
Chairman of the Continuation Committee for the Georgia State Federation.

At this time, when the slogan of the Georgia Federation is "A Juvenile Court in Every County," nothing could be more appropriate than Miss Dooly's tribute to Mrs. Julius Brown and Mrs. M. P. Patillo, prominent clubwomen of their day, and the founders of the Atlanta City federation, acknowledged to be one of the finest organizations in the state and ranking high in the general federation.

The generous service rendered by the Drama league in regard to a memorial for these prominent clubwomen will cause the members of the league, as well as other clubwomen, to be interested in an article recently read at the Rome Woman's club, because it gives the particulars concerning the first work undertaken by the founders of the city federation.

Mrs. Julius Brown and Mrs. M. P. Patillo, assisted by other able members of the newly organized federation, inaugurated a veritable crusade for a juvenile court in Atlanta. How wisely they labored may now be seen by all!

The following article was read at a joint meeting of the Parent-Teacher association and the clubwomen of Rome in the Woman's club room, the occasion being the visit of Mrs. Bruce Carr Jones, state president of the Parent-Teacher association of Georgia.

Juvenile Court History in Georgia.

"An interesting bit of child welfare work of past years in Georgia was that of the Atlanta Federation of Women's clubs which induced the city council of Atlanta to introduce the probation system for juvenile offenders into their penal system.

"This was accomplished in 1903, when, after a campaign of some months, during which the entire subject of probation was investigated by a committee from Atlanta federation, and results of investigation with the experience of other communities which had introduced the system were compiled and submitted to city council.

Mrs. M. P. Patillo, founder of Atlanta federation, was the chairman of this committee and Mrs. John K. Ottley conducted the research work and prepared the brief upon which agreement in behalf of the plan was based.

After some months of effort, city council voted to adopt the system at such time as the mayor should deem suitable.

So a special committee waited upon his honor, Captain Evan Howell, who was at that time mayor, and gained from him the signature which launched the system.

As the charge had been made that the women asking the probation system were childless, women who knew nothing of childish problems, Mrs. Patillo placed upon the special committee to visit the mayor some excellent clubwomen and enthusiastic advocates of the measure, three of whom could claim 15 children between them. One of the three was that splendid citizen, Mrs. William Green Raoul.

The system of probation for juvenile offenders has been continued with success in Atlanta ever since that time, and many features have been added to it.

So much is this the case that not many people today know or remember that the first probation system in the south was secured by the Atlanta Federation of Women's clubs, and that at a time when the plan was so new that the very meaning of it had to be carefully explained to nearly everybody.

The first work ever done by the Atlanta Federation of Clubs was to secure from the grand jury a special election and to carry it for the establishment of a boy's reformatory for white boys of Fulton county.

At a later date this same organization was largely influential in the establishment of a county reformatory for colored boys.

So to all child welfare work Georgia club women can give a cordial hand of fellowship and welcome.

Club Women Should First Be Home Makers, Declares Mrs. Jennings

Mrs. W. S. Jennings, of Jacksonville, Fla., first vice president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, who is a candidate for the office of president of the General Federation. In addition to her national office, Mrs. Jennings holds many prominent positions, both national and state. She is president of the Florida legislative council and of the Duval County Law Enforcement league; is a member of woman's national committee of 100 for law enforcement, and holds other important offices. The election will take place at the biennial in June, 1924, in Los Angeles.

BY HELEN VAN ROY SMITH.

"All good club women should be, first of all, good home-makers," said Mrs. May Mann (W. S.) Jennings, in an informal conversation with the writer recently.

"Home-making," she continued, "is a trinity industry combining all that is greatest in art, science and profession. The most wonderful function of woman is motherhood."

The Florida Federation of Women's Clubs indorsed Mrs. Jennings' candidacy of the presidency of the General Federation, and pledged its membership to do everything possible for her election.

Mrs. Jennings has long been prominent socially and has been active in club life for years. She has been first lady of Florida, as Mr. Jennings was governor of the state from 1901 to 1905. Mrs. Jennings personally made the lace for her inaugural dress, using 1,000 thread. In spite of her varied activities, she is known among her friends as an intensely domestic woman, loving her home, her flowers and her fancy work.

Specialty of Lilies.

Just now she is making a specialty of raising different species of lilies at her home in Jacksonville, while the garden club of her city finds in her staunch friend and supporter.

Though a youthful looking woman, with expressive brown eyes and a fresh, unlined face, Mrs. Jennings proudly admits that she is three times a grandmother. Her son, Bryan Jennings, has one little daughter, four years old, and twins, a boy and a girl, who are two years old. Her son was named after William Jennings Bryan, her husband's distinguished cousin. Mr. Jennings' father and Mr. Bryan's mother were brother and sister.

Mrs. Jennings always has been an ardent advocate of conservatism. "The natural resources of the state should be conserved," she said, "the game and the bird life should be protected by laws, and the forestry board should be supported."

Mrs. Jennings was active in working for suffrage before the passage of the nineteenth amendment, but she does not believe in militancy. "In suffrage or in anything else," she said, "much more can be done by tact and diplomacy."

Asked if she believed in women holding state offices, she replied: "Women should be especially fitted for office before they are put up as candidates. Every woman who is elected to office stands the acid test for all women. Women, you know, are expected to be above the average. They, who have never held office, are expected to be better than the men who have always held office. Therefore, a woman should be especially qualified for the particular office she is elected to."

If you should be elected to the presidency of the General Federation, what great national issue would you strive to aid in attaining," she was asked. "Permanent peace," was her immediate reply.

Duluth Civic Club Holds Georgia Day Celebration

The regular meeting of the Duluth Civic Improvement club was held at the home of Mrs. H. L. Strickland on Thursday afternoon. The program was on Georgia day and, this being a social meeting, very little business was attended to.

A very fine report was read by Mrs. Mack Pittard, librarian. A letter was read asking for a donation for Tullulah Falls school. An article was read asking for a book shower on Washington's birthday for the Duluth library. Mrs. Pittard appointed a committee consisting of Mrs. D. W. Wilson, Mrs. J. E. Christian and Miss Nell Summerour to write a letter of condolence to Mrs. David Medlock, a former club members, on the death of her twin sons.

Miss Nell Summerour suggested that a class mother be appointed for each grade, these mothers to visit the school and in any way assist the teachers that they could. The following mothers were appointed: First grade, Mrs. T. E. McDaniel; second, Mrs. Lige Pittard; third, Mrs. George Little; fourth, Mrs. J. Heard Summerour; fifth, Mrs. Ezra Wright; sixth, Mrs. John Summerour; seventh, Mrs. Hiram Taylor; eighth, Mrs. D. W. Wilson; ninth, Mrs. H. L. Strickland; tenth, Mrs. Mack Pittard; eleventh, Mrs. Charlie Summerour.

After these appointments were read the meeting was turned over to Mrs. Mack Pittard, who had charge of the program.

American was sung in unison. The Collect was read by Mrs. Pittard. A song was rendered by Mrs. Christian, accompanied by Miss Ruby Roberts. Bits of history were read by all present. Mrs. H. H. Miller and Mrs. M. C. Rhodes, of Norcross, were invited guests.

Fitzgerald Club Plants Road Trees.

Fitzgerald Woman's club announces the planting of trees on either side of the Dixie highway leading out of Fitzgerald for a distance of 25 miles. Pecan are used as milestone markers and red and white markers will be placed beside them under the direction of Mrs. H. M. Warren, chairman for the highway committee for the club and for the U. D. C. Mrs. Warren is also a state officer in the Jefferson Davis highway association. Mrs. R. E. Lee has assisted Mrs. Warren in this work.

A crowning event of the year in the club of the Georgia product dinner served as a library benefit in the Woman's club room at the Carnegie library at 1 o'clock February 22. Banquet tables were spread for the 163 guests in attendance and the sum of $123 was realized from the ticket sale. This affair was sponsored by the library committee of the club under the able leadership of Mrs. R. H. McKay. The Carnegie library has been sponsored from the first by the Woman's club and holds a high rank among the libraries of the state. The librarian, Miss Louise Smith, has been honored with the presidency of the Georgia Library association.

A recent red letter day in the club was the musicale and luncheon in which the Ocilla club were participants end guests. Some of the best talent of both clubs was arranged by Mrs. R. G. Sharnonhouse of the music committee of the Fitzgerald club in a delightful program followed by luncheon arranged by Mrs. J. L. Perry and her hospitality committee.

A delightful occasion in January was the McDowell musicale in which Miss Lois Biles a local pianist was presented in recital by Mrs. O. L. Bradshaw of the music committee followed by luncheon for the club members and invited friends. Mrs. J. L. Perry and Mrs. G. E. Ricker were chairmen of arrangements.

The officers of the club are Mrs. R. E. Lee, Mrs J. M. J. Luke, Mrs. B. E. Wilcox, Mrs. J. H. Benton, Mrs. F. R. Justice and Mrs. W. A. Newsome.

The club has 133 members and is said by Mrs. D. C. Ketchum, president of the third district federation, to be the largest club in the district.

Ella F. White Endowment Fund Urged by Mrs. Fitzpatrick

Voluntary contribution of 25 cents per capita to the Ella F. White endowment fund of the Georgia Federation is asked of every club woman in Georgia by Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, chairman of the fund and past president of the federation.

Right of way for this endowment fund is asked of clubs by Mrs Fitzpatrick. The interest from this fund finances the Georgia Federation and Mrs. Fitzpatrick declares that until it is completed it is impossible to proceed with the federation's full program of service.

The sum per individual is so small that it may easily be collected and all that is necessary is for club presidents to give attention to it. The majority of clubs would find the most efficient method would be to vote a sum from the club treasury sufficient to cover 25 cents per capita and then call for voluntary subscriptions to replenish the treasury. A recent report regarding this fund conveyed the information that of almost 500 clubs in Georgia only 103 clubs had made payment to the fund, that out of a membership of approximately 50,000, only 6,400 individuals are yet represented in the per capita assessment. The goal for this fund is $25,000. The amount received to the date of the Rome convention was $5,050.59. The yield on investment of even this small sum was $220.05 last year. Multiply this sum by 5, as would be the case if the endowment sum were complete, and the Gorgia Federation would have secured an income in some degree commensurate with the dignity of the organization.

Clubs which had sent in contributions up to the date of Mrs. Fitzpatrick's last report included in the second district, Albany Woman's club, Boston Twentieth Century club, Donaldsonville P.-T. A., Donaldsonville Orpheus club, Moultrie Worth While club, Sylvester Woman's club, Thomasville Study class, Tifton Twentieth Century club; in the third district, Americus Music club, Montezuma Music Lovers' club, Montezuma Woman's club; fourth district, Chipley Woman's club, Chipley Union Improvement club, Columbus Woman's Reading club, Columbus Students' club, Greenville New Era; sixth district, Williamson Woman's club; seventh district, Calhoun Woman's club, Dalton Lesche club; Eighth district, Madison Outlook club, Penfield Sorosis; tenth district, Augusta Woman's club, Devereaux Woman's club, Hephzibar Woman's club, Milledgeville Woman's club, Norwood Woman's club, Thomson Woman's club, Warrenton Woman's club, The Georgia X's.

Completion of this fund may be accomplished before the next regular convention by an effort small in proportion to the effort expended by any club which sets out to put over any civic undertaking of worth-while character. The fund when completed will operate to the advantage of the entire state.

Club members—there are 50,000 of us, let's make it 50 cents apiece and put it over with one concerted effort! Does Mrs. Fitzpatrick hear from you next?

It is expected that Dr. E. Y. Mullins, president of the Baptist World Alliance and also president of the Southern Baptist convention, will not be here tomorrow for his address at 11 o'clock because of illness, but it is definitely announced that President Mullins will reach Atlanta early in the week and will speak every day at 11 o'clock.

Corps of Speakers.

The five men, each distinguished in his particular field, comprises one of the ablest corps of speakers ever assembled for a Bible conference. Their coming to Atlanta at this time is a matter of such wide interest to the Baptists of the state as to result in an attendance here which will greatly exceed the average attendance of sessions of the Georgia Baptist convention.

Atlanta Baptists have opened their homes to the visitors and through a committee on entertainment homes have been provided for more than one thousand persons. Many will stop at the hotels also. Dr. W. H. Major, pastor of the Capitol Avenue Baptist church is chairman of the committee on entertainment. Working with Dr. Major is Mrs. W. H. Hartmann as chairman of the women's division on entertainment. The majority of the visitors will not reach the city before Monday morning.

Committees are ready to meet the trains and to render every courtesy in helping the visitors find their places of residence while they are here.

Baptists Co-Operate.

Dr. John W. Ham, pastor of the tabernacle, is director of the conference and through his leadership has enlisted the co-operation of the other Baptist churches of the city in making this annual gathering the great mid-winter occasion of the Baptist of Georgia.

Dr. Arch C. Cree, executive secretary of the Georgia Baptist convention, has arranged to have a number of important board meetings during the week in conjunction with the Bible conference. The executive committee of the Georgia Baptist convention, composed of fifty-one leading men of the denomination throughout the state, will be in session Tuesday, holding such sessions as will permit the member to hear the addreses at the conference.

The singing at this conference will be a feature. In the words of Frank L. Stanton, they will use the "Old-time hymns" and they will sing them with a fervor what will be engaging for everyone who comes under the influence of the songs. Special quartets will sing at the various services. Mr. D. L. Spooner will lead the chorus and congregational singing, supported by a chorus of one hundred and twenty-five voices.

Will Serve Meals.

Meals will be served daily at the church at a very nominal rate, making it possible for out-of-town people to spend the day at the building in the event of bad weather and for other desirable reasons.

A cordial invitation is extended to the people of Atlanta and the neighboring communities to hear these really remarkable speakers. The spacious auditorium will care for great audiences and every attention will be given by trained ushers.

$300,000 IN BONDS AT ALBANY BOUGHT BY ATLANTA FIRM

Albany, Ga., March 1.—(Special.) Bonds aggregating $300,000 of the city of Albany and Dougherty county were sold here today at a premium of 3.05, netting the city $6,120 on its issue of $200,000 and the county half as much on its issue of $100,000.

The big accepted was that of the Robinson-Humphrey company, of Atlanta. The Robinson-Humphrey company was represented by Henry W. Grady, Jr., of Atlanta, which topped five others, including those of local banks. The price brought by the issues is considered unusually good, being better, according to bond men here for the sale, than federal land bank bonds are bringing. Purchasers will pay accrued interest from date of bonds to delivery and also cost of engraving.

The county issue and half the city issue will be used in the construction of a $200,000 high school building and the city will spend the other $100,000 for enlargement and extension of drainage sewers.

Helps in Conducting Clean-Up Campaigns.

Mrs. Gordon Chason, of Bainbridge, chairman of the division of civics, department of American citizenship in the Georgia federation of woman's clubs, offers the following suggestion for conducting a "Clean-Up, Paint-Up and Keep-Clean campaign."

Appoint a committee of public spirited citizens to direct the work and help foster the spirit of civic improvement.

Divide the town into districts or zones with a chairman for each; ask the mayor to proclaim a definite time for this clean-up campaign.

Have articles published in local papers telling of the importance of civic cleanliness and beauty.

Ask the ministers to give it publicity from the pulpits.

Distribute dodgers asking the public to cooperate with the committee and offer prizes for the best results.

Use motion picture films showing how ugliness can be changed to beauty by the use of the rake, the hoe, the lawn mower, and paint.

Urge year-round cleanliness and street-scrubbing instead of sweeping.

Improve conditions everywhere.

Clean and beautify public buildings and parks.

Abolish dilapidated buildings and fences that are no longer usefull.

Prohibit the use of unsightly billboards.

Remove signs on trees by the roadside.

Mrs. Jennings Emphasizes Peace and Citizenship

The unanimous sentiment of the thinking womanhood of the United States on two important issues—peace among the nations and women in political office—is reflected by Mrs. W. S. Jennings, of Florida, first vice president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, in an interview quoted elsewhere on this page.

Of the two issues, the matter of permanent peace is so much the more important that the most ardent woman preacher of woman's political dues and duties would rate the other as insignificant in comparison, although vital in itself. For every woman is a woman first, where war is concerned, even she who is a politician afterward; and woman in her very best instinct revolts against war.

When Mrs. Jennings, who is a candidate for the presidency of the General Federation, was asked what great interests of the American people would she give her strongest support, if she were elected, she answered: "Permanent Peace."

In this she announced her fidelity to a federation tradition which has given this great international body of worthwhile women a conspicuous place among those agencies of peace which are pursuing a policy of education with constant agitation, to such good effect that peace is no longer looked upon as an impossible dream, but as an actuality, slowly, but so surely coming nearer, that there is little question now as to the possibility of peace, but only as to method and time.

For two administrations the General Federation has had the leadership in its active advocacy of every practical scheme towards peace of Mrs. Thomas G. Winter, whose own able personality, together with the importance of the body of women she represents, singled her out to be appointed one of the four women on America's representation in the arms conference.

Mrs. Jennings declares her first purpose, if elected, will be to continue the strong propaganda of America's clubwomen in behalf of the same great aim.

Victorious Responsibility.

Concerning women and public offices she said wisely, "woman should be especially fitted for office before they are put up as candidates because every woman who is elected to office must stand the acid test for all women."

"In other words, if John Smith is elected city attorney and makes a failure of it—well, John Smith was a poor choice. Next time we'll have to be sure of a stronger candidate. But if Mary Jones gets the job and falls down on it, the re-election is—"What else could we have expected when we put a woman in office!"

So, when a woman is ambitious politically or her friends are for her, she has to consider, not just as a man may: can she be elected? but will she be a credit, not only to herself, but here sex? for if she fail, the catastrophe does not end with her own misfortune, but carries extra liability in pushing backward the other wise progressive movement of women towards recognition of ability in jobs hitherto preempted by men.

Mrs. Jennings believes—and in this she has with her the harmonious agreement of a large element of intelligent men, as well as most women—that women can be a force for good in civil life.

One big department of the General Federation—citizenship—has, as its reason for being the promotion of the highest type of citizenship among men and women, and the growth of children in it. But it is part of the women's training, as Mrs. Jennings emphasizes, that they must learn sacrifice of their own self interest, if need be, to the general good.

And who knows? May it not be that this very necessity for the more careful choice of the woman candidate because she is a woman prove the thing itself to infuse into political life that cleansing element which the advocates of women's purifying influence on public office claim for it?

Dr. Harris Talks To Study Class.

The meeting of the Thomasville study class Thursday afternoon was one of special interest and was devoted to contemporary review.

Dr. W. M. Harris was the principal speaker, outlining in a brief way the modern world peace movement. He gave the ideas of The Hague conference in 1899 which resulted in The Hague court and permanent court of arbitration. This was followed by the second peace movement in 1907, which was designed to develop The Hague court into a real court with powers and responsibilities commensurate with the world needs. Dr. Harris gave a concise resume of the world court, its advantages and disadvantages; and discussed briefly the Bok peace plan and its relationship to the international court and the league of nations.

An invitation was sent to the class from Mrs. T. C. Morse asking the class to sponsor a lecture by Dr. May, ornithologist, working at Inwood Plantation.

The Blanket Stiff

Blue Ribbon Fiction

By Albert Payson Terhune

The Tanned Tramp, Engaged as an Extra, Puts Some Unexpected Touches of Realism Into the Great Fight Scene

Kent seized the star and swung him high in the air.

BECAUSE the Blanket Stiff was big of shoulder and was shaggy and of much rugged bulk, the assistant director hailed him. Back under one of the parked cars slumbered the Human Punching Bag, chosen for victim in this morning's spectacular Struggle on the Cliff.

The star was fuming. Grue, the director, was all but weeping. The company was clumped sympathetically around two men who, by dint of hartshorn and superorbital nerve pressure and other simple but terrific means of restoration, were seeking to lure life back to the slumberer.

It was no use. The Human Punching Bag had brought it along with him, and had been taking surreptitious swigs at it, in the rear seat of the flivver, as the procession of cars had wound its tortuous way over the lofty miles of the ridge road that links Los Angeles with Bakersfield.

From gossip among the extras it appeared the Human Punching Bag had been wary of purchasable bootleg liquor, and that he had concocted this bottleful himself the night before. Whether it were palatable or not, there could be no argument as to its potency, for a single pint of it had wafted its drinker too far into spirit realms for anything short of hospital treatment to bring him back to life.

Meantime a day's work and a day's multiple pay were likely to be lost. The Occident Film Company was going through one of its spasmodic periods of retrenchment, too. This loss would cause wails and curses from the office. But what was to be done?

The day was lightning bright; even for that region of rarefied air—a day made to order for ideal camera work. Five cars and twenty-one people had traveled a little more than one hundred miles since dawn to reach this location. Among the twenty-one were Moreton Brooke, the star; his woman lead, three other principals, a stunt double; Grue, the director; Rucker, his assistant; two camera men, a property man, and a bunch of ten extras. The extras' pay alone averaged $8 a day each.

Moreover, this location had been registered in earlier scenes of the nearly complete picture—before a spell of rain had forced the delay of the remainder. Three hours or so of fast and all important work today would finish up the final shots needful in this location. Time was pressing all along the line. Tomorrow might be stormy, at this fickle March season. So might the next day. Crystal weather often heralded a wet spell. The work must be done today. But it could not be done without the Human Punching Bag. And the Human Punching Bag was unrevivably drunk. The director fumed. Rucker fumed, dutifully, in sympathy.

Then it was that Rucker saw the Blanket Stiff swinging down the Malecon trail, toward the state road, a furlong or so above. And, smitten by an impulse, he trotted up the hill to meet him.

The man who travels the Sierras or the California valleys alone and on foot, packing his scant luggage and his bedding on his back, is known universally as a Blanket Stiff. Usually he is an itinerant day laborer, wandering from ranch to ranch and from county to county in quest of a temporary job at anywhere from $3 to $3.75 a day. Sometimes he is a strolling member of the I. W. W.—of which guild a California town not long ago rounded up several hundred in the local bullpen and turned the fire hose on them; as evidence of their unpopularity. Occasionally he is a tramp. His strapped blanket proclaims him a casual and impoverished wanderer; and a deeper under the stars.

This particular Blanket Stiff differed not at all in garb and luggage from a thousand of his fellows. But his walk was an easy mile eating swing. His body was stocky and powerful. He gave evidence of thorough acquaintance with every one of his compact muscles.

"Friend," accosted the assistant director, loftily, as he came within speaking distance, "want to pick up a ten spot for a couple of hours' easy work?"

In the midst of his query it occurred to Rucker that this tanned tramp might be a foreigner. Wherefore, he spoke louder and yet more loudly; after the world old habit of addressing a man who does not speak one's language.

The Blanket Stiff came to an easy halt as he surveyed the smug and nattily clad little figure barring his way. Then his careless gaze shifted to the foothills ahead—gray brown canvasses for gigantic smears of orange and of vivid blue which seemed to have been splashed there in three acre strokes by an unbelievable paint brush. From the glow of poppy and lupin and the sword straight Bakersfield road in the valley beyond, he looked amusedly at the garishly attired man in front of him—an inconsequential speck against that awesome background of elephant shouldered Sierras. In so doing, his gaze was caught by the motion picture camp in the cup of rocks to one side of the road.

"A ten spot, hey?" he asked. "To be a movie star? What's the matter? Canning Charlie Chaplin or Bill Hart and looking for a likely guy to take their jobs? My union wages as a movie star are a thousand bucks a day, Little Man. I don't even pack such a piker sum as ten dollars in my change pocket."

To prove it, he turned out the pocket. It was empty; as were all his other pockets.

"Must have left my roll at home, on the new grand piano, this morning," he explained, airily.

The assistant director sought to freeze the hobo's flippant familiarity with an austere glance. Then, remembering his own dire need, he forced a smile of appreciation at the other's poor wit, and went on:

"We're out here on location; finishing up a feature film. The action calls for Mr. Brooke, our star, to be attacked by a ruffian. A good, hot, rough and tumble fight follows; on the rim of a ledge. It ends with Brooke hurling the ruffian over the cliff. Of course," Rucker added, soothingly, "the cliff is only about seven feet high; and there's a mattress at the bottom. The film will show the tumble. The closeups are taken of that ledge. The rest of the fight is on a ledge that looks just like it—only it's over a hundred foot precipice. Then when the fall comes, the audience will think it is over the high cliff. There'll be a closeup of the ruffian lying at the foot of it and a distance shot of a dummy falling all the way down."

"Ain't nature grand!" apostrophized the Blanket Stiff, as Rucker paused. "But you're crumpling all my faith in pictures. D'you mean to say every movie fall over a hundred foot cliff is a fake? Nobody's really killed at all? Next you'll be telling me there's no Santa Claus. Well, I take it you want me to play Brooke's part. Who's to be the ruffian? You?"

Again the assistant director checked his glare of disapproval, and continued his explanation: "We got an experienced stunt man and ex-boxer from an agency to play the ruffian. He is supposed to be the strong arm man of a band that has been persecuting the hero. He hasn't been registered yet in this picture, for he's only in it for one short scene with the master villain who gives him his orders, and then in the fight with the star. He is drunk. Dead drunk. He swallowed a pint of home made hootch that he made last night and—"

"Tck! Tck!" clucked the Blanket Stiff sympathetically. "These guys never seem to remember that rum isn't built in a day. Do I gather you want me to play his part; and that you'll feed me ten dollars for being beat up and slide down a seven foot abyss?"

"Yes," returned the assistant director, adding cautiously: "That is—if you know anything about boxing and about rough and tumble work. I've heard that you Blan—that you men of the road are apt to be pretty good at it. Well? Is it a go? You get ten dollars if you can do the job satisfactorily. A couple of dollars for your trouble, anyway, in case you don't suit."

"I think I'll suit," said the Blanket Stiff, simply. "I've boxed once or twice. And I've done a bit of rough and tumble—not for fun, either."

"Good! Come along," answered the partly relieved Rucker, leading the way toward the group whence the director was even then striding angrily forth to meet his absent slave. "Only, it's fair to warn you that Mr. Brooke is an athlete. He may handle you a little roughly. That'll make you work all the harder, of course, and it'll show up better in the film. Mr. Grue, the director, will give him a hint to go easier with you than he'd go with a professional like that drunk under the car yonder. He—"

Rucker broke off to babble eagerly to his chief the news of his find and of the Blanket Stiff's ability to save the situation. The director said nothing, but gazed with impersonal appraisal at the stalwart man of the road. He eyed him as a buyer might inspect a prize ox.

The Blanket Stiff returned the gaze, his blue eyes playing merrily over the mist brown riding suit and blond curls of the immaculate Grue.

"Funny thing!" he mused, addressing nobody. "I never yet saw a director on horseback, and I never saw one in California without riding clothes. Must be a lot of surplus saddle horses somewhere, if there's a suit for every horse."

Grue did not hear. Indeed, he broke in on the monologue by nodding a grudged approval of his assistant's plan, and then bustled off to appraise the star and make ready for the scene. In the assistant's wake plodded the Blanket Stiff to the impromptu dressing tent where he was to be made up and attired for his ruffianly role.

Twenty minutes later he faced the star, Moreton Brooke (born O'Malley) on the plateau at the edge of a steep and high cliff, where the mountain shoulder had split off abruptly and had left a respectably terrifying chasm below. A quarter mile down the mountain was the seven foot ledge which, by dint of the rearrangement of a bush and a property boulder or two, was a fair counterpart for the higher cliff lip.

"Now then, Brooke," Grue was saying with honeyed deference, "you've been lured up here by the forged note, with Muriel's name on it. You come on, from that path top. You're just comfortably fatigued from the tough climb. You wipe your forehead—your brow—with your handkerchief. You throw aside your coat. As you do that, you're looking around for Muriel. You're surprised she isn't here yet. You shade your eyes and look back over the trail. Then you light a cigaret and sit down on the log to wait for her. Then—"

"We did that half an hour ago," objected the star. "If I've got to have a retake of—"

"No, no!" disclaimed Grue, lovingly. "I'm just going over it, to put you in the mood and to lead up to the scrap. You sit down on the log. Then," with an utter change of manner, as he wheeled about on the waiting Blanket Stiff, "then you stick your head up from behind that big rock. Slow and cautious; but not too slow. No use wasting footage on it any longer than just to give the thrill. Later we'll shoot the scene of how you got up there and hid. You creep forward and you catch up that big stone and start to poise it for a smash on Mr. Brooke's head. His back is to you. See?"

"Yes," said the Blanket Stiff. "I see. But does he? If he's got his back to me, am I s'posed to make some noise to let him know I'm—"

His question was stopped by the stern uplifting of the director's shapely white hand.

"Mr. Brooke draws out his watch to see how late Muriel is," explained Grue. "It is a hunting case watch. An heirloom. In its burnished upper case he sees your reflection. He sees you just as you poise the stone to bring it crashing down on his head. He flings himself forward on the ground and the stone whizzes over him and down into the gorge. By the way, make sure it does whizz above him. It's only paper mache. But it would mean a retake. Then, as you rush forward, he springs up, and the fight begins. We'll go through the first part right now, Brooke; you and—and—what's your name?" he broke off turning to the Blanket Stiff.

"My real name," confided the Blanket Stiff, looking pleasantly down at the drector, "is Montmorency de la Valliere Cholmondeley, but my screen name is John Kent. The 'Kent,'" he explained, obviously to Grue's snarl, "is pronounced as if it was spelled K-e-n-t."

"How is it spelled?" asked Rucker, belatedly taking out his notebook to jot down the temporary employe's name.

"It's spelled K-e-n-t," replied the man. "That's the nice thing about my name. It's spelled just as a whole lot of folks would think it'd be spelled, and just the way it's pronounced. I mean my last name, of course," he expounded. "The first name is John. And the 'h' in that is silent, as in 'rabbit.' But—"

"Say!" demanded Brooke, forestalling Grue's cross interruption. "Have you people hired a punching bag or a clown? We can't wait all day while he—"

"I'm glad you reminded me how valuable my time is," said Kent. "Let's get on."

Grue's lips flew wide to discharge the sacrilegious tramp. Then he recalled his own stark need to get the scenes filmed that day, and he said: "We'll go through the stuff now of your peeking up from behind the boulder and then crawling forward with the stone. After that we can get right on with the fight. Sorry to make you wait, Brooke. Get over behind that rock, Kent. You boys can eat another pound of cigarets," he continued, addressing the two cameramen, who, with golf caps turned hind side before on their tousled heads, were smoking idly at one side of the plateau. "You've got all your lines made, haven't you? Well, it'll be a solid half hour, most likely, before we're ready for you. Watch me, Kent; I'm going to do this scene for you, and I don't want to have to do it more than once. Now!"

He was wrong in his forecast that a half hour would be needed to coach the newcomer in the simple technique of his scene. Kent proved unexpectedly intelligent. More, he had enough brain and little enough self-consciousness to follow directions implicitly, and to throw himself into the spirit of his work. There was a hint of real histrionic skill in the slow apparition of his villainous head from behind the rock; in the sinister advance toward his victim; in the glint that smoldered in his eye as he caught sight of the stone and seized it. Even Grue rewarded his efforts with a grunt of qualified approval.

"Camera!" called the director.

With two instruments grinding at him from different angles at the rate of sixty feet of film to the minute, John Kent went through with his work with the same concentrated intelligence as in the brief rehearsal.

Moreton Brooke dodged earthward and the flung rock hurtled above him. Then the star leaped to his feet and grappled his foe. After which proceedings came to a halt while Grue outlined to the two listening combatants the routine to be followed by them in a big rough and tumble fight.

It was a long and tedious process, this rehearsing of every move, and Grue went through it with the painstaking thoroughness which marked all his major scenes.

Naturally the rehearsed battle was to follow well established lines. The star, from the first, was to have the better of it. Then Brooke's foot was to slip and he was to plunge to earth on the cliff edge, seemingly at the mercy of the hulking brute who sought his death. Kent was to draw a knife and hurl himself on his helpless enemy.

Then, by a wrestling trick, Brooke was to grip him, regain his own foothold, and, in the ensuing wrestle, was to heave the ruffian over the cliff. But at this point the film was to be cut and the actual fall was to occur from the lower and much safer ledge.

WITH the agile prowess of a trained athlete Moreton Brooke rehearsed his part in the fight. Grue was amazed once more at the ease wherewith Kent followed the rather difficult instructions. The director's earlier despair began to give place to something like a grudging hope. Perhaps the big fight scene might not be a frost after all, despite the absence of the professional Human Punching Bag.

At last—a long last—the cameras were called into action. One of them was placed on the opposite cliff, across the narrow gorge. The second was at the cliff lip, ready to be moved to the left when the fight's climax should call for the wrestling heave, just before the cutting off of the scene.

Decks were cleared. The word was given. The two cameras began again to grind their sixty feet per sixty seconds. The nearer cameraman had his cue when to turn slower in order to speed the action. The fight was on.

It started with Kent tearing free from the clinch and trying to draw his knife. Brooke rushed him, driving him back and forcing him to use both hands so briskly in self-defense that the knife could not be brought from its sheath.

Twice Kent clinched, only to be thrown off and assailed again by that

Fanning With the Air Mail Flyers

Some Casual Chatter About the Daily Hazards of Their Occupation by Uncle Sam's Young Adventurers of the Sky

BILL, there are a lot of people who think we fellows have a cinch. Just last night I was out at one of those fussing bees, and over half the delegation didn't even know there was daily air mail service from Cleveland to New York and Chicago. The few who did know it seemed to think we just go out for our health, having an old joy ride, talking with the birds, and, in time, gliding beautifully into New York."

"That is true, Charlie. I told a crowd the other day, who were asking a lot of questions, some of our experiences. Why, you know, some of those dumbbells think our field is still over by Woodhill road, instead of along the Nickel Plate, just south of the Glen L. Martin's shindigs. None of them knew that if they wrote 'Air Mail Service' on an ordinary stamped envelope their letters would go with us. When I told them they had until midnight to get it in the postoffice for the 7:45 ship the next morning they thought I was kiddin'.

"It looks to me as if Uncle Sam would soon have to build us a new hangar. Eight planes fill the thing up, and I hate to tie a ship to those concrete plugs out in the field, for the weather sure raises the deuce with a nice, dry cockpit. I certainly have no love for a sloppy seat on a cold morning."

"Bill, you, on your Chicago run, certainly have a lead pipe cinch. Nothin' but nice fields to land in, anywhere. I don't mind saying that yesterday was a cuckoo of a day for flying."

"Why, what happened. Charlie? Did you have a thrill?"

"No. I had thrills—not just a thrill. I got out to the field at just 7:30, and they wirelessed in from Bellefonte: 'Heavy ground fog, no ceiling, no visibility, but signs of clearing, getting lighter.'

"Well, I figured that if I could make Bellefonte I was half way to New York, and I had a lot of bank mail I knew those interest enters wanted to get through. So I took off at just 7:40. When I got out near Chagrin river I ran into heavy ground fog. I couldn't see the river or anything, so I pulled up over it, and went up to 10,000 feet to get a tail wind.

"I flew by compass for an hour and a half without seeing ground. Luckily the sun was breaking through, and I finally spotted some roads and trees. I knew I was up over the mountains, and I thought I should be over Duboise. There was absolutely no sign of the town. I decided I was too far north, because there isn't anything but trees north, so I headed south a few points and nearly froze my face looking for Clearfield.

"I couldn't find that either, but I spotted the Susquehanna river, and then it was duck soup. You see, the Susquehanna is a darned good land mark, and it was easy to fly straight to Bellefonte, where we get oil, gas and a mail pouch. It is all right to stop there for gas and the rest of the trimmings, but Bellefonte is a pup of a place in bad weather.

"At Bellefonte they wirelessed in from Minneola: 'Heavy ground fog, no ceiling, but clearing and getting lighter.' Well, I decided I might as well keep going, so, after fifteen minutes I took off. I climbed up again to about 10,000 feet and got a pretty good tail wind. I flew by compass again for about an hour and a half, and then began to wish I hadn't started. Nothing but clouds, clouds, clouds. If my calculations were near right I might be either over New York or somewhere in Connecticut or on the edge of the sound.

"I wondered how it would seem to come down 100 miles an hour and use the Woolworth building as a hatrack.

"I couldn't help wondering how it would seem to come down at 100 miles an hour and use the Woolworth building for a hat rack. I flew fifteen minutes longer, then throttled the motor and got darned busy looking over the side. I apparently was making better than 140 miles an hour, so you see I was slipping some.

"Pretty soon it got dark under my left wing, so I straightened her up, and by gosh! Just off the side I saw the water tower of the Garden City golf course, then I slid into Minneola field as neat as a whistle.

"That little phrase they have in their wireless rigamarole of 'but clearing,' is certainly a hell of an expression. 'But clearing' causes more grief to me than any other phrase they send in."

"Well, I guess the Chicago run, even if it is smoky, isn't so bad after all," says Bill.

Ed chimed in; "Well, so long as the government pays more money to the New York flyer than he does to your flyers, I guess they figure Chicago is easy, too. I remember one day last winter, I thought my time was up when I was up in those lovely mountains of Pennsylvania. It began to sleet, and the ice was pretty well plastered all over the wings and the wires were about three times their normal size. I had an ice bunion on the hub of the prop as big as a cabbage, and the first thing I knew the whole ship began to get loggy and it began to settle, and it kept settlin' and the trees looked as big as mountains, and the water had that nice dark icy appearance. There wasn't a flat piece of ground anywhere.

"Well, by the grace of God, and

One Stable Where Any Heiress Is

No Danger of Any Flirtations or Runaway Marriages With Humble Grooms, Hostlers or Riding Teachers at This English School —Like the Pupils, They Are ALL GIRLS

AT LAST fashionable society has a stable where its pretty young heiress daughters can play about with horses all they please without the slightest risk of their eloping with some riding master or groom or humbel stable boy, or of getting their precious little hearts broken when any such romantic plans are discovered in season to spoil them.

The stable where the hearts of impressionable heiresses will be as safe as they would be if they were cast away on a desert island is the one connected with the exclusive riding academy recently opened by Miss M. A. Bullows, at Birmingham, England.

Miss Bullows is one of England's most accomplished and fearless riders. It is said there is nothing a man can do with a horse which she cannot do, whether it is taking dangerous fences and ditches on a cross-country gallop or breaking some fiery, untamed steed to the saddle. Her friends often shudder at the perilous risks she takes, but she has been riding ever since she was old enough to walk and her neck is still whole.

"Now, Miss Bullows is broadcasting her expert knowledge of horsemanship through a riding academy where she and a corps of carefully selected women assistants are teaching other young women the very great deal she knows about riding and driving and the care of horses.

The courses in the academy are for women only. The teaching staff is made up entirely of women. And not only that. All the other employes of the academy and the large stable run in connection with it are women.

There is not a man about the place. Hostlers, grooms, stable "boys," all are girls. Everything about the establishment, from cleaning out the stalls and currying the horses to teaching the daughters of a duke or millionaire to ride is in feminine hands.

Perhaps there never was such a completely manless institution as Miss Bullow's riding academy and stable. In an old ladies' home or a girls' boarding school there is usually at least a man or two to look after the furnace and do the other rough, heavy work. But here even the veterinary surgeon who comes when one of the thoroughbreds is ailing is a woman.

IT IS not because Miss Bullows is so loyal to her sex and thinks it so superior in every respect to the male that she has surrounded herself entirely with women. It is because she thinks a purely feminine establishment is good busniess.

She believes that England's wealthiest families, and later on perhaps those of America and other countries, will prefer to send their daughters to learn riding and driving at a school where there is no possibility of their falling in love with some humble stableman and rushing into the kind of marriage that their proud parents regard as worse than death.

This is good judgment on Miss Bullows' part, as everybody familiar with the society romances of recent years will agree. A surprisingly large number of the most prominent families have acquired for sons-in-law riding masters, grooms, stable boys and mounted policemen to whom their heiress daughters lost their hearts while in the stables where their horses were kept or while taking riding lessons on the park bridle paths.

The ease with which a bridle path can become a bridal path has dashed the hopes of no end of ambitious fathers and mothers who had been counting on at least a millionaire and perhaps a titled nobleman for a daughter's husband.

Even the onrushing automobile has been unable to hurl the horse from the place he has so long held as one of society's favorite playthings. It is thought essential for an heiress to learn to ride and drive just as soon as she is old enough to manage a horse, but there is no part of her education that is viewed by her parents or guardians with more fear and trembling.

Two of the corps of young women whom Miss Bullows has trained to do the rough work about the stable as well as any men.

THEY well know how easy it is for a girl's fondness for horses to grow into a fondness, and finally a mad love, for some man who is intimately associated with those horses. It makes no difference how far beneath her that man may be in education and refinement. The bond of a common interest in horses draws her irresistibly toward him, and even the most aristocratic and delicately reared of girls—one who might have the pick of the world's young men for a husband—is often not proof against the fascination of some man whose chief recommendation is his horsemanship.

Psychology has a very interesting explanation to offer for the tendency of girls of high social position to fall in love with horsemen they meet in the stable or at the riding academy or on the bridle path.

It tells us that when a girl's heart behaves in this way it is a harking back to the early days of civilization when the man who could make a horse do his bidding was the one most worth having for a husband. Before horses became the familiar docile servants of mankind that they are today the man who could tame one to the bit and saddle was one of the greatest heroes.

The heart of womankind thrilled infinitely more to the man on horse back than to the same one or any other one on foot. The very fact that he was a rider, able to fly for long distances over the earth on his horse's back, was proof enough that he possessed the strength and courage which women crave for their happiness and protection.

Of course the modern heiress' chance of being happy and safe with a love mate is not at all limited to her finding one who is an expert horseman. But that instinct for admiring the man on horseback, handed down from far distant ancestors, still remains in her heart, and if she is thrown much with horsemen during her impressionable years it is likely to burst forth in uncontrollable love and lead her into a marriage which her family and friends will think most unfortunate.

This is how science explains such romances as the first one to come into the life of the present Mrs. Frances Burke Roche. Her enthusiasm for horses when she was a young woman led to her acquaintanceship with Aurel Batonyi, a fashionable driving teacher. She fell in love with him and they were married, to the amazement of her society friends and the intense disgust of her multi-millionaire father, the late Frank Work.

TWO such romances have disturbed the peace of the rich and prominent Webb family whose head was a warm friend of the late J. Pierpont Morgan. One of the three daughters married a dashing mounted policeman whom she met while riding in New York's Central Park. Another is the wife of a man formerly employed as groom in a Western stable where her love of horses often took her.

Perfectly Safe

Miss M. A. Bullows, one of England's finest horsewomen and the head of the unique manless riding school, where fashionable society girls are insured against the romances to which a fondness for horses often leads.

To chronicle briefly even a small part of the other similar romances which in recent years have startled society and sometimes broken the hearts of parents would require more space than this whole page affords.

Wise fathers and mothers are fully aware of the romantic dangers that menace their heiress daughters as soon as they take up riding and driving, and they take unusual precautions to avert them.

Sometimes it is thought that they make a bad matter worse by hedging their children in with too many restrictions. The girls become restless and discontented under such conditions and often seem all the more likely to defy the conventions and fling themselves into what their families regard as highly undesirable love matches.

All these things are what Miss Bullows shrewdly had in mind when she decided to dispense entirely with the services of men in her riding academy and stable at Birmingham. She thinks fashionable society on both sides of the Atlantic will look upon her as filling a long-felt want and will hasten to intrust their precious heiresses to her care.

"I can positively say that no pupil of mine will ever fall in love with and marry any employee of my riding school and stable," says Miss Bullows. "Such a romance is impossible, for the very good reason that there is no man here to fall in love with, not a one.

"There are trousers in plenty about the place—in fact, most of us wear them all the time—but it is a charming and capable young woman an inside every pair.

"It is not because I am a man hater that I have barred the sex from my school and stable. I feel that, since women can teach girls to ride just as well as men and also handle the work about the stable as satisfactorily, it is better to dispense with the services of men altogether and thus run no risk of the unfortunate romances that have marred the records of so many riding and driving schools.

"No matter how fine a gentleman a riding master or groom may be, I do not think a girl of wealth and social position should be allowed to fall in love with him. Such a romance is unfortunate not only for the girl but for the man as well.

"But, as we all know from experience, some of them will do it if given the chance. No father or mother of any pupil of mine will ever have cause to blame my school or stable for any matrimonial mistake that a daughter may make."

"Run by Women for Women" is the slogan of Miss Bullows' new institution. For a time she thought she would have to modify it to the extent of admitting that a few men were employed to help out with some of the heavier work in the stables.

To her great delight, however, she has succeeded in finding young women who will do even this—and quite well, Miss Bullows thinks, as any man.

In spite of the many dirty tasks they have to perform, the stable girls and women grooms and hostlers always look daintily neat and attractive in their trim knickerbocker suits.

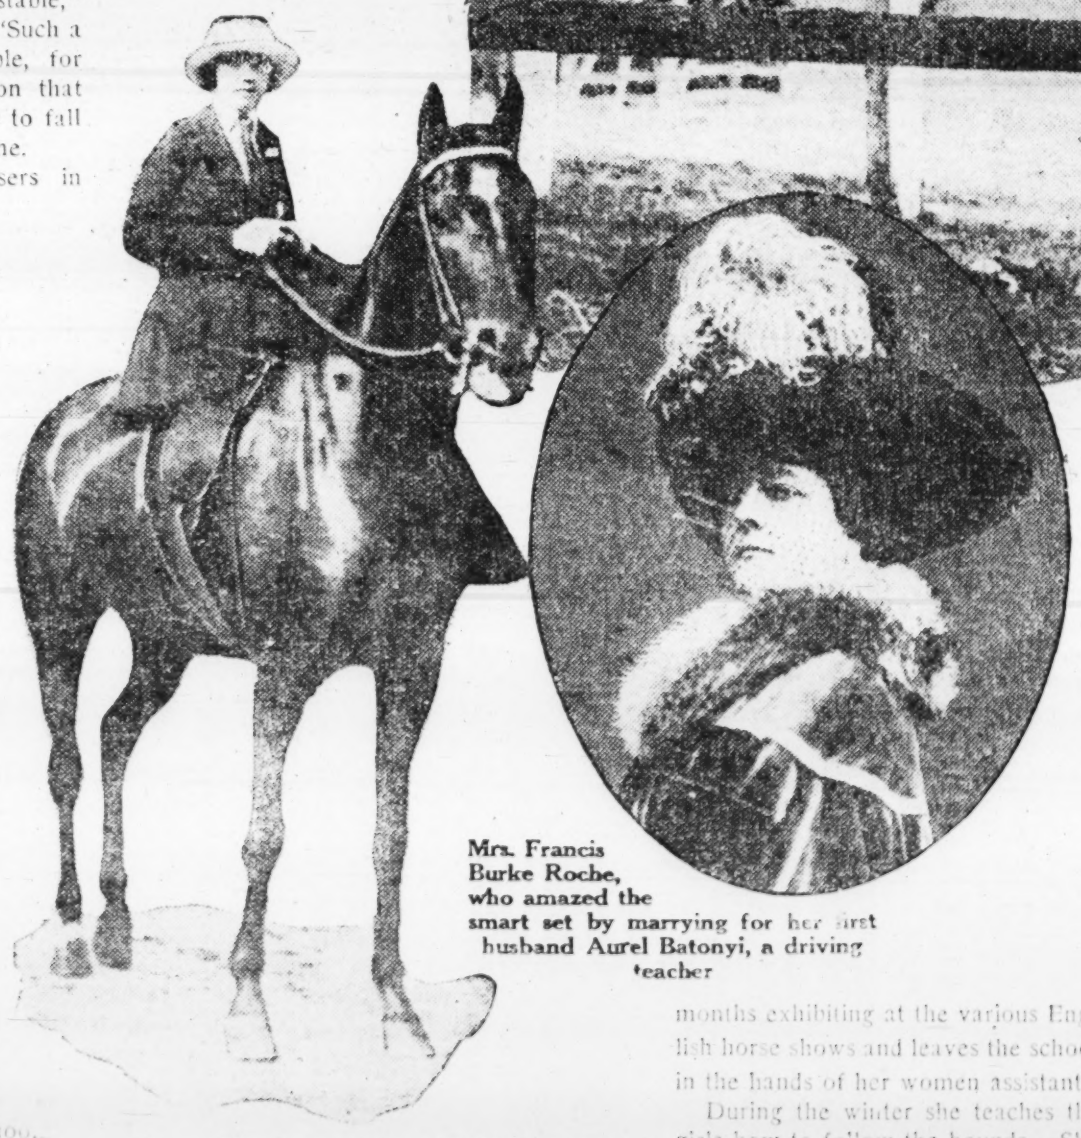

Miss Bullows has her sister as her active partner in running the affairs of the school, and some of the pupils are there to learn how to run other schools of the same kind. The head of the school spends all the summer months exhibiting at the various English horse shows and leaves the school in the hands of her women assistants.

During the winter she teaches the girls how to follow the hounds. She is an expert huntress herself, and her jumping feats recently aroused great interest at the International Horse show at Olympia.

This record in sportsmanship is one that many an expert horseman would be proud of, and it is obvious that there is nothing a young heiress who wishes to ride in the very best form will miss in learning from Miss Bullows. No man could offer better credentials as a teacher and at the same time be able to guarantee such complete satisfaction to worried parents.

Of course after a girl has graduated from a school like Miss Bullows' she will have learned to ride with the most accomplished young sportsmen in her own social circles and then of course she is free to indulge in her age-old complex about men on horseback.

Undoubtedly Miss Bullows' shrewd plan will be followed in this country in the near future, since our aristocracy is by no means behind Great Britain's in the number of young women who have broken the hearts of their wealthy parents by becoming victims of misguided hero-worship.

"A Fool There Was, and He Made

On His Unhappy Way to a Prison Cell Albert E. Guimares Confesses How the Irresistible Lure of a Broadway "Vampire" Brought About His Ruin

Dorothy King, the young and alluring "vampire" of Broadway who was mysteriously murdered last March, but whose victims are feeling the evil effects of her influence on their lives.

A fool there was and he made his prayer
(Even as you and I)
To a rag and a bone and a hank of hair
(We called her the woman who did not care),
But the fool he called her his lady fair
(Even as you and I).

THIS, as almost everybody knows, is the first stanza of "The Vampire," the famous poem which was suggested to Rudyard Kipling by Philip Burne-Jones' famous painting and which has given our modern language the word "vamp"—a word which describes better than any other the characteristic of a certain well known type of woman.

Perhaps there never was a more striking example of the pitiable victims the vampire claims than was presented in a New York court the other day, when Albert E. Guimares confessed, the story of the mad infatuation that had led to his financial ruin and was dooming him to a three years' term in a federal penitentiary.

"On Dorothy King," Guimares told the judge who later sentenced him, "I spent $60,000 in one year.

"It was her continual demands for more and more money that forced me to run my oil company on fraudulent lines and laid me liable to the charge of using the mails to defraud."

Judge Julian W. Mack, of the federal district court, seemed hardly able to believe his ears. He asked the well-dressed but somewhat pallid young man who stood before him to repeat his statement as to the causes that had brought him to the door of a prison cell.

Guimares looked for encouragement to the back of the courtroom where sat the pretty little blond beauty who had remained faithful to him even after he had let himself be drawn into the velvety clutches of the Broadway vampire—even after his arrest on a charge of stock swindling.

From her drawn, tearful face came a wan smile of sympathy and confidence. Guimares cleared his throat and repeated in greater detail the story of how he had squandered money on Dorothy King at the rate of nearly $1,500 a week.

The Broadway gossips who pretend to know more about Guimares' relations with the girl who was found chloroformed in her bed last March than has been revealed in court or will probably ever be revealed in the newspapers think he underestimated the number of dollars she cost him.

Some of them say that $150,000 would be far nearer the truth of what he spent on the siren whom he called his "lady fair" and to whom he remained blindly devoted until she had, as Kipling says, "stripped him to his foolish hide."

Whether the amount Guimares named was too small or too large could, however, have made no difference with the fate he faced in the federal court when he made his remarkable confession. The evidence against him was overwhelming and Judge Mack sentenced him to three years in the federal penitentiary at Atlanta.

The officers led the prisoner away, pausing only long enough to let him say goodby to the little woman who all through the trial had sat in the courtroom, a tearful and tremulous figure. She threw her arms about his neck and pressed her tear-stained cheek against his. And every witness of that affecting scene who was familiar with Kipling's famous poem must have been struck with the remarkable parallel between Guimares' fate and that described by the poet for his vampire's victim:

A fool there was and his goods he spent
(Even as you and I),
Honor and faith and a sure intent
(And it wasn't the least what the lady meant):
But a fool must follow his natural bent
(Even as you and I).

Dorothy King is dead. While she lived she was only one of the countless butterflies that flit so alluringly about New York's Broadway. Yet the evil shadow cast by her alluring wings is not yet dissipated—and may not be for a long time.

Albert Guimares is in prison—the victim, by his own confession, of his infatuation for her.

The home life and business success and social prestige of at least one millionaire are hopelessly marred by the memory of his relations with the dead girl.

OTHER millionaire society men are believed to be living in perpetual dread lest the scarlet book of her life be reopened and the part they played in its pages revealed.

The thieves and murderers who invaded Dorothy King's luxurious little apartment while her eyes were heavy with champagne, applied the deadly chloroform to her nostrils and made off with $15,000 worth of valuables the misguided Guimares and various millionaire admirers had given her—they are still uncaught.

New York's Broadway has staged innumerable counterparts of the dismal picture painted in Kipling's "The Vampire," but never one that paralleled this sermon in verse more closely than what was revealed when Dorothy King was found dead in her bed and the police began the investigation of what they feel sure was murder.

"The progress of virtue is slow," said an old French philosopher, "but vice moves swiftly, claiming its victims often before they are fairly aware of their danger."

And so it was with Dorothy King and the men she dragged down to ruin. Less than five years ago she was apparently the most innocent of school girls—perhaps the last one for whom anybody would have predicted such an end as she met last March.

Her family was not a rich one and as soon as she was through school it was essential that she earn her living, as her brothers had to do. Her good looks won her what looked like a very good job—that of model in a dress-making establishment.

FOR a time Dorothy seemed well content with what was a very good salary for such an inexperienced young woman as she. But soon some one whispered in her ear that there were far easier ways for such an attractive girl to earn not only a living but luxury—and Dorothy yielded to the temptation.

Her mother and other well-wishers were long unaware of her changed mode of life. The fact that she was always well dressed, seemed perfectly happy and was generous in supplying her family with money lulled them into a sense of security concerning her present and future.

In the maze of America's greatest city it was easy for Dorothy King to keep her mode of living concealed from all except those she wanted to know that she was no longer a dressmaker's model. The location in which she took her apartment at the suggestion of her newfound friends helped her in this concealment of the change that had come over her life.

She went to live in what one close observer of New York life has called the city's "borderland." It is a section where rents are high and there is every outward evidence of the most uniform respectability, but where, as a matter of fact, good and bad are mingled so inextricably that it takes much more than a casual glance to distinguish the one from the other.

There Dorothy King lived for a delirious year or two, a next-door neighbor to men and women who would have been inexpressibly shocked to know that she was a former dressmaker's model and was living in spendthrift luxury on the gifts of millionaire admirers and the shameful profits of Guimares' oil company.

The rainbow-tinted bubble burst one day when Dorothy King's colored maid walked into the apartment and found her mistress stretched out lifeless in her bed—dead from chloroform.

And with the bursting of the bubble came revelations that were surprisingly far-reaching in their effects and that may yet bring other friends of the misguided former model into the limelight of publicity and the law.

As soon as it was learned that, besides enjoying the bounty of at least one millionaire society man, the dead girl had been drinking champagne and buying diamonds out of the profits of Guimares' enterprises, the police suspected the latter as a possible figure in the blackmailing plot which they thought might have been under way against one of Dorothy's wealthy friends.

Guimares was taken into custody, but he and his lawyers soon convinced the authorities that he was quite as much an innocent victim of the young vampire's wiles as the millionaire whose ventures into Broadway night life had been so ruthlessly exposed by death.

But there were more serious clouds than this gathering about the head of Albert Guimares.

While the police were still searching vainly for Dorothy King's slayers Guimares and several of his associates were arrested on a charge of using the mails for fraudulent purposes.

The next day there appeared to offer bail for Guimares a pretty and very tearful young woman.

"I am Albert Guimares' wife," she said. "He and I were married last July."

Guimares' Broadway friends were surprised, for during the year when he was under Dorothy King's fatal spell he had often said that if he could not marry her he would marry no one.

But the girl who calls herself Mrs. Guimares seems to have been one who had known him for several years and who had clung to him all through his infatuation for the former dressmaker's model.

At any rate, her entry into this real life version of "The Vampire" gave it a still more poignant touch.

Philip Burne-Jones' famous painting which inspired Kipling's "The Vampire"—the poem that finds such a striking counterpart today in the experiences of a self-confessed victim of Dorothy King.

JUST WHAT IS THE

They Vary With Climes and Races, but no Matter How They Differ They Are an Alluring Feminine Grace

By Robert I. Snajdr

ANKLES!

Like Agag before the prophet Samuel, this is a theme which comes before one delicately. The theme, of course, is feminine ankles, not masculine ones. Males have no ankles. They have only legs which run straight down into their shoes; so, at least, declares one of our leading office feminists. The lady, however, must be near-sighted, indeed, if she has failed to notice the same trait in many of her sisters. But that, perhaps, is too personal. Let it pass.

Ankles are not a common topic of conversation. Men notice them, and let it go at that, masculine mention confining itself to just the perfect nuance of casualness which indicates plenty more may be said. Women adopt the same tactics, as a rule, unless they want to be catty.

Writers seem to ignore the topic entirely, though they have an abundance of comment to make on other parts of the lady's anatomy, her eyes, for instance, her "crowning glory," her throat of alabaster, her lines of cherry red, her feet, and so forth and so on. But the ankles get dismissed with the remark that they are slim and patrician-like, and clad in shimmering silk stockings that set off their shapeliness to the emperor's taste. Just that, and nothing else.

It remained for M. Paul Poiret, famous dress designer of Paris, to come out flat footedly and declare that "the ankles of women are becoming entirely too large to be shown in public." Zing! Just like that! And he added, "The pride of France is at stake."

He might have carried that pride further and extended it to the other countries, but perhaps he was a little bit too polite. Maybe he didn't wish to take any chances with ankles of the feminine nationals with whom he was not acquainted. Maybe he reckoned that he was taking chances enough in maligning the ankles of his own countrywomen. Goodness knows, he certainly was flirting with a sexton's spade when he came out as he did.

Come to think of it, however, M. Poiret's suspicions are not the only ones aroused. As a matter of fact, there has been a growing belief in the United States of America that our own women's ankles have become—to put it bluntly — thicker within the last decade. Does one hear a chorus of masculine ayes, rising in bass crescendo, and completely drowning an indigent chorus of feminine nays? In any event, granting the premise for the sake of the argument, let us proceed.

What's the cause of all this putting on of flesh below the knee? Well, with it, according to scientific observers of both sexes. Not that they are opposed to low heels, these savants; by no means, but they insist that the low heels relax the tautness of the muscles and broaden them to the point where they make the leg seem larger. High heels draw the muscles up more tensley, narrow them, as it were, and thus make it appear as if the ankle is more slender.

TAKE Pavlowa, for instance. When she's up on her toes her ankle seems to be a mere line. Thus a constant wearing of French heels binds the muscles more compactly and produces the slim ankle, while low heels there seem to be several theories. Low-heeled shoes may have a lot to do relax those muscles and produce that sturdy effect so noticeable in women when they are playing tennis, say.

There is another reason. Skirts higher, as has no doubt been observ these last five years or so. Previou an ankle was just "a primrose on river's brim." It was "to him"

RE ABOUT ANKLES?

Ankles that previously had peeped demurely out from beneath lowhung skirts, and which held alluring promise of grace and rhythm were those skirts to be lifted ever so slightly were suddenly revealed as being quite the reverse of ideal when a generous expanse of calf was exhibited.

Not for nothing do we find ankles plentifully besprinkling advertisements wherever we cast eyes on printed page or billboard these days. Whether the ad tells of automobiles, washing machines or raisin pies, you will find slim ankles the piece de resistance, thus indicating a knowledge of psychology on the part of the advertiser.

There is something about a pretty ankle that grips the eye, the woman's as well as the man's. Indeed, a woman will probably notice her sister's ankles much more quickly than will a man, for it is included in the general size-up which every woman bestows on any other woman with whom she comes in contact. First they come in contact, eye to eye. Then their glances sweep over the costume from the hat to the feet; and every detail of that costume is photographed instantly on the feminine mind.

Men wonder how the women do it—and women wonder how a man can remember a certain play in a ball game. The principle is the same.

IT'S a difference of interests, that's all. But at the woman's ankles those interests meet. Both sexes are a unit when it comes to noting grace and fascination.

Ankles have been a magnet for male eyes since the days when Adam delved and Eve spun, though the pages of literature show a paucity of allusions to them. But whether that literature be prose or poetry there was no doubt that the author was convinced of the patrician-like qualities of the owner of a pair of fair ankles. The more slim and graceful they were, the more aristocratic their owner. Cinderella herself possessed a pair the like of which was not in the kingdom. They must have been exquisite, for how else could she have donned the glass slipper? Can you imagine a thick-ankled girl wearing a No. 1 slipper?

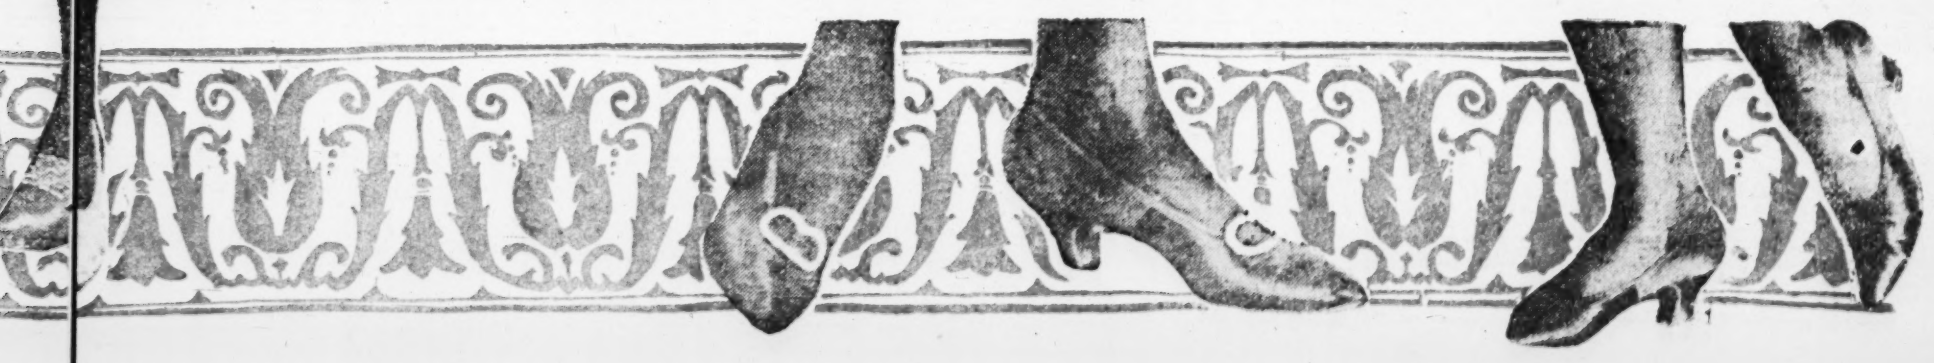

Literary folk have even gone to the extent for declaring they could feel the pulse of a city's beauty by the ankles of its women. M. Poiret's blasting declaration had Paris by the ears the minute the gay French capital read what he had to say. Indeed, an Englishman, reading that observation over his tea and marmalade one morning, decided that he would make a special trip across the channel to learn if it were true. He says:

"So I went across to see. And I had not been in Paris long enough to finish a Bronx cocktail at one of the little tables of the Cafe de la Paix before it was clear enough to me that M. Poiret was mistaken. That much the slim, sheeny ankles of Paris told me. They were not the ankles of a city in which Mrs. Grundy is a resident, or even a temporary guest. Far from it.

"I must record that on this particularly sunny day Paris presented to my cool and detached and analytical gaze such a superb collection of shapely, colorful, daring ankles as no other place on earth—New York, Miami, Hawaii and Los Angeles not excepted—could assemble on one broad pavement."

So much for that. And there are divers individuals ready to take up the cudgels in defense of the women of their own and other countries. It reduces itself, perhaps, to a question of personal inclination. The German, for instance, prefers his women's ankles stout and sturdy. They represent something real to him, something in the nature of stalwart pillars on which the safety and future of the fatherland rests. What does he care if the foreigner asserts that the thickness betrays the true dullness of the German soul, the heaviness of the German pleasures, the Teu-

Why Must the Pretty Duchess Stop

Is It Because the Duke of York's Bride Is To Be England's Queen That She Is Forbidden to Fox Trot in London's Smart Supper Clubs?

The Prince of Wales, looking anything but capable of the painful quarrels he is said to be having with his royal parents.

The Duke of York, all dressed up in one of his most imposing uniforms and on his way to an important state function.

THE pretty little Duchess of York is believed to be finding her life as the bride of a son of royalty not entirely as enjoyable as she may have thought it would be.

Before her marriage she was one of the most unfettered of titled society girls, going where she pleased and choosing her friends in whatever circle she happened to find them. Now she is subject to all the restrictions which court etiquette imposes on the wife of a member of the royal family, and to everybody's surprise and mystification her liberty is being curtailed in a great many ways which were never before thought necessary in the case of any one except the bride of the heir to the throne.

The latest blow to fall on the duchess and one which must make her feel more than ever like a bird in a gilded cage is the royal ban forbidding her to dance in London's supper clubs or any other public places.

No more can she slip into the Embassy or one of the other fashionable clubs after the theater for an hour or two of fox-trotting. From now on the dancing of which she is so fond must be confined to ballrooms where she will be certain to meet only men and women who enjoy royal approval.

No other restriction could be less pleasant than this for the little duchess to endure. Dancing is one of her favorite amusements and one in which she is extraordinarily accomplished. Her fox-trotting has been so much admired and she was seen so frequently at the smart London dance clubs that she was fast becoming known as the dancing duchess.

All this is a thing of the past since King George and Queen Mary made known to their daughter-in-law their decision that she should reserve her indulgence in dancing for private functions and never, never again be seen on the floor of a public ballroom.

Why should this new and irksome restriction be added to all the others which hedge the once lightly tripping feet of the Former Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon?

It cannot be because the Embassy and the other clubs where the Duchess was seen so frequently both before and after her marriage are not perfectly proper places. They are still considered quite good enough for the Prince of Wales and his younger brothers and other members of the royal family.

Neither can it be because the duchess' personal conduct is ever anything but decorous. She is a young woman of high spirits, but they have a very conservative limit over which she never permits them to bubble. In her jazziest moments on the dance floor she has never been known to forget that she is a duchess and the wife of a king's son.

What the gossips think, and will persist in thinking until there comes a flat royal denial, is that the barring of the Duchess of York from the dance clubs is only one more proof of the intention of the Prince of Wales to renounce his succession to the throne and let his younger brother, the Duke of York, inherit the crown.

SUCH an intention as this would give the King and Queen the best of excuses for the action they have taken. Almost everybody will agree that fox trotting in a London dance club is hardly the thing for a young woman who is expected in a few years to assume the dignities and responsibilities of England's queen.

Of course, the political wiseacres insist it is the height of absurdity to think that the Prince of Wales has any idea of renouncing the succession, of his parents of permitting such a thing. But all their arguments cannot upset the theories of the gossips or stop their busily buzzing tongues.

IF the Duchess of York is not being groomed for Queen Mary's place then why should it have been thought necessary to stop the dancing from which she was getting so much perfectly innocent enjoyment? Nobody seems able to answer this question, and so there you are!

The duchess is too loyal an Englishwoman, too devoted a daughter-in-law, to question the wisdom of the royal decision, but it is believed that it must be causing her many painful regrets. Probably she would rather cut down on her daily allowances of tea than be forbidden to dance whenever and wherever she sees fit.

Dancing at strictly private affairs is all very nice in its way, but somehow it lacks the thrill which the smart dance clubs give their guests. The Duchess of York is said to have remarked frequently that she never enjoyed any other fox trot quite as well as those she had at the Embassy.

The gloom the duchess is believed to feel over the fact that she no longer can enjoy this fun is reflected with no pretense at concealment at the Embassy and other clubs whose reputations her visits did so much to enhance. It will be a long time before they have another titled patron who adds to their dance floors anything like the charm and distinction that the former Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon did.

PARTICULARLY desolate over the royal ban on the duchess' dancing is Luige, the presiding genius at the Embassy and the man who spared no pains to make her visits there enjoyable and with nothing to mar either her pleasure or the dignity of her position.

Of course, the visits of such a personage as the Duchess of York to the Embassy were planned some time in advance and elaborate arrangements had to be made for them. A special table in a not too conspicuous location and a special entrance were provided for her and her party.

Any undesirable guests had to be weeded out for that particular evening. To those who were honored by being permitted to remain delicate hints had to be made as to the proper way to behave in the presence of royalty. It was insisted that everybody should be dancing when the members of the royal party entered and that only surreptitious glances should be taken at them.

The Duchess of York was an occasional visitor to the Embassy and other smart supper clubs long before the Duke of York fell in love with her. When her betrothal was announced it was feared that her visits might cease, but to the great delight of the management and patrons of the clubs she continued to come more frequently than ever with her fiance.

The same fears were entertained after her marriage, but they were happily dispelled one night, when Luigi received word that the Duke of York and his bride would drop in at the Embassy after the theater.

This, however, proved the beginning of the end. Before the royal newlyweds had visited the supper clubs manytimes more came the royal ban forbidding the duchess to enjoy herself in this way. Perhaps her graceful and spirited fox trotting will never again be seen by the public, not even by that very limited section of it which can find its way into a smart supper club.

The putting of shackles on the duchess's dancing feet has given new strength to the rumors of the discord that prevails in the royal family over the Prince of Wale's long-continued bachelorhood and his reluctance to ascend the throne when the time comes.

Her Dancing?

The Duchess of York, who will, many believe, get the crown Queen Mary now ...rs to make up for the jazzy fox-trots she is having to miss.

His refusal to fall in love with any of the innumerable charming brides who have been picked out for him is a source of great disappointment to his parents. They regard it as nothing less than a sacred duty for him to marry and provide another heir to the throne.

It has long been whispered that the Prince of Wales and the King, his father, do not get along at all well, and that there is almost as little harmony between the prince and his mother. The Duke of York is the "good boy" of the family, and is now as always the parents' favorite.

REALLY painful quarrels between the prince and his parents are said to have become much more frequent since the marriage of Princess Mary, who served with considerable success as the family peacemaker as long as she remained in the household.

But all this wrangling seems to have no effect on the prince's bachelorhood. He goes his merry way apparently not in the least disturbed at the grief he is causing his parents by remaining single. He has many very good women friends, several already married to other men, but nothing more. The frequent rumors of his being involved in secret romances with stage beauties are believed to have no foundation.

Many think that the only romance of the Prince of Wales' life up to date was the one that seemed on the point of ending in his engagement to marry Grand Duchess Tatiana, the most beautiful of the czar's daughters. They met during one of her visits to England and there was every indication that they were very much in love.

But poor Tatiana met a miserable death in the cellar of a lonely Siberian house where the bolshevists cruelly wiped out the entire Russian royal family in a welter of blood. The prince's intimates think the tragedy left a wound in his heart which has never healed, and that this explains his disinclination for marriage.

The democratic little Duchess and her husband showing themselves to some of their admiring subjects.

Every day the belief is growing that the prince may never marry at all, or, if he does, that his bride will be an American girl. In the latter event he would undoubtedly have to resign his heirship to the throne.

Those who think he is jolly well bored with the official fuss and feathers involved in being Prince of Wales and would be glad to escape the still more onerous duties that would fall on him as king regard it as very significant that he has been heard to refer to his sister-in-law, the Duchess of York, as Queen Elizabeth."

The Prince of Wales and the Duke of York are about as unlike as two brothers possibly could be. Of course, the Duke enjoys nothing like the great popular favor the Prince has; but as he becomes better known he becomes better and better liked.

The duke's marriage has done a great deal to increase his popularity. His wife, very quietly reared by her conservative Scottish family, was comparatively little known before her marriage, but now she is fast becoming one of the public's idols. Her winsome Scottish beauty and democratic ways are winning her friends wherever she goes.

If England cannot have its beloved Prince of Wales for its next king it will be very well satisfied indeed with his brother, the Duke of York. And

An Old-Fashioned

Daniel Had Little Time to Devote to Pauline After His Election---But He Did Not Know This Was a Relief to Pauline

"HAVE no fear on that score, Mr. Daniel," she assured him. She was glad that at that moment a number of delegates called, and his attention would be so engrossed with them, he would not have time to think over his sorrow.

When she saw him engaged in the library with them, she went directly to Pauline's room. She knew she would have to use diplomacy with the girl whom she had made up her mind to influence in Mr. Daniel's favor if it lay within human power.

She found Pauline lying on her divan weeping bitterly.

In a moment her motherly arms were about her, the girl's curly head pillowed on her breast. "What a silly little girl to weep," she began,—I want to assure you dear, Mr. Daniel will be elected senator in this great contest,—and everyone is saying,—even I,—that you deserve all the praise of it;—for your devotion to him in this trying experience. We will be sure to know the result by eleven, tonight; the whole town will gather about the place, and he will have to come out and speak to the people.

"You must be by his side—that will give him ambition to say wonderful things—that will—make history for him—and—you.

"In this hour, love can make or break a man."

She felt the girl's slender form tremble in her clasp, even heard her mutter under her breath "I—can not—I—am—going — back — to my—father!"

"You will not fail him, when the respect and devotion of every one in his home town,—and of course you most of all, means so much to him—.

"Realize, dear Pauline,—in your hands lies his VICTORY, or DOWNFALL!"

The good woman talked for an hour or more, bringing up every telling argument to advance Mr. Daniel's cause which she could think of.

At length Pauline raised her head from her shoulder whispering:—

"My—my—husband and I have had a terrible falling out, Mrs. Bemis; we — tacitly — understood we were never to look upon each other's face again."

"Tut, tut! my dear," laughed Mrs. Bemis, "a mere lover's quarrel. I—want you to promise me that you will take no notice of it. Mr. Daniel is sure to forget it by the time he left the room—he is too wonderful a man to hold anger against the dearest little wife in the world.

"Remember the people will expect to see you with him on the porch; he will be grateful to you for your presence beside him—and oh, my dear, so will I. If you hesitated about standing by his side, the dear fellow would feel so miserable he might be tempted to throw over the senatorship then and there. Believe me it is a close tie, the greatest Oklahoma has ever known, every one says. Stand by Mr. Daniel, dear, wont you?"

Her persuasion wrung from Pauline a reluctant assent.

A LITTLE later Mrs. Bemis hurried to Daniel who was now in the library alone. She stooped over him, brushed the stray locks back from his brow, whispering:—

"Pauline is jubilant; she is sure you are to win; and if her hopes come true, and the cheering crowd gather about the place—shouting to see you, she intends to come out on the balcony hand in hand with you, and thank them for electing her dear husband."

"By gingo is that so!" cried Daniel, leaping from his chair and dancing around the room like a hilarious school-boy, in his exuberant excitement. "You were right, and I was wrong, Mrs. Bemis! Oh, what a fool I was to doubt my darling wife,—God bless her!"

Looking at him, Mrs. Bemis told herself she had done the greatest day's work of her life. Just as had been predicted, Daniel Weslow was elected by a large majority. At midnight all of Oklahoma City, bearing torches and fairly mad with delight, gathered in front of the Weslow home to pay the new senator homage. Daniel heard their cheers to the echo and their calls for him as he stood irresolute in the corridor.

Then he saw Mrs. Bemis and Pauline approaching from the other end.

He never knew how Mrs. Bemis hurried her along, apparently smiling and nodding at happy words Pauline was uttering—while in reality Pauline was saying never a word. It was Mrs. Bemis who flung open the door that led to the porch, pushed her forward and slipped Pauline's nerveless hand in Daniel's.

All he realized was — the great cheering, and that Pauline was standing by his side, her hand clasped in his, proud of his victory; as her father had predicted, the old senator's daughter, was now the younger senator's wife.

Then and there Daniel was silently asking God to make him worthy of not only Pauline's confidence, but the confidence of the people as well; he would do the best that was in him for them.

Reardon stood amidst the throng, listening to their plaudits with darkening brow. From the moment of their appearance on the balcony he had been watching not the senator,—but—his lovely young wife.

He knew that electing Weslow to the senate, meant that he would soon leave the west with his wife,—for—Washington. But that would not take place probably, for some three months later.

"Much can take place in three months," he thought as he threw away his cigar and made his way into the house with a favored few, to offer Weslow his congratulations—and—have a few moments' chat with his wife.

THIS hope was doomed to disappointment, however. He found the senator surrounded by his ardently admiring friends—Pauline was not there. No one would ever know how the faithful old housekeeper was working in Mr. Daniel's interest, to patch up the breach between them—her joy was unspeakable when Pauline promised she would try a little longer to live with them—at least until it was time to go east—where her father, her home, and all her friends were.

Mrs. Bemis felt grateful for this respite; surely, by that time her adored Mr. Daniel would have won his way to Pauline's heart; for, a great love must win love in return,—blotting out any romance of the past.

CHAPTER IX.

"Where apples redden, do not pry,
Lest we lose our Eden, You and I."

* * * * * *

"Yet ah! Why should we know our fate
Since sorrow never comes too late
And happiness too swiftly flies
Thought would destroy their paradise
Where ignorance is bliss, 'tis folly to be wise."

The days that followed, were busy ones for Daniel Weslow. Every one was jubilant over his election. Old people walked weary miles to look upon his face and shake his hand; children brought him flowers; bands came from every part of the state to serenade him; every one wished him well.

He had very little time to devote to Pauline, and was obliged to be away from home much. It was well for his peace of mind that he did not know the relief this was to Pauline.

She tried her best to be honorable, to forget Hughey—but—love such as she had known could not be torn from the heart so easily.

"And then she was aware of—first
That she, not knowing it, had nursed
His memory till it grew a part—
A heart within her very heart."

She had not heard one word from him; she wondered that he could give her up so readily; even a letter filled with bitter, angry reproach from him would have appeased her; but his silence, that was something she could not brook calmly.

She would have been desperately miserable, out there in the far west, had it not been for the letters of her father and Marcelle, and occasionally from Mrs. Holt. Her father's were quite as much for Daniel as for herself, showing in every line how fond he was of him. Marcelle's were bright and newsy. She always ended with: "It was so good of you to insist that I stay here and look after your dear old father. I am doing my best; he has turned to me to provide for him the little comforts that he depended on you for, dear."

Mrs. Holt's letters always wound up wiht: "The French girl is still here; looks as if she had no notion of ever going. She is always at your father's elbow. He used to ask—my—opinion on the household matters; now—he asks her's; I shall be so glad when you come back east; so glad."

By this Pauline gathered—the old housekeeper had taken a most violent dislike to the pretty French girl; she did not attach undue importance to it, however. She was not sufficiently worldly-wise to do so.

She did not see the covert meaning Mrs. Holt meant to convey in her letter—that the wily French girl had set her cap for the old senator. This was the case, however. Marcelle Valleau was a girl without scruple—when she found the man whom she could have loved had slipped from her grasp by wedding another, she dried her tears with grim determination—since she could not marry for love—she would marry for—money.

THE senator filled the latter requirement exactly. He was old and bald-headed, but, he was credited to be worth nearly a million.

Marcelle took Pauline's place in the household, soon making herself quite a necessity to his comfort. It was Marcelle who read his morning paper to him, helped him sort his legal papers, even typed off much of his correspondence when he felt inclined not to go down to the office.

"I do not see how I ever got along without you, child," he often declared gratefully. On one of these occasions Marcelle looked up at him with shining eyes, murmuring softly:

"Am I indeed necessary to your—happiness, Senator? Do you mean it?"

"Yes," he answered, readily enough, not supposing she was leading him into deep water. "I certainly owe you a debt of gratitude."

"I have made you forget—your—loneliness?" she queried.

He nodded, "I should have been very lonely, but for you," he assented.

She crept nearer to him, raising her lovely young face to his aged one, whispering tremulously:—"You were lonely because you have shut love and loving from your yearning heart, which is the mistaken idea of many a widower—they need a companion, one nearer and dearer than all others, —yet—stumble along in life's path —alone. I have been wondering—oh, Senator Rae, I have been wondering why such a noble man as yourself—so capable of making some good woman happy, why you are not contemplating—marrying again."

He looked down into the flushed, beautiful young face in amazement. "I—marry again!" he echoed. "I have never had such a thought; the dear wife whom I have lost was the best woman that ever lived; I would never put any one in her place; her memory is sacred to me."

"But, Senator," murmured the sweetly pleading voice, "can memory —suffice? Are there are not moments when your very soul cries out for the touch of a human hand—for companionship,—aye—and — love? A man is as young as his heart is; your's has not grown old. You have done all that the best husband would do for the dear departed—now—you should pay a little consideration to yourself, and for a mate to love you through your declining years, you are so worthy of it."

Senator Rae looked down at the girl, who had come and knelt down on the hassock at his feet, in utter amazement, and that is putting it mildly.

To add to his bewilderment, he saw great tears coursing down the beautiful cheeks. He never afterward remembered just how it occurred, but, the blood which had been wont to course so calmly through his veins, took a sudden leap, instantly flooding his heart and brain—"Marcelle," he whispered—a veritabe fever burning its way from his heart to his lips, as he whispered hoarsely.

"I am old, now, dear girl, I would never dare think of—love—or expect I could inspire so wonderful a passion in any woman's heart."

"No one could be thrown for any length of time in your presence—without—learning to—care for you," she whispered, hiding her face in both of her hands.

The Senator bent forward, taking her hands in his.

"Am I to understand that I—though God knows it was unwittingly on my—part—have inspired love in your young heart, Marcelle?" he asked, gravely.

SHE nodded, turning away from him! he did not see the curl on her lip which her handkerchief hid.

"How am I to repair what I have caused!" he exclaimed more to himself than to her. "Poor Marcelle! Poor little girl!"

"I am going away from you—out into the cold world," she announced. "After the confession which has been rung from my lips in a moment of madness—I can no longer stay—unless you wanted me——"

"Unless I proposed marriage to you?" he asked breathlessly. Her smile through her tears answered him.

"Are you quite sure of yourself—that you actually love an old man like me—and would be willing to marry me?" he queried, incredulously.

"Yes," she responded promptly, almost before he had finished his sentence, wondering if he was wavering.

Winners Announced in Mystery Contest

The third of the crime mystery series, the "Mystery of the Barred Room" attracted more interest than either of the preceding two. Hundreds of letters were received, with a large number coming very close to the solution, which made it very difficult for the judges to arrive at a decision.

A great number declared Fritz to be the murderer of Herr Schwartz, but said the nail driven into his ear was the direct cause of death. Herr Schwartz, as the correct solution shows, was strangled to death, and the nail then driven into his ear after the two companions of Fritz had been called into the room.

The mystery story printed last Sunday completes the series of four, but so much interest has been shown in the contest that the detective story editor is now in communication with James Young, the author, to see if it is possible for him to prepare other stories. In the event he does the Constitution's magazine will give its readers at least two more of these crime mysteries for them to solve.

The prize winners in the fourth week of the contest will be named in next Sunday's magazine, and the winners of the two grand prizes the following Sunday.

"The Mystery of the Barred Room"

Schwartz Strangled to Death

Betrayal by one of the two companions who accompanied Fritz on the night Schwartz was slain and carried off revealed that he was the murderer. After chloroforming his father and starting to search the house, he had encountered Schwartz and strangled him. Then, frightened at the evidence of his guilt, he recalled the story told him by his father, who had heard it from Schiffren, about the Chinese slayer that killed men by driving a nail into their ear.

Fritz had gone outside the wall, called in the other two men, and they decided that this would be a clever means of throwing the guilt on Schiffren. But once the nail had been driven into Schwartz's ear they became fearful that their plot would not succeed. So they took the body and threw it into the lake. This, of course, cleared both Schiffren and young Schwartz, who then fell heir to the victim's large fortune.

Fritz Choked Schwartz to Death

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 20, 1924.

Detective Story Editor,
Constitution,
Atlanta, Ga.

My idea of the facts in the "Murder of Herr Schwartz" case are as follows:

Fritz choked Schwartz to death and drove the nail in Schwartz's ear to divert suspicion.

He had called at the house with his two companions intending to rob Schwartz, but did not expect to find company present. The presence of Schiffren delayed Fritz, who was obliged to wait in the kitchen until after Schiffren had left the house and Schwartz had retired.

After the house was quiet, Fritz chloroformed his father, entered Schwartz's room, where he was discovered by Schwartz. He strangled Schwartz and then let his companions in through the window. Fritz then remembered the story of the nail murders and drove a nail into Schwartz's head in an effort to throw suspicion on Schiffren. Fritz and the two accomplices then carried the body through the window to the lake and sunk it.

The Blanket Stiff :: :: A Blue Ribbon Short Story

same two fisted rush, from which he was supposed to stagger back, outclassed. Brooke was a nexpert boxer and loved a hot bout. Into this fray he was putting not only spectacular but brilliant scientific prowess. For his boxing knowledge told him he had found an opponent who understood the art quite as well as he himself; an opponent, too, whose ruggedness and speed and ability to assimilate punishment were stimulating.

Bit by bit the two forgot the precise order of the instructions they had received from Grue. They were boxers, and, for the moment, they were not merely staging a fake bout.

The director from just outside the line of camera focus saw what seemed to him a slackening of the mock fervor wherewith the fight had begun. Not being a boxer, he had no idea that the screen, for once, seemed likely to record a real sparring match.

"Hit her up," he ordered. "Make it livelier! This is slower than a Shaker meeting. Fast, snappy work, there! Do something!"

Thus adjured, Moreton Brooke remembered belatedly that he was a screen darling and that thousands of his admirers were to gasp in rapture at this caveman scene.

Blocking a left lead of Kent's, he countered with his right for the face, driving a crashing blow for the Blanket Stiff's jaw. It was the swiftest and heaviest punch thus far struck in this exchange of light and spectacular blows. Kent's face showed surprise at its deadly vehemence. Yet he ducked it with a show of complete ease, and, stepping in, landed two sharp close quarter punches to heart and wind.

In jumping back his heel struck an outjut of rock, and he lost his balance. Reeling backward, he sought in vain to regain his footing. For Brooke, smarting at the hurt and humiliation of the body blows, was after him like an angry cat. Taking him wholly off balance and off guard as well, while Kent was still lurching earthward, he swung his right to the defenseless man's mouth.

The smash sent the unbalanced Kent headlong to the ground, the blood spurting from his mangled lip.

"Good boy!" yelled Grue, delighted with this bit of impromptu. "Now get up, Kent, and rush him. This is the time for you to slip, Brooke, and do your fall. Then whip out your knife, Kent, and go for him, and he'll get the wrestling grip from on the ground and—"

THE bawled instructions trailed away. John Kent had obeyed orders to the extent of getting up and rushing Brooke. But there all resemblance to the carefully arranged program ended.

Furious that such an advantage should have been taken in a friendly hippodrome bout, and with his mouth swollen and smarting, Kent was on his feet almost as soon as he was down. Incidentally, he was tearing into his antagonist with a professionalism and deadly grimness at utter variance with his earlier boxing.

Under this new and irresistable assault Moreton Brooke gave ground, battered and pummeled unmercifully atevery step. Furious that he, the heralded amateur middleweight wonder of the Los Angeles Athletic club should be outboxed and outfought in this whirlwind fashion, Brooke instinctively turned to a trick taught him long before his days of film stardom. Clinching, he brought up his left knee with all his force. It smote Kent well below the waistline. The Blanket Stiff slumped from the clinch at this foul, dizzy and green white. For an instant he swayed as if to fall. Then, with a scream of crazy rage, he leaped on his assailant.

Moreton Brooke was a crack boxer and wrestler and with a powerful man. Yet against that onslaught he was as powerless as a sick child. True, he landed a stiff left and right full in the face of the charging Kent, who did not so much as bother to guard the blows. The two punches did not check for an instant his express train charge.

Disdaining the use of fists, Kent seized the star and swung him high in air. Then, with all his mad force, he dashed him down.

From every throat went up a gobbling cry of crass horror. The two men had unconsciously come to the edge of the cliff in this last ferocious stage of their scrimmage. And instead of smiting the rocky lip of the plateau, Moreton Brooke's hurled body went over the edge.

Over it spun and down out of sight of the dazed victor. Grue and the cameramen and Rucker rushed to the precipice edge and stared frenziedly down over the abyss. The cameraman on the cliff's opposite side had ceased his rhythmic grinding. From the far edge he was pointing and yelling something indistinguishable.

The awesome realization of what he had done dawned all at once on Kent. Staggering forward, he threw himself face down and peered over the verge.

There, not fifteen feet below him, lay Brooke. The falling man's descent had been broken by an outcropping dwarf pine whose roots had found clutching space in a crevice of the cliffside.

Across this frail barrier lay the man's limply inert body. A tap on the head from a projecting rock just above the tree had stunned him.

For a long instant only the Blanket Stiff, of all that group, could think clearly. The others stood gasping, wide eyed, and in panic. After that one all-comprehending glance Kent awoke to action.

Eel-like, he wriggled over the cliff edge, clinging apparently to the precipice side by some mysterious power of suction. But as he went over the verge he had kicked off his loose hiking shoes.

Now, with fingertips and toes, he was clawing for hand and foot hold into the wrinkled face of the cliff. Strength and nimbleness and a natural gift for balance—all were called for in such an exploit. And Kent had them all in abundance.

Flat against the rock, feeling with nails and toes for every inch of the perilous way, he began his descent. Grue and the others stared downward in mute horror. The supine body, athwart the pine sapling, lay as limp as a shot squirrel's.

The first multiple shout of the group on the ledge had brought on a run the others of the company. Most of the extras, as well as one or two of the principals, had strayed along the mountain slope or down the road or the trail, during the tedious wait, after the Human Punching Bag was found to be a wreck. Several of them had not even known a substitute was found. They were willing enough to stray and loaf, during the time that should elapse before Rucker's whistle should recall them to work or to go home.

NOW they came scurrying up the steep climb to the plateau, babbling unanswered questions, and crowding to the verge; looking down on the drama below. One of them—an extra, made up as a mountaineer maid—knelt on the edge and leaned far out. In her eager excitement she seemed oblivious of herself and of the worse than precarious balance of her slender little body. The others were far too engrossed to warn her or even notice her danger.

Down she looked, at the stunned form across the pine stem and at the top of Kent's head as he worked his perpendicular way toward it. Then, through the looser volume of sound about her, the girl's voice called to Kent: "That sapling is beginning to give. Be careful when you get there. Don't put any more weight on it."

At her warning John Kent paused for a second, gripped the rock seam tighter, and looked up. His eyes met those of the girl, whose face appeared over the ledge, six feet above his own. Into both pairs of eyes sprang swift and amazed recognition. Then, reinforcing her words, the girl pointed toward the sapling.

She had been correct in saying it was beginning to give. The earth pocket wherein its seed had lodged was too shallow to afford the young tree more than spindling growth. Nor were the nearby fissures deep or moist enough to permit of strong roots fastening themselves therein.

Thus, the diminutive tree had come to puny growth with not sufficient anchorage. The impact of Moreton Brooke's body had ripped loose the stouter roots. Its continued weight was steadily forcing the sapling to sag. Root after root was snapping or pulling free of the handful of soil. The tree's top was moving to a greater and greater angle from the cliffside. In another few seconds, at such rate, Brooke's body must slide free from the branches and drop the rest of the way to the gorge below.

At the sight Kent abandoned his cautious slowness. With a speed that was more than reckless, he scrambled downward, till his feet found resting place in the six-inch outjut of the seam of rock in which the pine was growing.

Bracing himself with both heels, and pressing his back to the rock, he caught Brooke by the scruff of the neck with one hand, while with the fingers of the other he clutched a smaller fissure of rock five feet above the seam.

As he did so the pine's last root tore loose, and the treelet pitched out into space. It had been touch and go.

Swinging there, between earth and heaven, hugging the senseless man to him with one arm while the full strength of the other was brought into play by the need of holding on to the rock crack, John Kent glanced up again into the eyes of the girl directly above him. She was crying imperiously to those about her:

"Have we a rope in any of the cars?"

"No-no," bleated the property man, "we haven't. The script didn't call for——"

She did not wait to hear the rest. Jumping to her feet, she slipped off her thick woolen skirt. Then, snatching up the spectacular knife which Kent had been supposed to use in the fight scene, she slit the garment thrice, transversely; knotting the ends together with sure swiftness of fingers. Scarcely was the task completed when she reached out for the elaborate sport jacket which Brooke had doffed as he sat down on the log to wait. With incredible quickness she cut this beauteous garment into similar strips; binding it to the impromptu rope she was making, and testing each knot with a nervous jerk.

Looping the end, she leaned over the cliff edge again, and dangled the loop down to Kent. The latter needed no words of instruction. Bracing his back more firmly against the wall behind him, he pushed the upper half of Brooke's inert body farther forward. Skillfully the girl dropped the noose over Brooke's dangling head and over one shoulder.

A half dozen eager hands were relieving her of the other end of the garment rope. With his own chin Kent pushed the loop downward on Brooke, until it went under one of his flaccid arms. Then he shouted:

"Pull!"

THE volunteers obeyed with a will, if awkwardly. The noose tautened around Brooke's neck and armpit. He swung out from the wall, and upward, bumping hard against the rock at every heave. In another moment they were hauling him to safety, above.

Panting, John Kent crouched there in the rock seam, steadying himself and looking upward, studying the cliffside. It had been hard for him to come down. It would be impossible for him to make his way back.

Meantime, on the ledge above, Grue and his assistant and every one else was thronging about the stricken star, rubbing his hands, trying to force whisky down his throat, bawling for water. Some one ran for the first aid kit. But in the excitement nobody had a clear idea what to do with it.

The skirtless girl alone, in that babel of confusion, remembered Kent. The rest seemed to go on a theory that, since he had decended to the fissure, he could climb back from it.

But the girl was pushing in among the first aid bunglers, shoving them angrily aside from the slowly recovering Brooke, and was hauling the rope from about his upper body. As she pulled free the noose she exhorted her companions in general:

"Here you! Bear a hand while I lower this to him! He can't hang on there forever! Quick!"

"I think he's coming around nicely," purred Grue, unheeding, as he arose from an agonized inspection of Brooke's white visage. "See his eyelids are beginning to flutter. Try the flask again. He—"

A tiny virago knocked the flask from his shapely hand and far out over the cliff. A tiny fury confronted him, stamping her foot and shrilling:

"Bear a hand with this rope, I'm telling you, you fat head! Do you want him to fall to death, while you're petting that powder puff ham actor back to his half-witted senses? Help me pull up John Kent!"

"You're discharged!" flared the director ,whose boast was that he had never yet tolerated a word of impertinence from any subordinate. "You're discharged. I shall report you to your agency as insubordinate. Then see if you can get another job within fifty miles of Hollywood. Now—"

But she did not heed his awful edict of banishment. While he was still speaking she whirled on one of the extra men and peremptorily hustled him toward the cliff. At her sharp call another extra and one of the principals joined her. Over the lip of the cliff she lowered the noose, while the three men held its other end. And heaving as one, to her commanding gesture, they brought the exhausted Kent up over the edge.

"Thanks," panted Kent, making shift to get to his feet. "But what detained you all? Do you s'pose it was fun, hanging on by my teeth and eye winkers to that measly wall? You took long enough to—"

He broke off, as his searching eyes located the girl. She had moved to one side of the group and was draping her bloomered nether limbs in a coat one of the extras had laid down. Straight across to her strode Kent.

"I—I thought I was seeing things," said he, his hands both outstretched, when I got that flash of your face above me. What in blue blazes are you doing here, Madge? I thought—"

"Nothing," she answered, laughing and speaking fast to hide her dire embarrassment. "I'm doing nothing at all. I've been fired. I'll be lucky if I don't have to foot it back to L. A. Till about ninety-two seconds ago I was an extra, with the Occident Film company. The circus went blooie, down at Venice. And I got some extra jobs till I could join up with some live outfit. But now I—John Kent!" she interrupted herself, plaintively, "it's no manner of use for you to stand there, holding out your hands to me! I can't take 'em. I need both of mine to hold this coat in place. But I'm just as glad to see you. Where did you drop in from? You weren't with us when we left L. A., were you? I didn't see you."

"No," he said, his keen gaze still fixed on her troubled little face. "I just drifted in. The fight game went blooie, too. At least it did for me. O'Halloran turned crooked and he got caught. And he passed the buck to me. He was the manager and I was only one of his pork and beaners. So they took his word. And the boxing commission canned me. I heard there was a three-ring show opening at Bakersfield next week. So I started to hoof it across from the coast. I thought I might get some sort of job with it, even if I couldn't land the same one I had with Arden & Sears. I was a fool ever to leave a comfy circus job to try my luck in the ring. Just as you told me I was, when we had our spat. But you remember how O'Halloran said he'd be making a champ of me inside a year. It listened grand to me. Better than twiddling my toes from a trapeze. I was on my hike to Bakersfield, just now, when this outfit corralled me for a ten dollar job. I needed the cash. So I—"

"I told you you were discharged!" boomed Grue, bearing down upon them and glowering at Madge. "Clear out! Kent," he went on, more civilly," Mr. Brooke wants to speak to you. He has just come to, and the first thing he did was to ask for you. I didn't want to worry him with questions—it was bad enough for Rucker to blab the whole story to him the moment his eyes were open, without my exciting him any worse—but I suppose he wants to thank you for what you did, or even perhaps to reward you. So—"

"One thing at a time!" put in Kent, peremptorily. "You began your spiel by reminding Madge Bliss that she's fired and by telling her to clear out. I take it you have an option on the Sierras to talk like that. But till you put up your No Trespass signs she'll stay here as long as she wants to. As for my going to that fouler, to be thanked and maybe tipped—well, if he slips me fifteen cents for saving his life, I'll have to tell him I can't change it and that I don't want to be overpaid. Let it go at that. A man who'll 'knee' another man, in a friendly bout—or in a fight, for that matter—doesn't deserve to have his worthless life saved. Tell him so. As for the ten spot you owe me—"

"You're—you're dead right!" interposed a shaky voice from behind Grue.

The director turned around in obsequious anxiety to find a white and sagging figure advancing on Kent. Moreton Brooke had got to his feet. Supported between Rucker and a cameraman, he was coming close to his recent foe and more recent rescuer. Grue broke into a torrent of remonstrance with the star for exerting himself so rashly. Impatiently Brooke waved him aside and addressed Kent again.

"You're right," he said again, his voice feeble and wabbly. "I didn't deserve to be saved. I fouled you. I lost my head and I lost my temper with it. It was a mucker trick. And on top of it you saved my life. I—Lord, man, there's nothing I can say! If you don't know how I feel about it I can't make you know."

"HOLD on!" interrupted Kent, taking the hand so waveringly and appealingly held out to him. "Half that apology can be scrapped. If it was I who helped you up the side of the cliff, it was I who slung you down it. The last part of what I did only just squares the first part. So that brings us back to the foul. Let's forget that. You didn't do it like a man that's used to doing such things. I guess it was your first, and I guess it'll be your last. So the slate's clean. Shall we call it a day?"

"What do you mean?"

"I mean I'm off for Bakersfield to look for a job. If you think you owe anything to anyone, get this riding pants boss of yours to unfire Madge Bliss here. It was she who made the rope that yanked you up. If it hadn't been for her we'd still be down there—or maybe a hundred feet lower than we were. How about it?"

For a full quarter minute Moreton Brooke stared at Kent. Then his glance shifted to the girl. Last of all, he turned his dumb gaze on the fidgeting director. The spoiled picture star had been going through more genuine emotions in the lats ten minutes than before in the last ten years. some of the rust clean from his soul.

"Grue," he said presently, "Miss Bliss stays on. She gets a regular position. On salary. Is that understood?"

"Why, of course, if you wish it!" prattled Grue. "Perhaps I spoke hastily. I—"

"Perhaps you did," drily assented Brooke. "But the next time you speak hastily to her the Occident will either get a new chief director or a new star. By the way," he added to Kent, "if that Bakersfield job can be sidetracked, Grue can use you to big advantage when we retake the fight scene. And, next time, I'll fight fair. My next picture calls for a fight, too. Will you stay on for a while?"

John Kent glanced sidewise at Madge Bliss. The girl met his eyes with the oddly direct look he remembered so well—the look he had never been able to get out of his mind. And in her eyes he read a tinge of appeal.

"You're on," he replied tersely. "We'll stay. It'll be a real joy to work for such a nice chap as Grue here. If I can keep from sending him to a hospital long enough to get real chummy with him. Yep—we'll stay. The two of us."

And that had momentarily scraped good luck. I just got through the pass when it quit raining and the sun came out. One more minute in that sleet and the newspapers would have had an article. My propeller looked as if it had been through a dose of small pox as it was pitted all over. Five hundred pounds of mail in a sleet storm is not my idea of a good time. I guess it is a darned good thing that there is only one man instead of two to a ship."

"WELL," said Bill, "when they start the thirty-hour service next spring from New York to Frisco I'll bet some of them pray for the moon instead of the sun. We can average four and one-half hours easy enough from Cleveland to New York, and the night stuff will be up to the Denver and Cheyenne bunch, so why worry? I understand they are going to follow the same rule out there of tearing down the motors after every hundred hours of service, the same as we do here. They are going to use the Liberty motor, as usual, and I'll bet they'll run them wide open, which will make the props 1,700 R. P. M., instead of 1,450, which is a nice cruising sped. One hundred miles an hour is fast enough for anybody, but they will be so darned anxious to get through that they will let them go."

"Well," remarked Ed, "they are going to fix up a stove for me in my cockpit tomorrow, so guess I'll turn in, for I want to watch the mechanic when he makes the connection around the exhaust pipe. Good night, fellows. You two can gas awhile, for its still early. Charlie, I'll see you in New York Friday. Tell Whit my ship has close to 100,000 miles on her and I'll need a new one next spring. Don't tell him though, if he has a grouch. so long."

"Ed, is a pretty nice sort of a chap, Bill," observed Charlie, "and he is a darned good bad weather pilot. He will get through when it is almost impossible and he has only cracked up one ship in three years. Did you see Al when he was in town yesterday?"

NO, I didn't. What's he doing?"

"Well, Al passed his Waterloo the other day. As I understand, he's got a peach of a wife and so has decided to tackle this night flying business in order to get the extra cash.

"Al was saying that a couple of weeks ago some of them were out at the hangar one night and there was a fierce thunder storm. Al decided it might be a good plan to find out just what it was like to fly through tonic lack of spontanity. Hans likes Gretrhen's generous ankles. The rest of the world can go hang.

Then there is London. The ankles of London, so a connoisseur has declared, can tell a discriminating stranger almost all about London's life that is worth knowing. They are shapely, without being exquisite, candid without being daring, careful without indicating too much of the mid-Victorian, and appealing rather to the soul of the artist than to the eye of a student of life's more material pleasures.

THEY are, in short, the cool, well-bred ankle of a wood nymph are, unmistakably—not British—but English, connoting the pink cheeks of their owner, her tossing flaxen hair, and her frank blue eyes. Yes, they do seem to tell all there is to know about the English. Indeed, one American, at least, has gone on record as saying that after a morning stroll up Piccadilly into Bond street, where the cream of London's ankles gather before lunch, he can tell exactly what sort of show he will see at the Gaiety that night.

There are other capitals in Europe where ankles serve as indices of the national character. Take the ravishing blonds and brunets of Warsaw, Bukharest and Vienna, for example. There you have the gay dash and daring of the west mingling with the subtle sensuousness of the near east and the orient. They are—the best ones—shining examples of noble birth and sense appeal. They breathe an atmosphere of delightful mystery, of colorful coquetry, a delicious blending of come-hitherness and reserve that is quite intoxicating to the occidental mind. And their very presence among the multitude of legs that run down into the owners' shoes places them on tempting pedestals.

Then there are the neat ankles of Rome, the homely ankles of Moscow, the woolen ankles of Copenhagen and Stockholm, the bare ankles of Constantinople, the imperious, grandee ankles of Madrid, the authoritative ankles of the Swiss, the jaunty ankles of the Irish, the thin ankles of Rio Janeiro and Buenos Aires, thin but not unbeautiful, and the downright pretty ankles of the better class of Mexican girls. All tell their own story of national characteristics and consciousness, as plainly as if they were writing those individualisms down with every step they took.

Charles Dickens recognized this trait of tell-tale ankles long ago, though he told it in shoes—and he put these words in the mouth of the famous Sam Weller, in Pickwick Papers:

"'Who is there in the house?' said Sam, in whose mind the inmates were always represented by that which came under his immediate superintendence. 'There's a wooden leg in number six; there's a pair of Hessians in thirteen; there's two pair of halves in the commercial; there's these here pointed tops in the snuggery inside the bar; and five more tops in the coffee room.'

"'Nothing more?' said the little man.

"'Stop a bit,' replied Sam, suddenly recollecting himself. 'Yes; there's a pair of Wellingtons a good deal worn, and a pair o' lady's shoes in number five.'

"'What sort of shoes?' harshly inquired Wardle, who, together with Mr. Pickwick, had been lost in bewilderment at the singular catalog of visitors.

"'Country make,' replied Sam.

"'Any maker's name?'

"'Brown,'

"'Where of?'

"'Muggleton.'

"'It is them!' exclaimed Wardle. By heaven, we've found them.'"

IN other words, as fine a bit of detective work as was ever conceived by the brain of a Sherlock Holmes; and that the ankle contributed its part toward effecting a liaison between the brain of the wearer and the brain of the deductor is scarcely to be doubted.

That ankles have played a part in history, and a momentous one, is something that simply defies denial. The reasons for it, of course, go rather deeply, and perhaps vaguely, into the spheres of sex, but Freud, Ellis, Krafft--Ebing, Westermarck, Sorel and others have been quoted at such length that a rehash of their findings is not only inapropos but unnecessary, especially in these days of precocious youngsters.

Ankles have also played a significant part in the world of literature. Indeed, literature is vastly indebted to the ankle, if we but realized it. There was a time, almost within the memory of the oldest inhabitant, when such things as women's legs were virtually unknown. There was something extremely risque about the use of the world "legs," something that brought a blush to the face of man and woman alike.

And so the poor writers have been trying desperately to dodge the word legs. The presence of the ankle has saved them scores—yes, hundreds—of times. As for "feet." Where would Herrick, Suckling, Carew or any of these old boys have been were it not for the saving grace of that little word "feet?" Feet, indeed, patter through ten thousand verses, while ankles or legs would certainly have exposed the unregenerate to the full sway of their disordered imaginations. Thus, the feet and the ankle have proved a tremendous boon to writers whose bounds were fixed by the hem of an old fashioned skirt.

A man in those days, and down to within comparatively recent times, could break a leg with perfect eclat or complacency, so far as the public was concerned, but a woman could only break a limb; and since this term, though decent, was decidedly indefinite, she was permitted, after a time, to break a "lower limb."

THEN, almost before we knew it, the bicycle was upon us, and in ignorant world became blazingly aware of the fact that women had ankles—and also legs. The Authors' League of America should erect a monument to the bicycle. It shamed the false shame. It emasculated all false lures. Yes, the bicycle and the flapper—God bless her—have robbed ingenious prurience of its last bulwark. One can't tease a concealment that has ceased to conceal; and though burlesque managers may steam and rave, fashion goes on its serene way undisturbed.

The ankle complex has undergone an extraordinary jolt. A new psychology must be developed, and the calamity howlers who declaimed to high heaven of the hazards to man's moral fiber and to woman's health have learned to their consternation and dismay that the only hazard concerned is that of inclement weather—and even this has been relegated to the background in the light of what hygiene experts have revealed to us. The chap with high shoes and thick woolen socks has pneumonia more often than the girl with chiffon hose.

The Englishman who sea-sicked his way across the channel for the express purpose of giving the lie to M. Poiret's decree told a nice one himself. It may have been white, it may have been mauve, it may have been a point of personal inclination again. But he didn't tell the truth. He tells us that Paris wins because the ankles of her women are the distillation of all the most alluring ankles of all the best cities in the world.

Mebbe so. Mebbe so. But I can recall a warm, sunny day in Brittany, back in August, 1918, when a tolerably sizeable cross-section of the American Expeditionary Forces voted silently but none the less eloquently in favor of their own country women.

THERE, at Camp Coetquidan, where the Yankee artillerymen were learning how to play an awesome diapason on the famous French 75's for the special discomfiture of the Germans, a certain American military kitchen abutted on the grounds of a hospital. It was the hour of high need. A bevy of French lasses, escorted by some French and American officers, were walking about the grounds in the rear of the building, and although the Yanks were giving the ladies the once over their attentions were not diverted one whit from the food that was being ladled into their mess kits.

Suddenly there dashed out of the door of the hospital a vision in white, with a tennis racket in her hand. She tripped toward the court and began lobbing the ball back and forth over the net. And every soldier boy within eyesight was drawn irresistibly toward the wire fence which enclosed the grounds, his observant orbs glued to the figure in white with the flashing ankles. The French girls, seated on the side lines with crossed knees—and skirts were short in those days—drew him not. The American girl did.

It was a tribute of which that girl would have been mighty proud had she been conscious of it, and the demure miss probably was. Long she played, and long they remained there, those countrymen of hers, and when she finally entered the building, panting and radiant, those eyes still followed her, to the utter exclusion of the French girls on the bench. And remember, she was wearing low heels, at that!

"Well," sighed one youth, summing it all up as he stood at the fence with his dripping mess kit hanging within a couple of inches of the ground, "I hope the next time them ankles plays tennis I won't be out somewheres on detail, that's all."

That from a buck private just about summarizes what the average man in the street on this side of the water thinks of the American girl's ankles and in the long run what Main street thinks about a certain proposition is apt to be a fair index of the brain trend in America—or elsewhere. And who is there, in this land of the free, and home of the brave who would be so disloyal as to prefer the lithe-limbed symmetry of a feminine foreigner to that of our own fair damsels from both urban and suburban settlements?

There is no denying it. The Englishman's description is base calumny—though not too base, inasmuch as we ought to give the gentleman credit for sticking up in behalf of his own neighbors.

FIVE minutes on Broadway, New York, or ten on Broadway, Los Angeles, however, would convince him that the average American girl grows the trimmest, shapeliest, neatest ankle in the world. It's a lustrous, peppy, rymthic, springy, jazzy, free, sunny ankle, carrying with it the God-given curve of a rainbow, the divine grace of an antelope, the upward swing of a lark on a June morning, the lightness and dazzling beauty of a humming bird. And when it is clad in a shimmery silk stocking there is nothing on this or any other planet which even begins to compare with it.

Take it anywhere, in Churchill's at noon, or in the Ritz at night, on the beach at Santa Monica during the summer, at the Ambassador hotel, Los Angeles, any evening; on State street, Chicago, at noon on Euclid avenue, Cleveland, at the rush hour; in New Orleans, at Miami, in the crisp freshness of an autumn day in Seattle or at Newport, or Bar Harbor. It makes no difference. The American girl's ankles have anything else on earth faded. Bare arms, dimpled knees, throats of ivory, gleaming shoulders, what are they in comparison to an attractive ankle? Echo answers—nothing. What a charming bet the poets of modern days are overlooking!

Right or wrong, our country, thunders Stephen Decatur. Right or wrong, our American women's ankles, we asseverate. There will be no war fought over that dictum. And of one thing we may always be sure: Ankles always give the American public a leg to stand on.

I'll bet the government will have to raise the ante if they get very many fellows to go into that night business and make anywhere near 95 per cent daily records like we do. There is one thing about this flying business, and that is, we aren't bothered to death with life insurance salesmen.

It would be interesting to know what the little duchess thinks of the royal future which many believe to be in store for her. Does she regard the glory of wearing a royal crown adequate compensation for the fun she is missing through being forbidden to fox trot in public?

THE COUNTRY MOUSE AND HIS CITY COUSIN

By JANE CORBY

Dear, dear, dear! Here is a story about mice, and what do you think happened to it? The mice went and nibbled all the words! There's only one way to read it—get your pencil and finish out each letter. (It's lucky they just nibbled and didn't swallow the letters whole.)

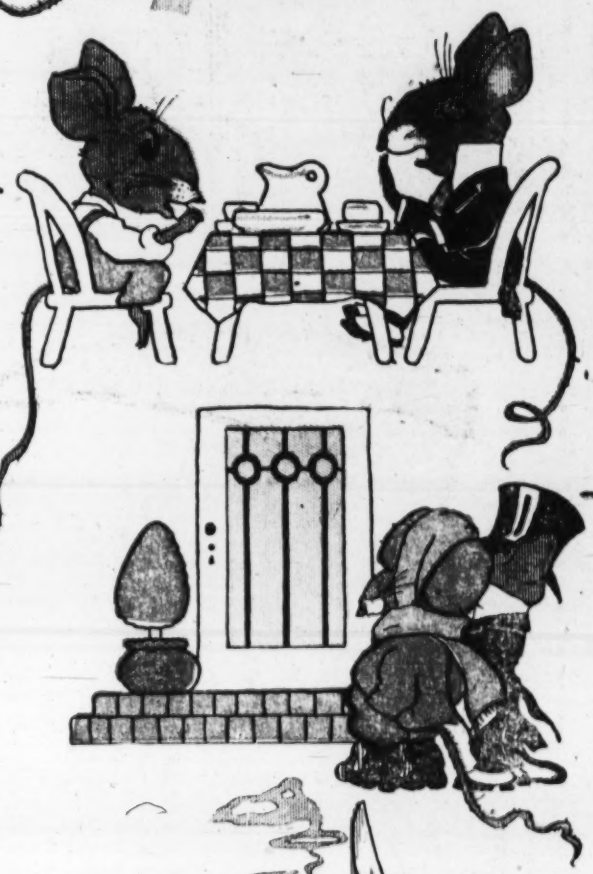

In his little country house,
Sat a little country mouse.
Pasil he wrote a letter
(There are some words in it letter).
This is what the letter said:
"City cousin dear," it read,
"Won't you come and visit me?
You can't think how glad I'll be!
I live here, at Haystraw House."
Then he signed it: "Farmer Mouse."

In due time the city mouse
Came and knocked at Haystraw House.
How his cousin tried to please!
Gave him barley, nuts and peas.
Put the town mouse nibbling lightly,
Tried to hide a yawn politely.
"Good cheer, cousin," then said he.
"What a dull life this must be!
You must come to town some day,
Where our lives are bright and gay."

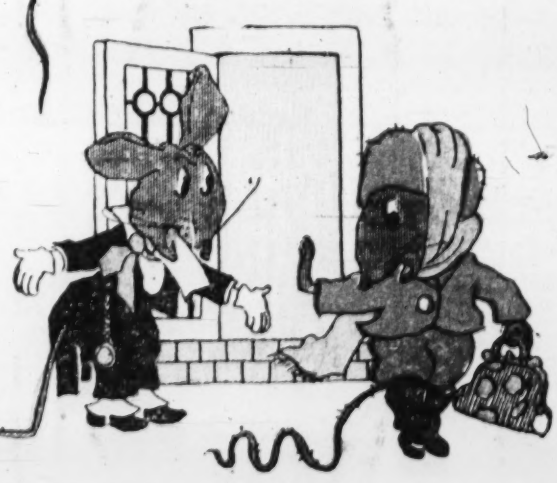

Farmer Mouse was much impressed,
And he set off with his guest
For the town where all was gay,
Which they reached later on that day.
In a manner, tall and stately,
Both mice were delighted greatly
When they saw a table spread
With rich food, on which they fed
But alas! The door flew wide,
Noisy people rushed inside.

Trembling, hiding out of sight,
Both mice shook in every fright.
Chattered little country mouse:
"It was quiet at my house!"
Said his cousin, "Don't shake so!
Pretty soon these folks will go."
And they did. The mice once more
Started nibbling, as before.
"Bow, wow! Meeeeow!" in fright again.
Back the two mice scurried then.

After the dogs had gone away,
Farmer Mouse cried quite gay:
"If you like this life, friend dear,
You, of course, can stay right here,
But I certainly prefer
Living where it's quieter!
Give me plain food—nuts and peas
Eaten where I'm at my ease!
Peace for mine! Which we can't buy.
Now I'm going home—good-by!"

THE FOUR-FACED TRICKSTER

If you wouldn't trust a two-faced man around the corner, what would you do about a four-faced one? The man in the picture here follows a stage career. Noted for the variety of his comedian makeup, he is always wildly applauded as he changes, in the twinkling of an eye, from one disguise to another. Grease paint and eyebrow stick have little to do with it. He merely folds his face up into the desired effect.

By folding on the dotted line, you may be allowed to see him in different ones of the characters he plays so admirably, the minister, the storekeeper, the crook and the unkind father-in-law.

The key picture (left) will show you how to fold in different ways to get the effects. Fold forward on A and back on B. Turn under the lower part on C. Now fold C forward and back on D, so lines A and D meet. Leaving D in this position, fold under the top picture on B. In all, you'll find you have four different disguises.

A BOY HOLDS UP A MIDNIGHT FLYER

The train from New York steamed into the station on Track No. 5 at the same time the Midnight Flyer came thundering down Track 5. It was eleven o'clock and the station was almost deserted. Since there were no passengers to get on either train and none alighted to the village platform, the brakeman swung his lantern sleepily, and Billy, with his tray of coffee and sandwiches, sighed. "Might of known I wouldn't get a chance of makin' any money this time o' night," he grumbled.

He carried his tray back to the lunchroom, and trudged back to the platform again to start wearily home. Outside the door, Billy stopped with an exclamation. "Well look at that!" He saw a small boy in a bathrobe and bedroom slippers coming down the platform toward him. The lad walked a bit uncertainly, as though not knowing quite where he was going. "Must be a stranger from somewhere," murmured Billy. "Kids don't go around here in their night clothes." The child was coming toward Billy.

"Do anything for you, boy?" he asked. The small lad made no answer. He almost stumbled over Billy, pusaing straight ahead, his eyes fixed. "Walk'n' in his sleep!" The solution hit Billy with force. "Boy! Hey, wake up!"

By the time Billy had succeeded in shaking the lad to his senses, the conductor of the Midnight Special, the brakeman, even the ticket agent had come running to his side.

"Where's my father?" asked the sleep walker, rubbing his eyes, frightened to find himself on a cold platform in the company of strange people.

"Which train did you get off?" asked the agent.

"I—I don't know," was the dazed reply.

"But where are you going?" pressed the conductor.

"With father, somewhere. I can't remember!" The boy began to cry. At that moment the whistle from the train nearest blew the warning signal of starting.

"Engineer! Stop! Stop!" screamed Billy. The man leaned from the cab window. Billy gaspingly explained that a boy had wandered off one of the trains in his sleep and nobody knew on which he belonged.

"Say," frowned the engineer, "I can't hold this train. I've got the chief of the road on this trip and the old grouch'd raise a row if I'd get off schedule."

"But we've got to get the passengers up on the sleeper and find out whose kid he is," pleaded Billy.

When Billy got back to the group the lad was sobbing too hard to answer the storm of questions that was coming from them all. Two minutes went by and the engineer of the flyer whistled another warning. Another argument on Billy's part brought the promise he'd wait five more. Meanwhile the crowd increased and the boy's wails grew worse.

It was at this point that the porter of the special coach bearing the director of the road came to the door. A very distinguished, but very angry gentleman followed. "Will somebody explain the cause of this needless delay," he thundered. "Only a whistling post, and you wait—" Suddenly he stopped.

"Father!" came a cry from the howling, shivering boy, as he broke from the crowd.

Five minutes later when the flyer had disappeared into the distance, Billy opened the palm into which the man had forced a bill. "Ten spotter off the director of the railroad! Gimminee! Lucky I stayed to sell sandwiches tonight!"

BASKETBALL Pass or THE Ball

"Get rid of the ball" is good advice, because basketball is a team work game. The ball invites trouble and many games are lost because the ball is held too long before passing. The short, fast passes are one of the most interesting features of the game.

Holding the ball will be eliminated of the quick pass game is played but it means that the players will have to "keep loose" from a guard and keep moving. Pass the ball in such a way that your player can reach it before the opponent—if possible, so your man is between the ball and his opponent.

Pass it also in a way that the player may make his next move quickly, without awkwardness. Do not pass it in such a way that time must be lost in catching, or so that the one who receives it must slow up get it.

The two-handled snappy pass is better than the one-handed pass. The diagram shows the two-handed pass being used. It insures accuracy and can be made more quickly since the ball can be receive dand passed on with the same motion. It is passed with a wrist and elbow movement from the chest.

A one-handed pass may be made longer and with greater force, but the quick pass is far more in use. If there is a real good chance to use this long pass do not hesitate to do so. Do not let the long pass become a habit, however.

PRECIOUS STONES
Delicately-Colored Topaz

A few centuries ago in Europe the designing of beautiful jewelry was considered the work of an artist, thus the talented goldsmith was respected and given honors along with the famous portrait and landscape painters of the day. The work of his hands was usually intricate and delicate, employing the use of many metals and a great variety of precious stones in combination.

Kings, queens and courtiers vied in collecting the costly products of the master of "Joaillerie," as the person was called who mounted diamonds and precious stones. Great pride was displayed in the selection of jewelry, some of the ladies having as many changes of jewels as they had gowns. It was the boast of one old wag that he never wore the same jewels twice.

The picture shows a topaz necklace of the style popular in France. The topaz is a stone that must be handled with care, for if it is left in the light too long its rich transparent color fades away. Usually the stone is yellow or a delicate brown, but it has been found also in greenish white, blue, pale pink and dull red. The most desirable topaz is pink, but since this hue is rarely found, darker stones are now faded to the desired shade by a process called "pinking." It is done by wrapping the jewel in German tinder and burning it, or by baking it in hot plaster of Paris.

Next in importance are the brilliant blue and green topazes. The yellow and brown are the most common types, and are generally "pinked" for combination with expensive stones, but they are worth very little in their natural color. The white topaz is found in unusual, rare sizes in Brazil, the chief topaz-mining country in the world. Siberia, Asia Minor, Peru and a number of other countries have topaz resources in small quantities.

The topaz is usually cut with a rounded surface and flat back, and is rarely engraved upon, being a very hard stone. Its beauty is best displayed when it is cut in the form of a brilliant. When cut in this style, it is often mistaken for a diamond.

It used to be claimed that if the topaz is worn in a gold ring on the left hand, the power of nightmares, magic, witchcraft can be overthrown. This jewel brings luck to all whose birthday falls in November.

WHERE NOTHING SEEMS QUEER

Knight of the Bawth

See him galloping by, this Snoppyquop Paul Revere. He goes so fast that the capitol at Washington and the Woolworth building in New York get into the same picture. This is Sir Donkey Otey, the horse man-about-town, and the prize traveler of Snoppyquopville. He is always going, and so has to bathe en route. Luckily he goes so fast that it is always Saturday Knight. His faithful steed is a hardy animule, who never has had a flat tire. As Sid Donkey Otey adjusts the temperature of his bawth, so his pet Donkey sends out hot or cold steam through her nostrils. There is a window in his chest to he can see if his plumbing is getting rusty. A pane in the stomach wouldn't be so good. Good Knight!
